The genealogye of Ruben and Gad and of the halfe trybe of Manasse.

The sonnes of Ruben the eldest sonne of Israell: for he was the eldest. *But bycause he despy- led hys fathers bedde, hys byrthyghte was geuen vnto the sonnes of Joseph the sonne of Israell, and so he is not reke- ned vnto the birthright. for vnto Ju- da whyche was myghtye amonge hys brethzen was geuen the pyncipalitie before hym. But the byrthyghte was geuen Joseph. The sonnes then of Ru- ben the eldest sonne of Israel, were He- noch, Phalu, Hezron and Carimi.

The sonnes of Joel: Samaiyah, and a hys sonne Gog, and hys sonne Se- mei, and hys sone Micah, and the sonne of hym was Reaiyah, and hys sonne was Baal, and Beerah was his sonne. Whyche Beerah Thiglath Phalne- ser, kynge of Assiria carped awaye: for he was a greete worde amonge the Rubenites. But vnto hys bre- thzen in theyre kynredes, when they are rekened after theyre byrthe, were Jeiel and zachariah the chete heades.

And Baal the sonne of Azan the sonne of Sema the sone of Joel, dwelt in Aroet and so forthe vnto Rebo and Baalmaon. And eastwarde he inhabi- ted vntyll the wyldernesse, euen vpon the ryuer Euphrates, for their catell was muche in the lande of Gilead.

And in the dayes of Saul they war- red with the Hagarites whyche were ouerthrowen by their hādes. And they dwelt in their tentes thowwe oute all the eastte lande of Gilead.

And the chyl- dren of Gad dwelte ou- uer agaynst them in the lande of Ba- san, euen vnto Selcah. And in Basan Joell was the chiefe and Saphan the nexte, then Jaanai and Saphat. And their brethzen in y auncient hous- holdes of them, were Michaell, Moso- lam, Seba, Jozai, Joacan, zia, Eber and Senen. And the Philistynes folowed Saul and hys sonnes, and slue Jehonathan, Abinadab, and Melchilua, y sonnes of Saul. And the battell wente soore agaynst Saul, in so much that the moters met hym, and he was wounded of the moters. Then sayde Saul to hys wepon bearer * drawe thy swerde, & thrust me thorow therwith, that these vncircumcised come not & do me shame. And hys wepon bearer woulde not, but feared exceedinglye. wherupon Saul caught a swerde and fell vpon it. And when hys harnes bearer sawe y Saull was dead, he fell on a swerde also and dyed.

And thus Saul and hys thre sonnes, and all hys house dyed together. And whe al y men of Israel that dwelt in the valeyes, saw howe they fled, and that Saul and hys sonnes were dead, they forlake their cytyes, and ranne awaye, and the Philistynes came and dwelte in them.

And on the morowe when y Philistines came (to strypp the dead bodyes) they founde Saul & hys sonnes ouerthrowen in mounte Gelboe. And when they had strypte hym, they tooke hys heade and hys harnesse, & sente them into the lande of the Philistines roude aboute to shew tidinges vnto their gods, and to the people. And they put hys harnes in y houses of their goddes. But hys skul they hanged in y house of Dagō.

And when al they of Jabes in Gilead hearde all that the Philistines had done to Saul, all y men of warre arose and fet awaye the bodye of Saul, and the bodies of his sonnes and brought them them to Jabes, and buried the bones of them under an ocke in Jabes, and fasted seven dayes.

And so Saul dyed for his trespase, that he trespassed agaynst the Lorde, in that he kept not the worde of the Lord, and in that he asked counsell of a woman that wrought with a spyte, and asked not of the Lord. And therefore the Lord killed him, and turned the kyngdome vnto David the sonne of Isai.

The xi. Chapter.

After the death of Saul is David anoynted in Hebron. The Jebusites rebell agaynst David, from which he taketh the Towre of Sion. His men are nombred.

when Saul was kynge, thou leddest Israel out and in. And the Lord thy god sayde vnto thee: thou shalt fede my people Israel, and thou shalt be captayne ouer my people Israel. And when all the elders of Israel were come, to the kyng to Hebron, David made a coue-naunt with them there befoze the Lord.
And they anoynted David kynge ouer Israel, * accordynge to the woorde of the Lord by the hand of Samuel.

B And David and all Israel went to Jerusalem, whiche is Jebus: for there dwelt the Jebusytes, the inhabitants of the lande. And the inhabitants of Jebus sayde to David: thou comest not here.
Nevertheless David wanne the castel of Sion, whiche is called the cytie of David. Then sayde David: * whosoever smyte þe Jebusytes fyrst, shal be the principall capitayne, and a Lorde.
And Joab the sonne of Zeruiah went fyrst vp, and was therfore the chiefe capitayne. And because David dwelt in the castel Sion, therefore it was called the cytie of David. And he buylt the cy-tie on euery syde, euen fro Hilo rounde aboute. But Joab repared the rest of the cytie. And David prospered, and waxed great, and the Lorde of hostes was with him.

C * These are the principall men of power that claued to David in his kingdome with all Israel, to make him king vpon Israel, accordynge to the worde of the Lorde. And this is the numbre of the myghtye men whiche David had:

Jesabeam the sonne of Bachamoni the cheite of. xxx. he lifte vp his speare a-gaynst thre hundred and slue them at one tyme.

And after him Eleazar the sonne of Dodo an Ahothite whiche was one of the thre myghtyest. He was with Da-uid at Pasdamin where the Philistines were gathered to battell. And there was there a parcell of grounde full of barleye, and the people fled for feare of the Philistines. And they (thre afore sayde) stepte forth into the myddes of the furlonge, and saued it fro burnyng, and slue the Philistines. And the Lord gaue a great victorie.

And the thre of the. xxx. chiefe went to a rocke to David, at the caue Odolam.
And the hoste of the Philistines had pyched in the valey of Raphaim. And David was in an holde. And there was a garison of the Philistines at Bethlehem that same tyme. And David longed, & sayde: * Oh, that one wolde geue me of the water of the well of Bethlehem that is in the gate, for to dryncke. And the thre brake thorow the hoste of the Philistines, and drew of the water of the well of Bethlehem that was in the gate, & toke it & brought it to David.
Nevertheless David wold not dryncke of it, but offered it to the Lord, & sayde: God forbyd it me, that I shoulde do this thinge, that I shoulde dryncke the bloude of these me, that haue put their lyues in Jeopardye, for with the Jeo-pardye of their lyues they brought it, & therefore he wolde not dryncke it. This doyd the thre myghtyest.

And the other went to him with a waster, & plucked the speare out of the Egyptians hande, & slue him with his speare. Suche thynges dyd Banaiah the sonne of Jehoiada, & had a name with the thre myghtyest, & was the gloryouslest of thyrtye: but attayned not vnto the fyrste thre. And David made hym of his secret councell.

And these were the best men of warre of the hoste: Alahel þ brother of Joab, and Elhanan the sonne of Dodo out of Bethlehem. Samoth the Harozite, Helez the Phalonite: Ita the sonne of Akas the Chekuite, Abieser the Anathothite: Sobacai þ Hefathite, Alai þ Mohite: Maharai the Bethophathite: and Heled the sonne of Baanah the Bethophathite: Ittai the sonne of Rebai of Gibeon that pertayneth to the chyldren of Benjamin: Banaiah the Phathathite: Haurai of þ ryuer of Gaas, and Abiel the Arbathite: Azmoth the Baharumite, Elahaba the Saalbonite. The sonnes of Bassem the Gezonite, Jonathan the sonne of Sagah, an Haratite: Ahiam the sonne of Sacar the Haratite, Eliphal the sonne of Uz. Hephher the Betharathite, Ahiah the Phalonite: Hezro the Carmelite, and Naati the sonne of Azbai: Joel the brother of Nathan: Abihahar the sonne of Gari: Zelec an Ammonite, and Naharai a Berothite, the bearet of the Harnele of Joab the sonne of Zarulah: Ita the Jethrite: and Gatab a Jethrite. Uriah the Hethite, Zabad the sonne of Sholai: Adina the sonne of Siza a Rubenite, and an heed among the Rubenites and. xxx. aboute hym: Hanan the sonne of Maacah, and Josaphat a Mathanite: Ozeah an Aitharothite: Sama and Jaiel the sonnes of Hothan an Acoerite: Jedai the sonne of Zaimri, and Joha his brother Thozites: Eliel a Mahumite. And Jeribai and Josoiab the sonnes of Elnaein, and Jethimah a Moabite. Eliel and Obed, and Jaiel of Masobalah.

The. xii. Chapter.

What they were that went wyth David when he fledde from Saul.

And these folowys came to David to Ziklah, * whyle he yet kept him selfe close, for feare of Saul the sonne of Cis: & they were of the me that locoured þ battell, wepended w bowes, & coulde handle stones, arowes & bowe as well with the lefte hand as with the ryght, & were of Sauls brethre, euē of the trybe of Benjamin. The cheffest were Ahiezzer & Joas, the sonnes of Samaah a Gibeonite, & Jaziel and Phalite, the sonnes of Azmoth. Baracah & Jehu of Anathoth. And Isamatah a Gilbeonite as myghtye as any of thyrtye, & more myghtye to. And Jeremiah, Jehaziel, Johana & Josabad of Gedar. Eleusai, Jerimoth, Baaliah, Samariah, and Saphatiah: Paraphites Elcanah, Jesiah, Azrael, Jozer, Joseboā of Karezhim. And Joelah and Zabadiā, þ sonnes of Jerohaim of Gedor.

And of the Gadites there separated the selues vnto David whē he kept an holde in the wilderness, me of myghte, & men apte for warre and coulde handle shylde and speare, whose faces were lyke the faces of Lyons, and they were therto as swifte as the Kooes of the mountaynes: Ezer the fyrst, Obdiā the seconde, Eliab the thirde, Masmanah the fourthe, Jeremiah the fyfte, Echi the syxte, Eliel the seuenthe, Johana the eyght, Elabad the. ix. Jeremiah the tenth, and Macahbanai the xi. These were of the sonnes of Gad, and were capitaynes ouer the men of warre, the small ouer an hundred, and the greate ouer a thousande. These are they that wet ouer Jordan in the fyrst monethe, when he had fylled ouer all his bankes. And they put to flight the of þ valeye, bothe of the East syde and also the weste.

And there came of the chyldren of Benjamin and Juda to þ holde of David. And David went out to them and answered and sayde to them: If ye be come peasablye vnto me, to helpe me, myne hert shalbe together with you. But and yf you come to begyle me and to be myne aduersarye, (seynge ther is no wyckpynes in myne handes,) the God of oure fathers loke thereon, and rebuke rebuke it. And the spirite came vpon Amasai, a captayne ouer. xxx. & he sayd: thyne are we Dauid, & on thy syde thou sonne of Iesai: * peace be with the, and peace be with thine helpers, for thy god helpeth the. The Dauid receaued the, and made them heedes of companies of the men of warre.

D And there selle of Manasseh to Dauid when he went with the Philistines agaynst Saul to battell, * but holpe the not. For the Lordes of the Philistines toke counsell, & sent him awaye, saying: he wyll fall to his master Saul to the Jeopardye of oure heedes. And as he went to * zikelag there fell to hym of Manasseh: Eonah, Jozabad, Jediel, Michael, of Jozabad, Elihu & zalthai, heedes of the thousandes of Manasseh. And they holpe Dauid agaynst those rousers. For they were all myghtie men and Capitaynes in warre. And there came one or other to Dauid, daye by daye to helpe him: vntyll it was a great hoste, lyke the hoste of God.

And this is the nobre of the heedes prepared to battell, that came to Dauid to hebron, to turne the kyngdome of Saul to him, according to y<sup>e</sup> mouth of the Lorde.

The children of Iuda y<sup>e</sup> bare shylde and speare were syxe thousande & eyght hundred trymmed to warre. Of the chyldren of Simeon, men of might to warre, seuen thousande and one hundred. And of the chyldren of Leui were foure thousand and sixe hundred. And Jeholada was the chefe of them of Aaron & with hym thre thousande and seuen hundred. And zadoch a younge man of great power had his fathers housholde wyth Capitaynes. xxii. And of the children of Benjamin the brethren of Saul, were thre thousand. And a great parte of the dyd yet folowe the house of Saul.

And of the chyldren of Ephraim, were. xx. thousande and eyght hundred, men of myghte and named men in the householdes of their fathers. And of the halfe trybe of Manasseh. xviii. thousande, whiche were appoynted by name to go to make Dauid kynge. And of the chyldren of Issacar, whiche were men that had vnderstandynge in the ryght tyme to knowe what Israell ought to do: The heedes of them were two hundred, and all their brethren were at their wyll. And of Zabulon that wet out with the hoste and proceded in the araye to battell wyth all maner of wepons of warre, syfthe thousande that kepte in order wyth one accorde. And of Nephthali a thousand Capitaynes, and with them with shylde & speare. xxxvii. thousand. And of Dan, prepared to battell, were. xxviii. thousande and. vi. hundred. And of Aser that went out with the hoste to make battell, fourtie thousand. And of the other syde Jordan, of the Rubenites, Gadites, & of the halfe trybe of Manasseh with all maner of instrumentes of warre an hundred and twentie thousande.

* All these beyng men of warre able to ordre the araye, came to Hebron with pure herte, to make Dauid kynge vpon all Israel. And therto all the rest of Israel was of one accorde to make Dauid kynge. And there they were with Dauid thre dayes eatynge & drynkyng: for their brethren prepared for them. Moreover, they that were nye to the, as Issacar, Zabulon & Nephthali brought bredde on asses, Camels, mules and oxen, & meate: flour, figges, reasyns, wyne, oyle, oxen, and shepe abundant: lyke. For there was myrthe in Israel.

The. xiii. Chapter.

The Arcue is brought agayne from Batiath Tarim to Ierusalem. Dha dyeth.

And Dauid counceled with the Capitaynes of thousandes and hundredes, and with all the Lordes, & sayde vnto all the congregacyon of Israel: If it seme you good, & also to be of the Lord oure God: Let vs take and sende vnto the remnaunt of oure brethren thorow out all the land of Israel, & to the preastes and Leuites with them, in their citie and suburges, and gather the together to vs. And let vs bryng agayne the Arcke of the Lorde to vs: for we regarded it not in the dayes of Saul. And all the congregacyon was content so to do, for the thyng semed good in y<sup>e</sup> eyes of all the people.

And Dauid gathered al Israel together, fro* Sthor i Egypt vnto Hemath, to bryng to bringe the Arcke of the Lorde from Bariath Jarim. And David went vp & all Israel to Baalah, and so to Bariath Jarim that is in Iuda, to fet thence the Arcke of the God and Lord that sitteth on the Cherubes. Where his name is called on. * And they caried the Arcke of God in a newe cartte out of the house of Amiadab. And Oza & his brother draue the cartte. And David & all Israel played before the Arcke of God with all their myght, wth syngynge, harpes, psaltertes, tymbrells, and trompettes. And whē they came vnto þ<sup>e</sup> thressyng flowre of Chidon, Oza put forth his hande to holde the Arcke, for the oxen stombled. And the Lorde was wroth with Oza, & smote him, because he put his hande to þ<sup>e</sup> Arcke. And there he dyed before god. And David was displeased, because þ<sup>e</sup> Lorde had rent a fent in Oza, and called the sayde place * Perez Oza vnto this daye. And David was so afrayed of God that daye, that he sayd, how shal I bring the Arcke of God home to me. And so David brought not the Arcke home to him to the cytie of David: But turned it in to the house of Obed Edom a Gethite. And the Arcke of God was wth Obed Edom in his house, thre monethes. And the Lord blessed the house of Obed Edom, and all that he had.

The. xiii. Chapter.

David sendeth wodde and workemē to David. David begetteth chyldren after he had taken hym wyues he hath ii. victories of the Philistines.

After that Hiram kyng of Tyre sent messengers to David, and tymbre of Cedar trees wth masons and Carpenters, to buylde hym an house. wherby David perceaued that þ<sup>e</sup> lorde had prepared him to be kyng vpon Israel, in that his kyngdome was like vpon hye, because of his people Israel. And David toke yet moo wyues at Jerusalem, and begat mo sonnes & daughters. And these are the names of his chyldren which he had bozne him at Jerusalem: Samua, Sobab, Nathā, and Salomō: Jebhar, Elisua and Eliphalet: Noga, Nepheg and Japhiah. Elisama, Baliada and Elphelet.

And when it was knowne among the Philistines that David was anoynted byng vpon all Israel, all the Philisti-

And David asked God, sayinge: Shall I go agaynst the Philistines and wylt thou delyuer them into myne handes? And the Lord sayde to him: go, for I wyl delyuer thē into thynne hande. And when they were came as ferre as Baal Pharazin, David bet them there. And David sayde: God hath deuyded myne enemies with myne hande, as a man wolde deuyde water. And therfore they called the name of the sayde place Baal Pharazin. And they leste their Gods there, which David hadde to be burnt with fyre.

* And the Philistines came agayne and ranne abroade in the valeye. Then David asked God: And God sayde to him: go not after thē, but turne awaye from them, and come vpon thē straght frō the peere trees. And when thou hearest a soude go in þ<sup>e</sup> toppes of the peere trees, then go out to battell: for God wyl go out before the to smyte the hoste of the Philistines. And David dyd as God commaūded him. And they smote the hoste of the Philistines al the waye from Gibeon to Gazer. And the fame of David went out into all lādes, and the Lorde made all nacyns feare hym.

The. xv. Chapter.

And David made him houses in the citie of David, and prepared a place for the Arcke of God, and pitched for it a tent. And thē David sayd: the Arcke of God ought not to be caried but of the Leuites. * For them hath the Lord chosen to beare the Arcke of the Lord and to minister to him for euer. And therfore David gathered all Israel to Jerusalem, to fetch the Arcke of the lord vnto the place which he had ordeyned for it. And David brought together the chyldren of Aaron & the Leuites. As David dwelt in his house, he said to Nathan the prophet: loo, I dwell in an house of Cedar tree: and the Ark of the Lordes couenaunt dwellyth vnder curtaynes. And Nathan sayde to David: do all that is in thyne herte, for God is with the.

But the same nyght, the worde of god came to Nathan, saying: go, & tell David my seruaunte, thus sayth the Lord: thou shalt not buyde me an house to dwell in. For I haue dwelt in no house, sence I brought out the children of Israel vnto this daye: But haue gone fro tent to tent, and from one tabernacle to another. Neither in anye place whersoever I haue walked thorow out all Israel, spake I euer one worde to anye of the iudges of Israel (which I commaunded to fede my people) sayig: why buyde ye me not an house of Cedar tree? Now therfore thus saye vnto my seruaunt David: thus sayth the Lord of hostes: I toke the out of the pasture from after shepe, that thou shouldest be captain ouer my people Israel. And I haue bene with the, in all thou tokest in hande, and haue weded out all thyne enemyes out of thy syght, & haue made the a name, lyke the name of the greatest men of the erthe. And I will ordayne a place for my people Israel, and will make it faste, and they shall dwell vnder it, and shall moue no more. Neither shall the childre of wickednesse bere them any more, as at the begynnyng, and sence the tyme I commaunded iudges to be ouer my people Israel, and will bringe vnder all thyne enemyes: (for I tolde the, that the Lord wolde buyde the an house.)

* But when thy dayes be expired, that thou must go after thy fathers, I will set vp thy seed after the, whiche shall be of thy sonnes, and will settle his kyngdome. * He shall buyde me an house, and I will stablyshe his seate for euer. I will be his father, & he shall be my sonne, and I will not put my mercye awaye from him, as I dyd fro him that was before the. But I will set him in myne house and in my kyngdom for euer: and his seate shall be sure for euer.

ding to all these wordes, and to all this vision, king David went & sate him before the Lord, and sayd: what am I (O Lord God) & what is myne houshold, that thou hast promoted me thus farre. And yet this seemed lyttel in thine eyes, O God: But that thou shouldest speake of thy seruautes house for a great while to come: and hast looked vpon me as vpo a man of hye degree (O Lord God.) What can David desyre more of the, wherin he shouldest make thy seruand more gloriousse. And David toke the shylde of gold that were on the seruautes of Hadadezer and brought them to Ierusalē. And from Thebahath and Chun, cyties of Hadadezer, brought David excedyng muche brasle. * Wherwith Salomon made the brasen see, and pylers and the vesselles of brasle.

And when * Tou kyng of Hemath, heard how David had beatē all þe hoste of Hadadezer kyng of zobah, he sent Haduram his sonne to kyng David, to salute him and to blesse him, because he had fought with Hadadezer and beatē hym (for Tou had warre with Hadadezer) and sent all maner of Jewelles of golde, syluer and brasle with him. And kyng David dedycated the also vnto the Lorde, with the syluer & golde that he brought from all nacjons, from the Edomites, fro the Moabites, from the chyldren of Ammon, from the Philistines, & fro the Amaleckites. And Abisai the sonne of zacariah slue of the Edomites in the salte valeye. xviij. thousand, and put Soudiars in Edom, and all Edom became Davids seruautes: for the Lorde kepte David in all þe he toke in hand. And David raygned ouer all Israel, and dyd ryght and equyte vnto all his people. And Joab the sonne of zacariah was ouer the hoste, and Jehoshaphat the sonne of Ahilud recorder, and zadock the sonne of Ahitob, and Abimelech the sonne of Abiathar were þe preasles, and Susa was scripbe, and Banasah the sonne of Jehoiada was ouer the Crethites and the Phelethites, and the eldest sonnes of David wayted at the kynges hande.

The. xix. Chapter.

Chanon kyng of the sonnes of Ammon doth create iniurie to the seruautes of David.

After this it chaunced that Nahas kyng of the chyldren of Ammon dyed, and his sonne made kyng in his steade. Then sayde David, I wyll shewe kyndnesse vnto Hanon the sonne of Nahas, because his father dealt kindly wyth me: And therupon David sent messengers to comforte hym ouer the death of his father. And when the seruautes of David were come into the lande of the chyldren of Ammon to Hanon, to comforte him, the Lordes of the chyldren of Ammon sayde to Hanon: thynkest thou þ David dothe honoure thy father i thy syght, that he hath sent comforters vnto the? Naye, but it is to searche and ouerthrowe and to spee out the lād, that his seruautes be come vnto the.

Wherupon Hanon toke Davids seruautes & shaued the, and cut of their cootes harde by their bottocks, & sent them awaye. And there went that tolde David how the men were serued. And the kyng sent to mete them (for the men were exceedinglye ashamed) and sayd: tarpe at Jericho vntyll youre beerdes be growen, and then retorne.

And when the chyldre of Ammon saw that they stanke in the nose of David, Hanon, & the chyldren of Ammon sent a thousand talentes of syluer to hyre the charettes and horsemen out of * Mesopotamia & out of Siria Maacah, & out of zobah. And they hyred. xxxii. thousande charettes, and the kyng of Maacah and his people, whiche came and pytched before Midba. And the chyldren of Ammon gathered them selues together from their cyties, & wēt out to battell. And as sone as David heard of it, he sent Joab with all the hoste of stronge men. And the chyldre of Ammon came out and put them in araye to battell before the gate of the cytie. And the kynges that were come, kepte them by them selues in the felde.

And the rest of the people he deliuered vnto Abisai his brother, that they should put them selues in araye agaynst the chyldren of Ammon, and sayde: If the Sirians bee to stronge for me, succoure me, and yf the chyldren of Ammon be to good for the, I wyll helpe thee.

¶ Blucke vp thynne herte, and let vs play the men, for oure peoples sake, and for the cyties of oure God, and the Lord do what semeth hym beste. And Joab and the people that were with him, drue nye to the Sirians to fyghte, and they fled before hym. And when the chyldren of Ammon sawe that the Sirians were fled, they ranne awaye lyke wise from Abisai hys brother, and gatte them into the cyyte. And Joab came to Ierusalem.

And when the Sirians sawe that they were put to the worse of Israell, they sente messengers and set oute the Sirians that are beyond the riuer with Sophach the Capitayne of the hoste of Hadadezer before them. Which when it was tolde Dauid, he gathered al Israell. And wente ouer Iordan, and wente and set vpon them. And Dauid put him selfe in araye agaynst the Sirians, and they fought with him. But the Sirians fled before Israell, and Dauid destroyed of the Sirians. vii. thousande charettes, and x. thousande fote me and kylled Sophach the Capitayne of the hoste. And when the seruauntes of Hadadezer, sawe that they were put to the worse of Israell, they made peace with Dauid, and serued hym. Nether would the Sirians helpe the chyldren of Ammon any moze.

founded therein the wayghte of a tallent of golde, and there were precious stones in it, & it was set on Dauids head. And he broughte out also the poyle of the cyyte which was exceedinge much. And he brought out the people that were in it, and tormented them with sawes & harowes of yron, and with brakes, and so dealte Dauid with all the cyyties of the chyldren of Ammon. And then Dauid, and all the people came agayne to Ierusalem. * After that ther arose war at Gazer with the Philistines. At whiche tyme, Sobocai the Gushathite slue Saphai that was of the chyldren of * Raphaim, and they were subdued. And there was battell agayne with the Philistines, and Elhanan the sonne of Jaish slue Lahmi, the brother of Goliath the Gethite, whose speare was lyke the beame of a weuer. And there chaunced yet agayne warre at Geth, wher was a man of a greate syze with. xliii. fingers and toes. vi. on euery hande, and vi. on euery fote: and was the sonne of Haraphah, and defied Israell. And Jehonathā the sonne of Samaa Dauids brother slue hym. These were borne of Haraphah at Geth, and were ouerthrowen by the hande of Dauid and of hys seruauntes.

The. xxi. Chapter.

¶ The people are punished with pestilence, because Dauid caused them to be numbered: so that there died. lxx. thousand men.

¶ Ad Satan stode by agaynst Israell, and persuaded * Dauid to number Israell. And Dauid sayd to Joab, and p rulers of the people, go ye and numbre Israell from Bersabe to Dan, and bringe it to me that I maye knowe the numbre of them. And Joab answered: the Lorde make thy people an hundred times so many mo as they be. But my Lorde O kynge, are they not all my Lordes seruauntes? why then both my Lord requite thys thyng: why shoulde my Lorde be a cause of trespase to Israell?

¶ Neuerthelater the kynges wordes preuailed agaynst Joab. And Joab toke his waye and wente thorowe oute all Israell, and came to Ierusalem as gaine and gaue the numbze of the couste of the people vnto Dauid. And all Israel were in numbze a thousande thousande, and an hundred thousande men that dze swerde: and Iuda was. cccc. lxx. thousande menne that dze swerde. But the Leuites and Benjamin he counted not amonge them. For the kynges dede seemed abomynable to Joab. And the Lorde was dyspleased with thys thyng, and smote Israel. Then sayde Dauid to God: I haue sinned exceedingly in doyng this thyng. Reuerthelesse yet do away the wickednesse of thy seruante, for I haue done aboue measure folyslye.

B And the Lorde spake vnto Gad Dauids sear of bylsons, sayinge: go and tell Dauid, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lord: I geue the the choise of thze thynges: chose the one of them, that I maye do vnto thee. And Gad came to Dauid, & sayd vnto him: Thus sayth the Lord: Chose the ether thze yerres famishment, or thze monethes to bee consumed of thyne aduersaries, and that the swerde of thy enemyes ouertakinge the: or else the swerde of the Lorde, and thze dayes pestilence in the lande, the Angell of the Lorde destroyinge thozowe oute all the costes of Israel. And nowe aduise thy selfe what worde I shal byngne agayne to him that sent me. And Dauid sayde to Gad. * I am in an exctading straite. But let me fall in to the handes of the Lord, for passyng greate is hys mercy, & let me not fall into the handes of men.

And the Lorde sente pestilence vpon all Israel, so that there wer ouerthrowen of Israel. lxx. thousande men. And God sente the Angell to Jerusalem to destroye it. And as he was aboute to destroye, the Lorde behelde and had compassion on the wretchednesse, and sayde to the aungell that destroyed, it is ynough nowe cease thyne hande. And the Angell of the Lorde stode by the thzeshyng floure of Ornan the Jebusite. And Dauid lyfte vp his eyes and saw the Angell of the Lorde stande betwene the earthe and heauen, with a drawen swerde in hys hande, stretched out towarde Jerusalem. Then fell Dauid & the elders of Israel (clothed in sacke) vpon theyr faces. And Dauid sayd vnto to God: Is it not I that commaunded to numbze the people? And I am he that haue synned and done euell in dede. But what haue these shepe done? let thyne hande therfore O Lord God, be on me, and on my fathers house, & not on thy people to destroye them.

And the Angell commaunded Gad to saye to Dauid, that Dauid shoulde go, and reze vp an aulter vnto the lord, in the thzeshyng floure of Ornan the Jebusite. And Dauid went at the sayinge of Gad, whiche spake in the name of the Lorde. And Ornan turned aboute, and sawe the Angell: and his foure sonnes with him, and byd them selues: for Ornan was thzeshyng wheate. And Dauid came to Ornan. And when Ornan looked and sawe Dauid, he went out of the thzeshyng floure, and bowed hym selfe to Dauid w hys face to p groude.

And Dauid sayd to Ornan: geue me the place of the thzeshyng floure, that I maye buylde an aulter therein vnto the Lorde. Let me haue it for as much money as it is worthe, that the plage may cease from the people. And Ornan sayde to Dauid: take it to the, and let my Lorde the kyng do that semethe good in hys eyes. Se, I geue the oxen for a burnt sacrifice, and the thzeshyng leades for woode, & wheate for meate: offeringe: I geue it all. But kyng Dauid sayde to Ornan: not so, but I wyll bye it for as much money as it is worth. I wyll not take that which is thine, for the Lorde, & offer burnt offeringes with out coste.

And so Dauid gaue to Ornan for the place sycles of golde. vi. hundred by waighte. And Dauid buylt there an aulter vnto the LORDE, and offered burnt offeringes, and peace offerings, and called vnto the Lorde, and he hearde hym from heauen in fyze vpon the aulter of burnt offeringe. And he commaunded the Angell to put vp hys swerde agayne into the sheathe of it. At that tyme when Dauid sawe, that the Lorde had hearde him in the thzeshyng floure of Ornan the Jebusite: he bled to offer there. For the tabernacle of the Lorde * whiche Moses made in the wilderness, and the aulter of burnt offering, were at that reason in the byll at Gibeon.

¶ The. xii. Chapter.

David willeth hys sonne Salomon to bylde the temple of the Lorde: whiche thyng he him selfe was forbydden to do.

And David commaunded to gather the straungers that were in the lād of Israell, & set hewers to hew stone, to builde þe house of God. And David prepared plenty of yron for nayles, to the dores of the gates and to ioyne with al, and aboundaunce of brasse withoute wayghte, and of Cedar trees withoute numbre. For the zidons and they of Tīre broughte muche Cedar woode to David. For David thus thoughte, Salomon my sonne is younge and tender, and the house that is to be buylt for the Lorde, muste excede in greatnesse, that it maye bee spoken of, and prayled in all landes. I wyll therfore make ordinaunce for it. And so David prepared aboundaunce before his deathe.

And he called Salomon hys sonne, and charged hym to bylde an house for the Lorde God of Israell: And David said to Salomon: *my sonne, I had in myne hett to buylde an house vnto the name of the Lorde my God. But the worde of the Lorde came to me, saying: thou haste shed muche bloude, and hast made many battelles. Thou shalt not bylde an house for my name, for thou haste shed muche bloude to the earthe in my syghte. Beholde, a sonne shalbee bozne the whiche shalbe a man of reste, for I wyll geue hym reste from all hys enemyes rounde aboute. And his name shalbe Salomon: for I wyll sende rest and peace vpon Israell in hys dayes. He shall buylde an house for my name, and he shalbe my sonne, & I wyll bee his father, and wil stablysh the seate of his kingdome vpon Israell for euer. Now my sonne, the Lorde bee with thee, that thou mayste prospere, and buylde the house of the Lorde thy God, as he hath sayde of the: *And the Lorde geue thee wysedome and vnderstandinge, & make the gouernēt of Israell, and to kepe the law of the Lorde thy god. for then thou shalt prosper: If thou shalt be dyligente to do þe ordinaunces and lawes which the Lorde charged Moyses with, to deliuer to Israell. Plucke vp thyne herte and be stronge, dreade not, nor be discouraged. Beholde, in myne aduersite I haue prepared for the house of Lorde, an hundred thousande talentes of gold, & a thousand thousand talentes of syluer, and as for brasce and yron it cannot be numbred, it is so muche. And I haue prepared timbre and stone, and thou shalt proude more therto. Moreouer, thou haste workemen ynowe, and masons, & carpenters to worke in stone and timber, & al maner of wyse men for whatsoeuer worke it be. And of gold, siluer, brasce and yron, there is no numbre. Up therfore and set vpon it, & the Lorde shalbe with the.

And David commaunded al the Lordes of Israell, to helpe Salomon hys sonne, sayinge: Is not the Lorde your God with you? and hath he not geuen you rest on euery syde: for he hath geue the enhabytours of the land into mine hande, and the land is subdued before the Lorde, and before hys people. Now therfore set your hertes & your soules, to seke the Lorde your God. And by and buylde ye þe temple of the Lorde God, to bryng þe Arcke of the couenaunt of the Lorde, & the holy vesselles of God into þe house, so buylt for the name of þe Lorde.

¶ The. xiii. Chapter.

David beynz olde, ordeyneth Salomon kyng. He causeth the Leuites to be nombred, and assigneth them to therr offices.

And when David was olde & stricken in yeres, he made Salomon hys sonne kyng ouer Israell. And then he gathered together all the lordes of Israell with the preestes and the Leuites. And the Leuites were numbred from. xxx. yere and aboue, and the tale of them in men polle by polle was. xxxviii. thousand. Of whiche. xxiij. thousande were set to further the worcke of þe house of the Lorde. And syxe thousande were offycers and Judges. foure thousand wer porters, and foure thousande prayled the Lorde with suche instrumētes as David had made to prayse with all.

The. xxvi. Chapter.

The porters of the temple are ordeyned euery man to the gate which he should kepe.

The deuysyon of the porters among the Cozehites: Meselemiah the sonne of Kozeh of the chyldren of Asaph. And the sonnes of Seselemiah wer these: zachariah the eldest, Jadiell the seconde, zabadijah the thyrde, Jathaniel the fourth, Elam the fyfte, Jehohanan the sixte, Elioenai the seuenth. And Obed Edom had sonnes: Semeiah the eldest, Jehosabab the seconde, Joah the thyrde, Sacar the fourthe, Nathanaell the fyfte, Amiell the sixte, Isacar the seuenth and Bolathat the. viii. for God hadde blessed hym.

And vnto Semeiah his sonne were sonnes bozne that ruled in the house of theyr father, for they wer men of might. The sonnes of Semeiah: Othni, Rapphaell, Obed and Elzabad and hys brethren men of actiuite, Elihu & Samachiah. All these were of the chyldren of Obed Edom, whiche with theyr brethren and their chyldren, actiue men & of strengthe to do seruice, were. lxii. of Obed Edom. And Meselemiah had sonnes and brethren, actiue men. xliii. And Hosah of the chyldren of Merari, had sonnes: Semri the chiefe, yet he was not the eldest, but hys father made him the chiefe. Helkiah the seconde, Tabeiah the thyrde and zacariah the fourthe: so that all the sonnes and brethren of Hosah were. xlii.

Vnto these was deuised the offyce of the porterhys as vnto heades ouer the menne that wayted wyth theyr brethren and mynstred in the house of the Lorde. And they caste lottes, the smalle as wel as the greate in the holdes of theyr fathers, frome gate to gate. And the East lot fell to Semeiah. And for zacariah his sonne a wyse counseller, they caste lottes, and hys lot came oute toward the North. And Obed Edoms lot fell to the South. And to hys sonnes fell the counsell houses, to Suphim and Hosah fell the weste with the gate Salecheth, wher the way assendeth bpward, the one way beyng east by the other.

In the East kepte nyxe Leuites: in the North. liii. a daye, & in the South liii. a daye, and in euery counsell house two, and in the watchhouses, on the hye way westward foure: two in a house. These are the deuysions of the porters amonge the sonnes of Kozeh and the sonnes of Merari. And of the Leuites Abiah had the ouersight of the treasure of the house of God, and of the treasure of the dedicat thinges.

As concernynge the sonnes of Laadan whiche were Gersonites. Laadan had auncient fathers. Laadan the Gersonite had Jehieli. The sonnes of Jehieli: zethan and Joel his brother, whiche were ouer the treasures of the house of the Lorde. Amonge the Amramites, Zabarites, Hebronites and Ozielites, was Subuell the sonne of Gerson the sonne of Moses a ruler ouer the treasure. And of hys brethren the sonnes of Eliezer, was Rahabiah, whose sonne was Isalah, & his sonne was Jozā, & his son zechi, & his son was Selomith, which Selomith & his brethren were ouer al þe treasures of þe dedicate gites whiche David the kyng, and the auncient heades, of the capitaynes ouer thousandes and hundredes, and the capitaynes of the hoste had dedicated of the spoyle won in battell, to maynteyne the house of the Lord: and ouer al that Samuell the seer and Saull the sonne of Cis, and Abner the sonne of Ner, and Joab the sonne of zacuriah had dedicated. All that was dedicated, was vnder the hande of Selomith and of hys brethren.

Of the Izaharites Conaniah and hys sonnes were in busineses without forthe made officers and iudges ouer Israel. And of the Hebronites Basabiah and hys brethren men of actiuite a thousand and .vii. hundred wer officers in Israel on this side Jorda westward, in al busineses of the Lord & seruaice of the king. And Jediah was the cheefeste among the kindredes and fathers of the Hebronites. And in þe fourtie yere of the kingdome of David they were sought for. And ther wer found of them men of actiuite at Jazer in Gilead. And hys brethren were in menie of actiuite, two thousande and seven hundred auncient heades, which king David made rulers ouer the Rubenites, Gadites and the half tribe of Manasseh in al maters pertaining to God & busineses of þe king.

The .xxvii. Chapter.

Of the princes & rulers that ministered vnto the king.

In speake of the chyldren of Israel: in the numbre of the were auncient heades & capitaynes of thousandes & hundredes, & officers þe serued the king in al thinge according to þe companys þe came in. or wente oute, monethe by monethe thowwe out all þe monethes of the yere. And euery company had .xxiiii. thousand. Ouer the fyrst company in the first moneth, was Jasoboam þe son of zabiell. And in his number wer .xxiiii. thousand. And the cheefeste of all the capitaynes in the hoste of the fyrst moneth was of the chyldren of Pharez. Ouer the company of þe second moneth Dodai an Ahohite, & in his hoste was Hakeloth a ruler. And in his company were .xxiiii. thousande. The cheie capitayne of the thyrde host in þe thyrde moneth, was Banatah the sonne of Jehoiada the preeste. And in his hoste .xxiiii. thousande. Thys is that Banatah mightie amonge thyrtye and aboue thyrty. And in his part was Amizabad hys sonne.

The fourthe capitaine in the fourth moneth was Alael the brother of Joab, and zabadiab his sonne after hym. And in hys hoste .xxiiii. thousand. The fyfte capitaine in the fyfte moneth was Samahut the Jezrahite: and in hys hoste .xxiiii. thousande. The syxt capitaine in the syxt moneth was Ira the sonne of Akas a Chekuite: and in his host .xxiiii. thousande.

The seuenth capitaine in the seuenth monethe, was Helei the Phalonite, of þe chyldren of Ephraim: and in hys hoste .xxiiii. thousande. The eight Capitayne in the eight moneth, was Sobocat an Husathite of þe kyn of Sarah: & in hys host .xxiiii. thousande. The ninth Capitaine in the nynt moneth, was Abiezer an Anathothit of þe sonnes of Jemini: & in hys host .xxiiii. thousande. The tenth Capitayne in the tenth monethe, was Mahari þe Metophathit of þe Izaharites: and in his hoste .xxiiii. thousande. The leuenth moneth, was Banatah the Phathomite of the chyldren of Ephraim: & in hys hoste .xxiiii. thousande. The .xii. Capytayne in the twelue monethe, was Heldai the Metophathite of Othniel, and in hys hoste .xxiiii. thousande. And the rulers ouer the tribes of Israel were these. Amonge the Rubenites, was Eliezer the sonne of zechi. Among the Simeonites, was Saphatiah the sonne of Maacah. Among the Leuites: Basabiah the sonne of Samuel. Among the Haromites: zadock. In Juda: Eliu of the brethren of David. In Issacar: Amri the sonne of Michaell. In Zabulon: Jesmaiah the sonne of Abdiah. In Asephthalie: Jerimoth the sonne of Azriel. hasseth in Gilead: Jado the sonne of Zachariah. In Benjamin: Jaasiel the son of Abner. In Dan: Azariel the sonne of Jeroham. These are the Lordes in the tribes of Israel.

But David toke not the numbre of them vnder .xx. yere: for the Lorde said he woulde encrease Israel like vnto the starres of the sky. And Joab the sonne of Zaruiah beganne to numbre. And though he synished it not, yet there fell wrath for that vpon Israel. And therfore the numbre was not put in þe chronicles of kyng David.

¶ Over the kynges treasure was Azmothe the sonne of Adiel. And ouer the treasure of the felde, in the cyties, vylages and castelles, was Jehonathan, the sonne of Oziah. And ouer the workmen in the felde that tilled the ground, was Ezri the sonne of Chelub. And the oversight of the vineyardes had Semiah the Ramathite. Over the wynecellers & treasure of wine was Sabdi the Saphonite. And ouer the olyuetrees and mulbertyrees that were in the valeys was Baalhanan the Gadarite. And ouer the treasure of oyle was Joas. And ouer the oxen that fed in Sarō was Setari the Saronite. And ouer þe oxen in the valeys was Saphate the sonne of Ablai. And ouer the camelles Abil the Ismaelyte. And ouer the asses was Johadiah the Merothite. And ouer the shepe was Jazis the Hagarite.

All these were the rulers of the substance of David. And Jehonathan Davids brothers sonne, a man of counsell, a man that taught wisdom, and a wyter he and Jehiel the sonne of Bachamoni wayted on the kynges sonnes.

¶ And Abithophel was of the kynges counsell. And Husai the Archite was the kynges companyon. And nexte to Abithophel was Jehoiada the sonne of Banaiah and Abiathar. And the capitayne of the kynges warre was Joab.

¶ The .xxviii. Chapter.

¶ Because David was forbydden to buyde the temple, he exorteth Salomon and the people to perforce it.

And David gathered together all the Lordes of Israel: the Lordes of the tribes, þe Lordes of the companyes that mynystrid to the kyng by course, the Lordes ouer the thousandes and ouer the hundredes, and the Lordes ouer all the goodes and cattell of the kyng and of his sonnes, with the chambrelaines, warryoures and all actiue menne vnto Jerusalem. And king David stode vpon his fete, and sayde.

Heare me my brethre and my people:

* I had in myne herte to buyde an house of reste for the Arcke of the couenaunte of the Lorde, and a fote stole for oure God, and had made redy to builde. But God sayde to me: * thou shalt not buyde an house for my name, because thou art a man of warre and haste shede blode.

Moreover þe Lord God of Israel chose me of all the house of my father, to be kyng ouer Israel for euer, for he chose * Iuda to be a capitayne: and in the house of Iuda the house of my father, and of the sonnes of my father he had a lust to me, to make me king ouer al Israel. And of all my sonnes (for the Lord hath geuen me manye sonnes) he hath chosen Salomon my sonne, to sit in the seat of the kyngdome of the Lord ouer Israel. And he sayd vnto me: Salomon thy sonne, he shall buyde my house and my courtes, * for I haue chosen hym to be my sonne, and I wyll be his father, and wyll stablyshe his kyngdome for euer, If he wyll harden hym selfe to do my commaundementes, and my lawes, as it goeth thys daye.

And nowe I saue vnto you before al Israel the congregacion of the Lorde, and in the audience of oure God: kepe & seke for al þe commaundementes of the Lorde your God, that ye may enioye a good land, & enherit your chyldren after you for euer. And thou Salomon my sonne: know thou the God thy father, & serue him with a pure herte, and lust of soule. * for the Lorde sercheth all hertes, & vnderstandeth all the Imagynacions of thoughtes. If thou shalt seke hym, he wyll be founde of the: But and if thou forsake him, he wyll cast the of for euer. Take hede now, for the Lord hath chosen the, to buyde an house of thy sanctuary. Be stronge and do it.

And David gaue Salomon hys sonne þe paterne of the porch, and of the houses þe longed therto, and of þe store houses, vpper chaumbres, pinner parlours, Ioures, & of y<sup>e</sup> house of the merciesseate: and the example of all that was in hys minde, bothe of the courtes of the house of the Lorde, and of the treasure houses rounde aboute, for the treasures of the house of god, and for the treasure of the dedicate gyftes, and of the compaynes of the priestes and Leuites that waited by course, and of all workemanshpype, that shoulde serue for the house of the Lorde, and for all vesselles that shoulde serue in the house of the Lorde. And appointed hym what wayghte of golde shoulde serue, for thinges of golde thowt out all vesselles, for whatsoeuer vse it serued: and what wayghte of syluer shoulde suffice for all maner of vesselles of syluer, for whatsoeuer purpose they serued.

And the wayghte of the golden candelstickes, and of their lampes of golde, the waighte for euery candelstykke and for theyr lāpes. And for the candelstickes of syluer by wayght, bothe for the candelsticke and also for her lampes, accordinge to y<sup>e</sup> offyce of euery candelsticke. And the wayght of golde for the tables of shew bread, table by table: and like wyse syluer for the tables of syluer. And for flesheokes, basens and drinckynge pottes of pure golde. And for cuppes of golde of wayghte, cuppe by cuppe. And for cuppes of syluer by wayghte, cuppe by cuppe. And for the aulter of incense of tryed golde by wayghte. And the symplytude of the seate of the Cherubes that stretched oute theyr wynges, and couered the Arcke of the couenaunte of the Lord. All was geuen me by wytyng of the hande of y<sup>e</sup> lord, whiche made me vnderstande all the workemanshpype of the paterne.

And David sayde to Salomon his sonne: harden thy selfe, and be stronge and do it, feare not, nor let thynne herte dyscourage the. for the Lord god, euen my God is with the, and shall not leaue the, nor forsake the, vntyll thou hast synched all the worke that muste serue for the house of the Lorde. Beholde the priestes and Leuites are deuyded in cōpanyes, for to do all maner of seruice that pertayneth to the house of God: and besyde that, thou haste with the for all maner of workemanshpype, all that are wyllynge and wyse for anye maner of seruyce. And the Lordes and all the people are at thy commaundemente in all thynges.

The. xxix. Chapter.

The offerpnynges of Dauid and of the pryntes for the byldynge of the temple. Dauid dyeth and Salomon hys sonne raygneth in hys steade.

And Dauid the kynge A sayde vnto all the congregacion: * God hath speciallye chosen Salomon my sonne whiche is yet younge and tender, and the worke is grete, for the house is not for man, but for the LORD God. Moreover, I haue prepared with all my myghte for the house of GOD: golde for thynges of golde, and syluer for thynges of syluer, brasse for thynges of brasse, yron for thynges of yron, and wood for thynges of wood: and onykes stones, * set stones, and of other gaye stones, and all maner of precious stones, and of marble great aboundance. And yet because I haue luste to y<sup>e</sup> house of my God: I haue seuerall golde and syluer whiche I geue to the house of my God aboue all I haue prepared for the holy house: euen thre thousande talentes of golde of Ophir, and seuen thousande talentes of syluer tryed: to fyle the walles of the house with golde where it becommeth, and with syluer where syluer is mete, and for all maner of worke by the handes of Artificers. And let me se who is wyllynge also, to fyll hys hande for the LORD this daye.

And the aunciente lordes and the lordes of the trybes of Israel, and the Capitaines of thousandes and hundredes, and the lordes ouer the substance of the kynge, were wyllynge, and gaue for the seruyce of the house of God, fyue thousande talentes of golde, and ten thousande peces of golde copnes, and ten thousande talentes of syluer, and. xviij. thousande talentes of brasse, and an hundred thousande talentes of yron. And they that had precyouse stones gaue them for the treasure of the house of the Lorde, vnto the hande of Jehiel the Gersonite.

And the people reioyced y<sup>e</sup> they were so wyllynge: for with a pure herte they were wyllynge vnto the LORD. And therto David the kynge reioysed with great gladnesse. And David blessed the Lorde before all the congregacion, and sayde: Blessed arte thou Lorde GOD of Israel oure father, from euer and for euer. Thyne (O Lorde) is greatnesse, power, glozpe, byctorye and praise: for all that is in heauen & in erth is thyne, and thyne is the kyngedome (O Lorde) and þy arte lyfte vp on heade aboue all.

And richesse and honoure come of the, and thou raygneest ouer all, and in thine hande is power and strengthe, and in thyne hande it is to make great, and to geue strengthe vnto all.

D And nowe oure God, we thanke the, and praye thy glozvous name. For what am I: and what is my people: that we shoulde obtayne strengthe to be so wyllynge: But all is of the, and of that we receaued of thyne hāde we haue geuen the. * For we be but straungers before the, and tenantes, as were all oure fathers. * Oure daies on the erthe is but a shadowe, and there is none abydinge. O Lord oure God, al this stuffe that we haue prepared to builde the an house for thy holye name, commeth of thyne hande, and is all thyne. I wote also my God, that thou prouest the hertes and hast pleasure in playnesse. And in playnesse of my herte, I haue wyllynge geuen all this. And nowe I se þy people which are here in gladnesse, to offer wyllyngly to the. O Lorde God of Abraham, Isaac and of Israel, oure fathers, kepe this for euer in the imagination of the thoughtes of the herte of thy people, and prepare their hertes vnto the. And geue vnto Salomon my sonne, a pure herte to kepe thy commaundementes, thy testimonyes, and thyne ordynaunces, and to do all, & to buylde the house whiche I entended.

And David said to al the congregacion: blesse the Lorde youre God. And all the congregacion blessed the LORD god of their fathers, & stowped & bowed them selues vnto the Lorde and to the kynge. And they offered offerpynges vnto the Lorde. And on the morowe after the sayde daye, they offered in burnt offerpynges vnto the Lorde a thousande oxen, a thousande rammes, & a thousand lammes, with their drinkeofferpynges. And they due plenteouslye thorowe out all Israel, and did eate & drinke before the Lorde the same daye, wth great gladnesse. And they made Salomō the sonne of David kynge the seconde tyme, & anoynted him vnto the Lord, to be ruler, and zadoch to be the hye priest. * And so Salomon sate on the seate of the Lord, and was kynge for David his father, & prospered, and al Israel obeyed hym. And all the Lordes and men of power, and therto all the sonnes of kynge David submytted them selues vnder kynge Salomon. * And the Lorde magnified Salomon on hye, in the sight of all Israel, and gaue him so gloriouse a kyngedome, as none of all that were kynges before in Israel had.

Now David the sonne of Isai was kynge ouer all Israel. And the space he raygned ouer Israel was fourtie yere: seuen yere in Hebron, and xxxiii. yere in Jerusalem. And he dyed in a good age: olde, ryche and glozvous: And Salomon his sonne raygned in his steade. The actes of David the kynge bothe fyrste and laste, are wyttē in the boke of Samuel the sear, and in the boke of Nathan the prophete, in the boke of Gad the sear of visions, with all hys kyngedome and power, and tymes that wente ouer hym, and ouer all Israel, and ouer all the kyngedomes of the erthe.

And beholde, I sente for thy seruauntes the cutters and hewers of tymbre. xx. thousande quartes of beate wheate, and. xx. thousande quarters of barley, & .xx. thousande bathes of wyne, and. xx. thousande bathes of oyle.

And Hiram kynge of Tīre answered in wytyng & sent to Salomon: because the Lorde loueth his people, therfore he hath made y<sup>e</sup> kynge ouer them. And Hiram said mozeouer: blessed be the Lorde God of Israel, which hath made bothe heauen and erthe, that he hath geuen Dauid the kynge a wyse sonne y<sup>e</sup> hathe discrecion & vnderstandynge, to buylde an house for the Lorde, and another for his kyngdome. And now I haue sent a wyse mā, and a mā of vnderstandynge called * Hīrā Abi, and is the sonne of a woman of the doughters of Dan (howe be it his father was a Tīrīā) and he cā skil to worke in golde, siluer, brasle, yron, stone, tymbre, scarlet, facinct, byffe and cremosin: and graue all maner of graving, and to fynde oute all maner lottle worke that shalbe set before him, with thy connyng mē, & with the connyng men of my Lord Dauid thy father. And now y<sup>e</sup> wheate, barley, oyle & wine which my Lord hath said, let him sēde his seruauntes. And we wil cut woode oute of Libanon, as muche as thou shalt nede, and wil brynge it to the in thyppes by sea to porte Zapho: and thence y<sup>e</sup> maiest carie them to Ierusalem. And Salomō numbred all the straungers that were in the lāde of Israel, after the tyme his father Dauid had numbred them. And they were founde an hundred and. liii. thousande and fyre hundred. And he set lxx. thousande of thē to beare burthens, and. lxxx. thousande to hewe stones in the mountayne, and thye thousande and fyre hundred officers to courage and to set the people a worke.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The temple of the Lorde and the porche are bylde, with other thinges therto belongynge.

And * Salomon beganne to buylde the house of the Lorde at Ierusalem in mounte Moriah, * whiche was shewed Dauid his father when he prepared a place in the threshinge floure of Ornan the Jebusite. And he began to buylde the seconde daye of the seconde moneth the fourthe yere of his raygne. And this is the foundacion of Salomon in buyldynge the house of god. The lēgth was thye skoze cubytes after the olde cubyt, and y<sup>e</sup> bredeth. xx. And the porche at the ende was as large as the house bredeth. xx. cubytes: and y<sup>e</sup> heighe was an hundred and. xx. cubytes. And he ouerlaid it on the pinner syde with pure golde.

And the greater house he spled with fyre tree, & ouerlayde it wth good golde, and graued therto paulmetrees & cheynes. And he pauced the house wth precyouse stone goodly. And it was golde of Pharaaim. And he ouerlaid the house: both beames, postes, walles and dozes with golde, and graued Cherubes vpon the walles.

And he made the house mooste holy, whole lēgthe was. xx. cubytes lyke to the breadeth of the house: & y<sup>e</sup> breadeth therof was also. xx. cubites. And he ouerlayde it with y<sup>e</sup> best golde, y<sup>e</sup> dyue to the summe of. vi. hundred talents. And the waight of the nayles of golde was therto fyftie sicles. And he ouerlayde y<sup>e</sup> upper chambres with golde.

And he made in y<sup>e</sup> house moost holye two * Cherub of Image worke, & ouerlayde thē wth golde. And the wynges of the Cherubes were. xx. cubytes longe. The one wyng was fyue cubytes and touched the walle of the house, and the other wyng was lykewyse fyue cubytes, and touched the wyng of the other Cherub. And the one wyng of y<sup>e</sup> other Cherub was fyue cubytes, and touched the walle of the house, & the other wing was fyue cubites also, & raughte to the wige of y<sup>e</sup> other Cherub. So y<sup>e</sup> y<sup>e</sup> wiges of y<sup>e</sup> said Cherubes raught. xx. cubites.

A And he made an altar of brasse .xx. cubytes longe and .xx. cubytes broade, & ten cubytes hye. * And he cast a bra- sen sea of ten cubytes frō brim to brim, and rounde in compasse, and fyue cubytes hye: & a lyne of .xxx. cubytes myght haue compassed it rounde aboute. And the facion of oxen dyd compasse it rounde about vnder it: y<sup>e</sup> is to wete, two rowes of oxen cast, when it was caste dyd com- passe the sea, whiche was ten cubytes wyde, rounde aboute. And it stode also vpon twelue oxen: of whiche thre looked North, thre West, thre Southe, and thre East, and the sea vpon thē aboue an hye, and the hynder partes of thē inwarde.

B And the thickest of it was an hande- breade, and the byrme lyke the brim of a cuppe, with floures of lyles. And it receaued & helde thre thousande bathes.

64. reg. vii. c.

* And he made ten lauers: and put fyue on the right hāde, and fyue on the lefte, to washe with all. And in thē they thrust the fleshe of the burnt offeryn- ges. But the sea was for the priestes to washe in. And he made ten candelstyc- kes of golde in their facions, and put them in the temple: fyue on the ryghte hande, and fyue on the left. And he made also ten tables and put them in the tem- ple: fyue on the ryghte syde and fyue on the lefte. And he made an hūdyed balēs of golde. And he made the courte of the priestes, and the great courte and dozes to it: and ouerlayde y<sup>e</sup> dozes of thē with brasse. And he set the sea in y<sup>e</sup> right syde of the East ende, towarde the Southe. And Hiram made pottes, Houelles and balens.

And Hiram fynished y<sup>e</sup> worke that he was appoynted to make for kyng Sa- lomon vnto the tēple of God: The two pylers wth their scalpes of y<sup>e</sup> two heades that were on y<sup>e</sup> toppes of y<sup>e</sup> pylers: and the two wrethes to couer the two scal- pes of the heades that were on y<sup>e</sup> toppes of the pylers: and foute hūdyed pome- granates for y<sup>e</sup> two wrethes, two rowes of pomegranates for euery wrethe, to couer the two scalpes of y<sup>e</sup> heades that were on the pylers. And he made two bottomes, and lauers vpon the botto- mes: & the sea with twelue oxē vnder it. And therto pottes, schouelles, fleshe ho- kes, & al these vessels did Hiram Abi make for kyng Salomon, for y<sup>e</sup> house of the Lorde, of bryght brasse. In the playne of Jordan did the kyng cast thē, in the thicke erth, betwene Socoth and Zaredatha. And made of all these ves- sels so myghtye greate aboundaunce, that the weyghte of brasse couldenot be rekened.

And Salomon made all the vessels that pertayned to the house of God: the golden altar and the tables with the shew breade vpon them, the candellstyc- kes with their lampes to burne after the maner before the quere, and that of pure golde, and the floures, and y<sup>e</sup> lam- pes, and the snoffers were golde, & that perfecte golde: and the dressynge kny- ues, balens, spones and censers of pure golde. And the ymner dozes of the place most holy, and the inner dozes of y<sup>e</sup> tem- ple to, were golde. And so was all the worke that Salomō made for y<sup>e</sup> house of the Lorde fynished.

And when the worke that Salomō made in the house of the Lorde was fy- nished: then Salomō brought in y<sup>e</sup> gif- tes dedicate by Dauid his father, y<sup>e</sup> sil- uer and the golde, and all the Jewelles, and put them amonge the treasures of the house of God.

The. v. Chapter.

After the stoe houses and the Arke were put in the temple, the Gloze of the Lorde fylled the temple.

 and. viii. a.)

Athen Salomō gathered the elders of Israel together, and al the heades of the trybes, and auncient Lordes among the chylde of Israel, vnto Jerusalem: to byynge the Arcke of the couenaunte of the Lorde oute of þe cite of Dauid whiche is Sion. And all the men of Israel resorted vnto the kyng in the feast of the seuenth monethe. And when all þe elders of Israel were come, the Leuites toke vp the Arcke. And the priestes and the Leuites broughte away the Arcke and the tabernacle of witnessse, and all the holy vesselles that were in the tabernacle. And kyng Salomon and all the congregacion of Israel that were assēbled vnto him before the Arcke, offered shepe and oxē, so manye, that they coude not be tolde or nūbred for multitude.

And the priestes brought the Arcke of the appoyntmente of the Lorde vnto his place, in the quere of the temple, and place moſte holpe: euen vnder the winges of the Cherubes, that þe Cherubes stretched oute their wynges ouer the place of the Arcke, and the Cherubs couered the Arcke & her stauies aboue on hye. And the stauies of the Arcke, were so longe, that they were sene a litle before the quere, but not farre without. And there it remayneth vnto this date.

And there was nothynge in the Arcke saue the two tables which Moyses put therein at Horeb, when the Lord made a couenaunt w þe chylde of Israel, after they were come out of Egypt. And when the priestes were come out of the holy place (the sanctuarie was fylled w smoke) for all þe priestes þe were founde sanctified the selues & dyd not wayte by course. But þe Leuites euery one of the that were vnder Asaph, Heman and Juthun, and among their chylde & brethren, were araid in byſse & sange with Symbales, Psalteries & harpes, stādynge east fro the altar, & with the hundred & xx. priestes blowyng trompettes. And the trumpet blowers & the syngers so agreed, þe it semed but one voice, in praylinge and thankynge the Lorde. And as the voyce of the tromptes, symbales, and instrumentes of melodye arose, & as they prayled þe Lord, howe that he was good, and that his mercie lasteth euer: the house of þe Lord was fylled with a cloude: so þe priestes coude not endure to minister by reason of the cloude. For the glorie of the Lorde had fylled the house of God.

The .vi. Chapter.

The wordes of Salomon to the people, and þe prayer he made to God.

Athen Salomon sayde: the Lorde hath spokē it, how that he wyl dwel in darcknesse. And I haue buylt an habitation for the, and a place to dwel in for euer. And the king turned his face, and blessed þe hole congregacion of Israel, and all the congregacio of Israel stode. And he said: blessed be the Lorde God of Israel, whiche spake w his mouthe to my father Dauid and hath fulfilled it with his handes, for God sayde: * sence the tyme I broughte my people out of the lande of Egypte, I chose no cytpe amonge all the trybes of Israel to buylde an house in, that my name might be there, nether chose I any man to be a ruler ouer my people Israel. * But now I haue chose Jerusalem, to haue my name there, and haue cholen Dauid to be ouer my people Israel.

* And when it was in the herte of Dauid my father to buylde an house for the name of the Lorde God of Israel: But the Lorde sayde to Dauid my father: for as muche as it was in thyne herte, to buylde an house for my name, thou dydest well that thou haddest it in thyne herte. Notwithstandynge, thou shalte not buylde þe house, but thy sonne whiche shall Issue oute of thy loynes, he shall buylde an house for my name. And the Lorde hathe made good his sayinge that he hathe spoken. For I arose in the rowme of Dauid my father, and am sette on the seate of Israel, as the Lorde promysed, and haue buylt an house for the name of the Lord God of Israel. And therein I haue put the Arcke, wherein the couenaunt of þe Lord made with the chylde of Israel, is. And he stepte forth before the altar of the Lorde, in the presence of all the congregacion of Israel, & stretched out his handes. Now Salomon had made a Bāsen

A Brasen pulpyt of fyue cubytes longe, & fyue cubytes broade, & thre of height, and had set it in the myddes of þe great courte, vpon that he stepte and kneled downe vpon his knees before all þe congregacion of Israel, and stretched oute his handes to heauen, and said: * Lorde God of Israel, there is no God lyke the ether in heauen or in erth, which kepst couenaunte, & shewest mercye vnto thy seruauntes, þe walke before the with all their hertes. Whiche hast kept w Dauid my father þe thou promysedest him: thou saydest it with thy mouth, and hast fulfilled it with thyne hande, as it is to se this daye.

Nowe Lord God of Israel kepe with thy seruaunt Dauid my father, the thinges that thou promysedest him, saying: * thou shalt not be without one or other in my syght that shall syt vpon þe seate of Israel. Of this condiction yet, yf thy children wyl take hede to their wayes to walcke in my law, as þe hast walcked before me. Nowe Lorde God of Israel, let thy sayig be true which thou saidest vnto thy seruaunt Dauid. How be it in very dede, can God dwel with man on erthe: * Beholde, nether heaue, or heaue aboue all heauens is able to contayne the: howe shoulde the house then which I haue buylte for the do it. But turne to the prayer of thy seruaunte, & to hye supplicacion (O Lorde my God) to herken vnto the voyce and prayer whiche thy seruaunt maketh before the. That thyne eyes be open ouer this house daye and nyght, and ouer the place of which thou hast said, that þe wouldest put thy name there: to herken vnto the prayer whiche thy seruaunte prayeth at this place: herken therfore vnto the prayers of thy seruaunt, & of thy people Israel, whiche they praye in this place. But heare þe it out of thy dwelling place, euē out of heaue: & whē þe hearest it be merciful. * If a mā synne agāst his neighoure, and an adiuracion be layde to his charge, to adiure him with all, and the adiuracion come before thyne aulter in this house: then heare thou from heauen, and worke, and iudge thy seruauntes, that thou rewarde the euēl, and bypunge his waite vpon his heade, & iustifye the righteous, and geue him accor-dyng to his righteousnesse.

Lyke wyse yf thy people Israel be put to the worse before their enemyes, be cause they haue sinned agāst the: Yet yf they turne and confesse thy name, and make intercession and praye before the in this house: then heare thou from heauen, & be mercyfull vnto þe synne of thy people Israel, and bypunge them agāne vnto the lande whiche thou gauest to them and to their fathers.

* If heauen be shut vp, that there be no rayne, because they haue synned agāst the: yet yf they pray at this place, and confesse thy name, & turne frō their synnes at thy scorpyng: then heare thou from heauen, & be merciful vnto þe synne of thy seruauntes & of thy people Israel, that þe shew them a good waye to walke in, and sende raine vpon thy lande, which thou hast geuen vnto thy people, for an enheritaunce.

If there chaunce darthe in the lande, pestilēce, burnyng or smiting of corne, grasshoppers or caterpyllers, or þe theyr enemyes belege the in þe cities of their owne lād, or what soeuer plage or sicke nesse it be. Then al þe supplicacions and prayers þe shalbe made of al men amōge al thy people Israel, which shal knowe euery man his owne soze, and his owne gresse, & shal stretche oute their handes towarde this house: þe shalt heare from heauen, thy dwelling place, and shalt be merciful, & geue euery mā according vnto al his waye, euē as þe shalt knowe euery mānes herte: for þe onely knowest the hertes of the childe of Adam: þe they maye feare the, and walke in thy wayes as longe as they lyue vpon the erthe, whiche thou gauest to oure fathers.

* Therto a straunger which is not of thy people Israel, yf he come frō a farre lande for thy great names sake, and thy mightye hāde, and stretched oute arme, yf they come (I saye) a praye in this house: thou shalt heare, hym frō heauen thy dwelling place, and shalt do accordyng to al that the straunger calleth to the for. That al the nacions of þe erth maye knowe thy name, and feare the, as doeth thy people Israel: and that it maye be knowne howe that this house whiche I haue buylte, is called after thy name.

When thy people shall go oute to warre, agaynste theyr enemyes & waite that thou shalt sende them. ## The. vii. Chapter.

The fyre consumeth the sacrifice. The Lord appeared to Salomon the seconde tyme.

And when Salomō had made an ende of prayinge, & there came downe fyre from heauen and consumed the burnt offeringe and the sacrifices. And the glorie of the Lord fylled the house: that the priestes coulde not go into the house of the Lord, because the glorie of the Lord had fulfilled the house of the lord. And when all the childre of Israel saw howe the fyre came downe & the glorie of the Lord vpon the house, & stouped with theyr faces to the erthe, vpon the pauement, and bowed them selues and confessed vnto the Lord, that he was good, and that his mercy lasted euer.

And the kynge & al the people offered offeringes before the Lord. So that kynge Salomon offered. xxi. thousand oxen, and an hundred and twenty thousand shepe. And so the kynge and al the people halowed the house of God. And the priestes wayed on their offices, and the Leuites with instrumentes of musycke of the Lord which kynge Dauid made to confesse vnto the Lord & by his mercy lasteth euer, when Dauid gaue prayse thorowe theyr handes. And the priestes blew trompettes fast by them: and all Israel stode. Moreover, Salomon halowed the myddle of the courte that was before the Lord: for there he offered burnt offeringes, and the fat of the peace offeringes, because the brasen aulter whiche Salomon had made, was not able to receaue the burnt offeringes, & the meate offeringes, & the fat.

And Salomon kept a feast the same season of seuen dayes, & all Israel with him, an exceeding great congregacion, euen from Hemath vnto the riuer of Egypte. And the eyght daye they made a gatherynge. for they kepte the halowynge of the aulter seuen dayes, and the feast seuen dayes. And the. xxiij. day of the seuenth moneth, he let the people departe into their tentes, glad and merry in hert, for the goodnesse that the Lord had shewed to Dauid, to Salomō, and to Israel his people. * And so Salomō fynished the house of the Lord, and the kynges house, and all that came in his herte to make in the house of the Lord, and in his owne house, wente prosperously forward.

And the Lord appered to Salomon by nyght & said to him: I haue hearde thy petition & haue chosen this place for my selfe to be an house of sacrifice. Moreover yf I shut by heauen & there be no rayne: or yf I commaunde the locustes to deuoure the lāde, or yf I sende pestilence amonge my people: yet yf my people that are named after my name, shall humble them selues and make intercession, tercession & seke my presence, and turne from their wycked wayes: then wyl I heare fro heauen, & be merciful to their synnes, & wyl heale their lande. Cherto mine eyes shalbe open & mine eares attē vnto y prayers made in thys place. And finally I haue* chosen and sanctified thys house, that my name bee there for euer: and mine eyes and mine heart shalbe there perpetuallye.

And he built Beth hozō the vpper & Beth hozō the nether, and made thē strōg cities with walles, gates & barres. And Baalath, & all the store cities y Salomon had, and al the charet cytyes, & the citles of horsmen, and al y Salomon had lust to buylde in Ierusalē, and Libanon, and thorow out al the lande of hys dominion.

And al the people y were lefte of the Hethites, Amozites, Pherelites, Heuites, & Jebusytes, whiche were not of the chyl dren of Israel: euen the chyl dren of thē, & which were left after thē in y lande, & were not consumed of the chyl dre of Israel, them dyd Salomon make tributaries vnto this daye. Ad the * quene of Saba hearde of the fame of Salomon & came to proue hym wth ryddelles at Jerusalem, wyth a berye great compaigne and with camelles that bare swete odoures and plentie of gold & precious stones. And whē she was come to Salomon, she communed with hym of al that was in her hearte. And Salomon sorled her all her questions, that there was nothyng hydde from Salomon whiche he tolde her not.

And when the quene of Saba had sene the wisdom of Salomon, and the house þe he had buylte, and the meate of hys table and the syttinge of hys seruauntes, and the standyng of his wayters, and their apparel, and his buttelars with their apparel, & his parlour out of whiche he went into the house of þe Lorde, there was no more heart in her.

B And then she sayde to the kyng: the saying whiche I hearde in myne owne lande, of thyne actes, and of thy wysdom, is trueth. But I beleied not the wordes of the vntill I came, & myne eyes had sene it. And see, the one halfe of thy wisdom was not tolde me: thou exceedest the fame that I hearde. happye are thy men, & happye are these thy seruauntes, whiche stande before the alwaie and heare thy wysdome. Blessed be þe Lorde thy God, which had lust to the, to make the kyng on hys seate, vnto the Lorde thy God. Because thy God loued Israell, to make them continue euer, therefore made he the kyng ouer them, to do right and equite.

And she gaue the kyng an hundred and .xx. talentes of golde, and of swete odoures exceedyng greate haboundaunce, wyth precyouse stones, & there was no such swete odoures as þe quene of Saba gaue kyng Salomon. And thereto the seruauntes of Hiram, and the seruauntes of Salomon whiche brought golde from Ophir, broughte also * Algume woode and precious stones. And the kyng made of the Algume wood steyares in þe house of þe Lorde and in the kynges palace, and harpes, and psalteries for syngers. And there was no suche woode sene before in the lande of Juda. And kyng Salomon gaue to þe quene of Saba al her desyre that she asked aboue þe she brought vn to þe kyng. And so she turned & went away to her owne land wth her seruauntes.

The sūme of þe golde þe came to Salomon in one yere, was sixe hundred & lxxvi. talentes of golde, besydes that whiche chapmen and marchauntes brought, & all the kynges of Arabia & dukes of þe contreyes broughte golde and siluer to Salomō. And kyng Salomon made two hundred bockelars of golde, vi. hundred sicles of beten gold to a bokelar: and thre hundred myldes of beten golde, thre hundred sicles of golde to a mylde, and he put them in the house of the forest of Libanon.

And þe kyng made a great seate of iuorie, & ouerlayde it with pure golde. And there were syre steppes to þe seate, wth a fote stole of gold fastened to þe seate: and pomelles on eche syde of þe sytting place, & two lyons standyng by the pomelles. And .xii. lyons stode on þe one syde & on the other, vpon sixe steppes, & there was no suche worke made in any kyngedome.

And all the dynckynge vesselles of kyng Salomō were golde, & al þe vesselles of the house of the forest of Libanō, were pure golde. And as for siluer, it was counted nothing worth in þe dayes of Salomon. For the kynges thyppes went * to Tharsis wyth the seruauntes of Hiram euery thre yere once. And the

F And kynge Salomon passed all the kynges of þe earthe in richesse and wisdom. And al þe kynges of the earth sought þe presene of Salomon, to heare the wysdome that God had put in hys hearte. And they broughte euerye man his present in vesselles of syluer & vesselles of golde, and raymente, harnessse, swete odoures, horyles, and mules yere be yere.

And Salomon had foure thousande maugers of horyles, & charettes for the, and twelue thousande horyle men. And he bestowd the in þe charret cotypes, & w the kyng at Ierusalẽ. And he raygned ouer al þe kynges fro Euphrates vnto the land of þe Philistines, & so to þe borders of Egypte. * And the kyng made syluer in Ierusalem as plenteous as stones, & Cedar trees as plenteous as mulberry trees that grow in þe valeys. And Salomon had horyles brought him out of Egypte and out of all landes.

The folowyns of Rehoboam, and the deapth of hys realm.

iii. Reg. xi. a

AND Rehoboam wente to Sichem: for to Sichem were al Israel come to make hym kynge. And when Ieroboam þe sonne of Nabat, beinge in Egypte heard it (for he was fled for feare of Salomon þe kynge) he returned out of Egypt. And they sent & called him. And so Ieroboam & all Israel came & communed wyth Rehoboam, & sayde: Thy father made vs a greuous poucke: But remitte thou somewhat of the greuous seruyce of thy father, and of hys boue poucke that he putte vpon vs, and we wyll serue thee. And he sayde to them: come agayn after. iiii. dayes to me. And the people departed.

And kynge Rehoboam conceled w the elders that stode before Salomon hys father, whyle he yet lyued, & sayde: what counsell geue ye me, to answer this people agayne? And they tolde him, saynge: yt thou shalt be kynde to this people, & please the & shalt speake lounge wordes to them, they wyll be thy seruautes for euer. But he left the counsel whiche the elders gaue hym, and toke counsel w þe yonge men that were nurled bp wyth hym, & had stand in hys presence, and sayde to them: what aduise geue ye, þe I may answer this people, which haue comuned with me, saying: Abate somewhat of þe poucke whiche thy father dyd put vpon vs.

And the yonge men that were nurled bp wyth hym, talked with him, saying: thus answer the people þe spake to the, sayinge: Thy father made oure poucke heuie: But make þe our poucke somewhat lyghter. Thus wyse answered them: My lytle fyrnger shalbe heuier then my fathers loynes. * For where my father putte a heuie poucke vpon you, I wyll put more therto, and where my father chastised you wyth whypes, I wyll chastyse you wyth Scorpions.

iii. Reg. xii. b

And when Ieroboam and all Israel were come þe thirde day, as the kynge bad, sayinge: Come agayne to me the thirde day. The kynge answered them cruelly, for kynge Rehoboam left the counsel of the aged men, & answered the after the aduise of þe yonge men, sayinge: If my father made youre poucke greuous, I wyll adde therto, & where my father chastised you with whypes, I wyll chastyse you wyth Scorpions. And so the kynge hearkened not vnto the people, for the turninge awaye was of God, þe the Lorde myghte make good hys sayinge, whiche he spake by the hande of Ahiah the Silonite to Ieroboam the sonne of Nabat.

And when all Israel sawe that the kynge wolde not heare them, the people answered the kynge, sayinge: what parte haue we wyth Dauid, or enheritaunss

And therupon all Israell gat them to their tentes, so þ Rehoboam raygned ouer no moo of the chyldren of Israell then dwelte in the cities of Iuda. The kynge Rehoboam sent to the Hadurā that was ouer þ tribute, & the chyldre of Israel stoned hym with stones that he dyed. But kynge Rehoboam made speede and gate him vp to hys charret, to fle to Ierusalem. And so Israel departed from the house of David vnto thys dape.

The. xi. Chapter.

Rehoboā is forbydden to fyght agaynst Jeroboā, he hath xviii. wyues and thre score concubynes: and by them xxviii. sonnes, and thre score daughters.

AND when Rehoboam was come to Ierusalē, he gathered of the house of David & Benjamin, to the numbze of nine score thousand chosen men of war to fyghte w Israell, for to byrnye the kyngdome agayne to Rehoboam. But the worde of þ Lorde came to Semetah the man of God, sayinge: speake vn to Rehoboam the sonne of Salomon kynge of Iuda, & to al Israel that are in Iuda, and to Benjamin & say: thus sayeth þ Lorde. Goe not vp nor fyght w your brethre: But retorne euery mā to hys house, for thys thyng is done of me. And they obeyed the woordes of the Lorde, and returned from goynge agaynst Jeroboam.

AND Rehoboam dwelt in Ierusalē, and buylte stronge cytyes in Iuda: as Bethlehē, Etam, & Chekua, Bethzur, Socho, and Odollā: Geth, Haresah, ziph: Adurahim, Lachis and Alecah, zarah, Aialon and Hebron. Whyche were the stronge cyties of Iuda & Benjamin. And whē he had repayred suche stronge cytyes, he put captaynes in them, and store of vitayle, & of oyle and wine. And he ordered in all cytyes shieldes and speares, & made them excedynge stronge. And so Iuda and Benjamin were vnder hym.

C And the priestes & the Leuites that were in all Israel, resorted to hym, out of all their costes. In so much that the Leuites left their Suburbes & possessions, and came to Iuda & Ierusalem: Abiah. * for Jeroboam & his sonnes had cast them oute frome ministrynge vnto the Lorde. * And he ordeyned him priestes of hylaulters, bothe to felde deuilles and also to the calues whych he hadde made. And after there came of al þ trybes of Israell (suche as their hearties moued thē to seke the Lord God of Israel) to Ierusalē to offer vnto þ Lorde God of their fathers. And so they strenghted þ kyngdom of Iuda, & made Rehoboam the sonne of Salomon myghtye thre yere longe, for thre yere they walcked in the waye of David and Salomon.

And Rehoboam tooke hym Mahalath the doughter of Jerimoth þ sonne of David to wyfe, and Abihail the doughter of Eliab the sonne of Isai, whiche bare hym children: Jeus, Samariah & zaham. And after her he took Maacah the doughter of Absalom, whiche bare hym Abiah, Ethai, ziza, & Salumith. But Rehoboā loued Maacah the doughter of Absalom aboue all hys other wyues and concubynes, for he took xviii. wyues, and thre score concubines, and begat thre score daughters & xxviii. sonnes. And Rehoboā made Abiah the sonne of Maacah the chiefe ruler amonge his brethzen, for to make hym kyng. And he played wisely, and scatered of al hys children thorow out all the countreyes of Iuda & Benjamin in euerye stronge cytye. And he gaue them haboundaunce of vitayle, and asked many wyues.

The. xii. Chapter.

Selac kynge of Egypt robbeth þ temple of þ Lord. Rehoboam dyeth and Abiah his sonne succedeth hym.

AND when Rehoboā had stablished the kyngedome, and made it stronge, he forsoke the lawe of the Lorde, & al Israel with hym, * wherefore the fyfte yere of kyng Rehoboā, Selac the kynge of Egypte came vp agaynst Ierusalem, because they had transgressed agaynst the Lorde, wyth twelue hundred charrettes and thre score thousande horsemen. And the people were without nūbre that came wyth hym oute Egypte, wyth them of Libia, and the Succites and the blacke Mozes. And they toke the strong cities that were in Iu-da, and came to Ierusalem.

B Then came Semeiah the prophete, to Rehoboam & to the Lordes of Iu-da, y were gathered to Ierusalem for feare of Sefac, and sayde to the: thus sayeth the Lorde: ye haue lefte me, and therfore wyll I leue you also in y han-des of Sefac. wherupon the lordes of Israell, & the kynge humbled the sel-ues, and sayd: the Lorde is righteous.
And when y Lord saw y they submitted the selues, y worde of y Lorde came to Semeiah, sayinge: They meke the selues, and therfore I wyll not de-stroye them. But I wyll deliuer them somwhat, and my wrath shal not falle vpon Ierusalem by the hande of Se-fac. Neuerthelater, they shal be hys seruauntes, to knowe what difference is betwene my seruyce, and the seruice of the kyngdomes of other landes.

C And Sefac kynge of Egypte came to Ierusalem, and toke awaye y treasures of the house of the Lorde, & the treasures of the kynges house, & thort-lye he tooke all. And he toke also the shildes of gold* which Salomō made.
In steade of whiche kynge Rehoboam made shylde of brasse, and put them in the keepynge of the captaynes of his garde, whiche wayted in the gates of the kynges house. And as ofte as the kyng wēt to y house of y Lord, y garde wēt & fet the, & brought the agayne vnto y garde chābre. And so because he humbled him selfe, y wrath of y Lorde turned fro hym, & destroyed not all together. And thereto there were manye good thynges yet in Iuda.

D And kynge Rehoboam waxed migh-tye in Ierusalem & raygned. And Re-hoboā was. xli. yere olde when he was kyng, and he raygned. xlii. yeres in Ierusalem, the cytye whych the Lorde had chosen out of all y tribes of Israell to putte hys name there. And hys mothers name was Naamah an Am-monite. * And dyd euell: for he prepared not hys hearte to seke the Lorde.

The actes of Rehoboam, fyrst and last, are writen in the sayinges of Se-meiah the prophete, & of Ado the sear of visions, so much as hys genealogy, and y perpetual warre y was betwene

Rehoboam & Jeroboā burynge their life. And Rehoboam layde hym to slepe wyth hys fathers, and was buryed in the citie of Dauid, and Abiah his sone

The. xlii. Chapter.

The vyctorye of Abiah agaynst Jeroboam.

A He. xlii. yere of kynge Jeroboam beganne* Abiah to raygne ouer Iuda, and he raygned thre yere in Ieru-salem. hys mothers name was Michas-

And there was war betwene Abiah & Jeroboā. And Abiah made a battell w an host of fyghtynge men, of four hundred thousande chosen men. And Jeroboam put him selfe in arape to fyghte agaynst hym, with. viii. hundred thousande picte men and stronge.

And Abiah stode vp vpon zemyra-im an hyll in mouēte Ephraim, & sayde: heare me thou Jeroboam & al Israel.
Becometh it not you to know how that the Lorde God of Israel gaue y kingdome of Israel, to Dauid for euer, eue to him & to his sonnes, wyth a* salted couenaunte. But Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat the seruaunt of Salomō the sonne of Dauid, rebelled agaynst hys Lorde. And there gathered to hym lewd men and vnythystes, and preuailed agaynst Rehoboam the sonne of Salomon: for Rehoboam was yonge and tender hearted, and not stronge ynoughe for them.

And nowe ye thynke to preuaile a-rynges and swete cense: & þe shew bread out in ordre vpo a pure table: and the candlestick of golde wyth þe lampes of the same, to be light euery euē. For we kepe þe watch of þe Lorde our God: but ye haue forsaken hym. Moreouer see, God is wth vs in the forwarde, and his priestes blowe with the trompettes to crye alarum agaynst you. Ye chyldren of Israell, fyghte not with the Lorde God of youre fathers: for it wyll not prosper wyth you.

But for al that, Jeroboam sent mē D priuelye aboute to come behynde vpo them: And so they were before Juda, & þe layers in wayt were behind thē. And when Juda turned and sawe the bat-tel behinde and before, they cryed vnto the Lord, & the priestes blew þe trōpet-tes, & the men of Juda gaue a howte.
And as þe men of Juda howted, God smote Jeroboā & al Israell before Abi-ah & Juda. And þe chyldrē of Israell fled before Juda, & the Lorde deliuered thē into þe hādes of Juda. And Abiah and his people shue a great slaughter of thē:
so þe there were strycken downe dead of Israell fīue hūdrēd thousand chosē men.
And so þe chyldren of Israell were brought vnder at þe tyme, & the chyldren of Juda preyayled: because they leaned vnto þe Lord God of their fathers. And Abiah folowed after Jeroboā & wanne certayne cittyes from hym: Bethel with the townes belongynge thereto, & Jesanah with þe townes þe belonged ther-to, and Ephron with her townes. And Jeroboam recouered no strengthe a-gayn in the dayes of Abiah. And at the laste the Lorde plagued hym, that he died.

And Abiah wared myghtye, & toke
hym. xlii. wyues, and begat. xlii. son-nes and. xvi. doughters. The rest of the actes of Abiah, & hys wyues and his doynges are writtē in the storpe of the prophete Ido. And when Abiah was layed to slepe wyth hys fathers, they buried him in the cytye of Dauid, and Ala hys sonne raygned in hys steade.
In whose dayes the lande was in quiet tenne yere.

¶ The .xlii. Chapter.

¶ And Ala & dyd þe was good & ryght in the eyes of þe Lorde. ¶ hys God, & tooke awaye the haulters of straungers & the hylaulters, & brake the Images & cut downe the groues, and cōmaūded Juda to seke the Lorde God of their fathers, & to do accordynge to the lawe & commaundement. And he putte awaye out of al the cittyes of Juda, the hylaul-ters and the ydolles: for the kingdome was quyet before hym. And he buylte strōge cittyes in Juda: because þe lande was in rest, & he had no warre in those yeres. For the Lord had geuē him rest.

And therfore he sayd to Juda: let vs builde these cittyes & cōpasse them with walles and towres, gates and barres, while we haue the lande in quiet. For we haue sought the Lorde oure God: & because we haue sought hym, he hathe geuē vs rest on euery syde: and so they builde and prospered. And Ala had an armie of men þe bare shilde & speare, out of Juda, thre hundred thousande, & out of Benjamin that bare mylde, & drewe bowes, two hundred & lxxx. thousande, and were all stronge men.

And there came out against thē zarah the black Moorian with an host of ten hundred thousand, & thre hundred cha-rettes, and came as ferre of Darasa.
And Ala wēt out to him, & they put thē in aray to battel in þe valeye of zepha-tah belide Darasa. And Ala cryed vnto the Lord his God, and sayd: *Lord, it is al one wyth the to helpe them that haue no power, with fewe or with ma-nye: helpe O Lorde oure God, for we truste to thee, and in thy name be we come agaynst thes myltitude. Thou art the Lorde oure God, lette not man preuayle agaynst the.

And þe Lorde smote the blacke Mores before Ala & Juda, & they fled. And Ala and the people þe was wyth hym, folowed after them as ferre as Gerar.
And the blacke Mores were ouerthro-wen, & there abode none alyue of them, but were destroyed of the Lord & of his holste. And they carped awaye a myghtye great praye. And they smote al the cittyes rounde about Gerar. For þe feare of the Lord came vpon them. And they robbed all the cytyes, for there was exceedynge

Jehoi exceddyng muche to be robbed in the. Iaphat. And therto they smote þættes of catel, and caried awaye plentye of shepe and camelles, and returned to Ierusalem.

¶ Kyng Ala by the monition of the Prophet Azariah after he had put downe the Idoles, sayeth to the Lorde. He depyeth his mother of her dominion.

AND þæt spirit of God came on Azariah, the sonne of Obed. And he went out agaynst Ala, and sayde to him: hear me Ala, & all Iuda, and Benjamin. The Lorde is wyth you, whyle ye be wyth him, and yf ye shal seke him, he wyl be founde of you: but yf ye shall forsake hym, he wyl forsake you. There wyl come manye dayes in Irael, in whiche *there shalbe no true God, nor prest þæt teacheth, nor anye lawe. And in their tribulacion they shal turne vnto the Lorde God of Irael & shal seke hym, and he shal be founde of them. And in those dayes there shal be no peace to them þæt goe out & in. But greate vexacion vpon the inhabiteurs of al landes. For one nacion shal destroye another, & one citie another: for God wyl trouce them with all aduersite. But plucke you by your heartes, and let not your handes saynte, for your worckes shal be rewarded.

When Ala heard those wordes, and the prophete of Azariah the sonne of Obed the prophete, he toke courage, & put awaye the abhominacions oute of al the lande of Iuda & Benjamin & out of the cities which he wane in mounte Ephraim, and renued the alter of the Lord, that was before the porch of the Lorde. And he gathered all Iuda and Benjamin, & the straungers with them out of Ephraim, Manasseh, and Simeon. For there fell manye to hym out of Irael, when they sawe that God was wyth hym. And they assembled at Ierusalem the thyrde monethe of the yfthene yere of the raygne of Ala. And they offered vnto the Lorde that same tyme of the spoyle whiche they hadde broughte. vii. hundred oxen, and. vii. thousande shepe.

that all that sought not the Lord God of Irael, shulde dye for it, whether he were smale or greate, man or woman. And they sware vnto þæt Lorde with a loude voyce, and howtyng, and with trompettes and hornes. And all Iuda reioyled in the oth, for they had sworne vnto the Lorde with all their heartes, and soughte hym wyth all their lult, & he was founde of them. And the Lorde gaue the rest round about on euery side.

And therto kyng Ala put Maacah his mother oute of auctorite, because she had made an Idole in a groue: and brake downe her Idole & stampit it, and burnt it by the broke Cedron. But they put not the hylalters oute of Irael: neuerthelesse the hearte of Ala was pure all his lyfe. And he brought into the house of God the dedicate gyftes which he & his father had dedicate, in golde, syluer, and other Jewelles. And there was no moze warre vnto the

IN the. xxxvi. yere of þæt raygne of Ala, came Baasa kyng of Irael by agaynst Iuda and buylt Ramah, to the intent þæt he wolde let none þæt pertained to Ala kyng of Iuda to haue passage in & out. Whereupon Ala fet out syluer and golde out of the treasures of þæt house of the Lorde, and of the kynges house, and sent it to Benhadad kyng of Siria that dwelt at Damasco, and saydes: There is a confederacion betwene me and the, and so was betwene my father & thine, wherefore I haue sent þæt syluer and golde, that thou goe and breake thine appoyntment with Baasa kyng of Irael, þæt he maye depart from me. And Benhadad graunted vnto kyng Ala, & sent the captayn of his armie agaynst the cities of Irael. And they bet Aton, Dan, Abelmain, & al þæt strong cities of Nephthali. And when Baasa hearde that he leste buyldyng of Ramah and let his worke cease. And the Asa the kynge toke all Juda, & carped awaye the stones & tymbre of Ramah wherewith Baasa was a building: & he buylte therewyth Gibeā and Haz-phah.

C At that same time Hanani the sear, came to Asa kynge of Juda, & sayde to him: because thou trustest in the kynge of Siria, & trustest not in y<sup>e</sup> Lorde thy God, therfore is the host of the kyng of Siria escaped oute of thyne hande.

u. pa. xlii. c. * Were not y<sup>e</sup> blacke Moyses & they of Libia a greate hoste wyth excedynge many charettes and horsmen: And yet because thou trusteddest in the Lorde, he deliuered them into thyne handes. For the eyes of the Lorde beholde all the earth, to strengthe y<sup>e</sup> heartes of the that are hole wth him. * Herin thou hast done folishly, and therfore from hence forth thou shalt haue warre. Wherupon Asa was wrothe with the sear, and put him in the prison house, for he was displeased wyth hym bycause of that. Mozeouer Asa oppressed certayne of the people the same season.

D The dedes of Asa both first and last, are written in the booke of the kynges of Juda and Israel. And in the. xxxix. yere of hys raygne, Asa fel sicke of his fete, & that his diseale exccadyd. * And therto in his sickenes he asked no counsell of the Lorde but of phisicions. And at the laste Asa fell on slepe wyth his fathers & dyed when he had raygned. xli. yere. And they buryed hym in his own sepulchre, which he had made in the cypre of Dauid, and layed hym in the bedde whych he had fylled with swete odoures of diuerse kindes, made by the crafte of the Potticaries. A ND * Jehosaphat hys sonne raigned in his steade, & was myghtyer then Israel. And he putte souldyers in all the stronge cities of Juda, and set ruelers bothe in the lande of Juda, and also in the cities of Ephraim, whych Asa his father had wonne. And the Lorde was with Jehosaphat, because he walcked in the old wayes of hys father Dauid, and sought not Baals. But sought the Lorde God of hys father, and walcked in his commaundementes: & not after the doyngs of Israel. Therfore y<sup>e</sup> Lorde stablished the kyngdome in his hande, and all Juda brought hym presentes, so y<sup>e</sup> he became excedynge ryche and gloriouse. And hys hearte was courageous in the wayes of the Lorde, & he put downe yet more of the hylalters and groues out of Juda.

And the thirde yere of hys raygne, he sent of his lordes: Benhail, Abdiah, zachariah, Nathanaell & Michaah to teache in the cities of Juda: and wyth them, Semeiah, Nathaniah, zabadi-ah, Alahel, Semiramoth, Jehonathā, Abdoniah, Thobiah, and Thobodoniah Leuites: and with the Elisama & Joram priestes. And they taught in Juda, & had the boke of y<sup>e</sup> lawe of God wth them, & went aboute thorow out al the cities of Juda & taught the people.

And the feare of the Lorde fel vpon all the kyngdomes of the landes that were rounde aboute Juda, that they durst not warre with Jehosaphat. And Jehosaphat became very ryche and gloriouse, a roy ned affinite with Ahab. And after certayne yeres he went downe to Ahab to Samaria. And Ahab shewe shepe & oxen plenteously for him & for the people that came with him, and entreated him to go vp vnto Ramoth in Gilead. And Ahab. kynge of Israel sayde to Jehosaphat kynge of Iuda: wilt thou go with me to Ramoth in Gilead? And he answered him: I wylbe as thou, and my people shalbe as thyne, & we wyl go with the in the warre.

But Jehosaphat sayd vnto the king of Israel: aske I praye the, at þ worde of the Lorde. And the kynge of Israel gathered together of the Prophetes, foure hundred men, and sayde vnto the: Shall we go to Ramoth in Gilead to fyght, or shall I cease? And they sayde, go vp: the Lorde shal deliuer it into the kynges hande. And Jehosaphat sayde, is there yet here neuer a Prophet more of the Lordes, that we myght aske of him? And the kynge of Israel sayde to Jehosaphat: there is yet one, to aske þ Lorde by him: But I hate hym, for he neuer propheseth me good, but allwaie euell, one Mischeah the sonne of Iemla. And Jehosaphat sayde: let not the kynge saye so.

¶ Then the kynge of Israel called one of his chambrelaynes, and sayd: fetch hether quickly Mischeah the sonne of Iemla. And the kynge of Israel, & Jehosaphat kynge of Iuda, sate ether of them on his seate in their apparell, in a thresshynge floure besyde the gate of Samaria, and all the Prophetes prophesyng before the. And one Zedekiah the sonne of Chananah had made hym hornes of yron, and sayd: thus sayth the Lorde: with these thou shalt wynowe Siria vntyll thou hast brought the to nought. And all the Prophetes prophesied euell so, sayinge: Go vp to Ramoth in Gilead & prospere, for the Lorde shall

And the messenger that went to call Mischeah, spake to him, sayinge: behold, the wordes of the Prophetes are pleasant to the kynge with one assent, let thy wordes I praye the, be lyke one of theirs, & speake that which is pleasaut. And Mischeah sayde: as truly as the Lorde lyueth, euell what my God sayeth, that wyl I speake. And when he was come to the kynge, the kynge sayde to hym: Mischeah, shall we go to Ramoth in Gilead to fyght, or shall I be in rest? And he answered: a go ye and prospere, for the Lorde shall deliuer it into youre handes. But the kynge sayde to him: how ofte tymes shall I adiure the, that thou saye nothinge but truthe to me, in the name of the Lord.

¶ Then he sayd: I se all Israel skate red in þ mountaynes, as shepe that haue no shepard. And þ Lorde sayd: these haue no master, let the retorne euery man to his house in peace. Then sayd þ king of Israel to Jehosaphat, dyd I not tell the, that he wolde not prophesye good vnto me, but euell? And he answered: therfore heare ye the worde of the lord. I saw the Lorde syt vpon his seat, and all the cöpanye of heauen standynge on his ryght hande, & on his lefte. And the Lorde sayde: who shall deceaue Ahab, kynge of Israel, that he maye go and be ouerthrowe at Ramoth in Gilead. And whyle one sayd thus, and another that, there came out a spirite & stode before the Lorde, & saide: I wyl deceaue him. And the Lorde sayd to him, how? And he sayd: I wyl go out, and wylbe a lyinge spirite in the mouthes of all his prophetes. And the Lorde sayde, thou shalt deceaue him: and shalt preuayle, go out & do euell so. And now behold, the * Lorde hath put a lyinge spirite in þ mouthes of all these thy prophetes, and yet the Lorde hath spoken euell agaynst the. ## The. xix. Chapter.

After Jehosaphat was rebuked by the prophet Jehu, he called agayne the people to the honouring of the Lorde God.

And Jehosaphat king of Juda returned to his house safe and sounde to Ierusalē. And Jehu y sonne of Hanani the sear, went out agaynst him, and sayd to kyng Jehosaphat: oughtest thou to helpe y wycked, & to loue the that hate the Lorde. In this verely is the wrath of the Lorde vpon the. Neuerthelater, there are good thiges fōude in y, i thad thou hast put awaye groues out of the lade, & hast prepared thine herte to seke God. And as Jehosaphat dwelt at Ierusalē, he wēt to againe & wēt amōg the people fro Bersabe to mouē Ephraim, & brought the agayne vnto y lord God of their fathers. And he set Iudges in y lande, thorowout all the stronge citties of Juda, cytie by cytie, and sayde to the Iudges: take hede what ye do, for ye be not Iudges in y law of mā, but of god, whiche is with you in the wordes of the law. Wherfore let the feate of the Lorde be with you, & take hede and do it. For there is no bityghtwisnesse in the lord oure God * nor regarding of persones, nor takynge of rewarde.

Mozeouer in Ierusalē dyd Jehosaphat set of the Leuites, & of the prestes & of the aūciēt heades of Israel, ouer the customes of the lord & causes of stryfe. And the they returned agayne to Ierusalē. And he charged the, saying: do euē so in the feare of the Lorde, w truthe & a pure herte. And whatsoeuer come to you of youre brethre y dwell in their citties, betwene bloud & bloude, law, cōmaūdes, mēt, ordinaunces & customes: se that ye warne the, y they trespase not agaynst the Lorde, lest wrath come vpon you & on youre brethre. Thus do, and ye shal not offende. And se here Amariah the hpe preste which is heed ouer you in all matters of the Lorde, and zabadiash the sonne of Ismael a ruler in the house of Juda, he is ouer all causes cōcerninge the kyng, with officers of the Leuites before you. Take courage to you, and go vpon it, and the Lorde shalbe with the good.

him selfe to seke the lord, & proclaimed fastynge thorowoute all Juda. And Juda gathered the selues together for to aske counsell of the Lorde. And therto there came oute of all the cyties of Juda to seke the Lord. And * Jehosaphat stode in the cōgregaciō of Juda & Ierusalē in the house of the Lord before the new courte, & sayde: Lord God of oure fathers, art not thou God in heauen, & rapgnest not thou on all þ kingedomes of þ hethen: And in thine hand is power & might, that no man can stande before the. Art not thou oure God, whiche dydest cast out the enhabitors of this lāde before thy people Israel, & gauest it to the seed of Abraham thy louer for euer: And they dwelt therein, & haue built the a temple therein vnto thy name, & sayd: * when euell cometh vpon vs, as the swerde of iudgement, pestilence or hongre: the þf we stande before this house and before the (for thy name is in this house) & shall crye vnto the in oure tribulacion, thou shalt heare and helpe.

And now beholde, the children of Ammon and Moab, and mount Seir, by which * thou woldest not let Israel go, when they came out of Egypte: but they departed from the, and destroyed them not. And se, how they rewarde vs, to come for to cast vs out of thy possession which thou hast possessed vs wyth all. O oure God, wylt thou not iudge them: for we haue no myght agaynst this great cōpanye that cometh agāst vs. Nether wot we what to do: but oure eyes be vnto the.

And as all Juda stode before þ lord with their younge ones, their wyues, & their childre: the spirite of þ Lord came vpo Jahasiel þ sonne of zachariah the sonne of Banaiah, the sōne of Jeiel, the sonne of Mathaniah a Leuite of the sonnes of Alaph, euen as he was in the middes of the cōgregaciō. And he sayd: heke all Juda, & the enhabitors of Ierusalē, & also kyng Jehosaphat. Thus sayth the Lord vnto you: be not aferde, or faynte hearted by reaso of this great multitude: for the warre is not youres, but Gods. And to morowe ye shall go downe to the: se, they come vp at ziz, & ye shall mete them in the flagges of the broke before the wilderness of Ieruel.

Moreouer it belongeth not to you for to fight in this quarell: but stepe forth and stande and beholde the helpe of the Lord which is with you: feare not, nor let youre hertes fayle you, O ye of Juda, and of Ierusalē. To morow go out to them: for the Lord is with you.

And Jehosaphat bowed hym selfe with his face to the cyrie, and all Juda and the enhabitors of Ierusalē fell before the Lord, to bowe them selues vnto the Lord. And the Leuites and the children of the Cahathites, and of the Corahites stode bp, to prayse the Lord God of Israel with a loude voyce on hye. And so they arose erlye in the mornynge, and get the out vnto the wyldernesse of Thekua. And as they wet out, Jehosaphat stode & sayde: heare me Juda, & ye enhabitors of Ierusalē. Beleue in the Lord youre God, & so shall ye continue: & beleue his prophetes, & so shall ye prosper. And he gaue the people counsell, & set the singers of the Lorde & the that praysed i holy apparell, to go out before the armie, & to saye: prayse the Lord for his mercie lasteth euer. And what tyme they beganne to laude & prayse, the the Lord set layers awayte agaynst þ children of Ammon & Moab, whiche layde wayte for the that were of mount Seir, which were come agaynst Juda, to destroye them vtterlye and to wyppen them out. And whē they had made an ende of the enhabitors of Seir, then they holpe to destroye eche other.

And when Juda came to Hazphah in the wyldernesse, they looked vnto the multitude. And beholde, they were deed carcases fallen to the erthe, and none escaped. And Jehosaphat and his people went to robbe awaye the spoyle of them, and founde amonge them abundance of goodes, & rayment and of pleasant Jewelles, & caught fro the more the they could cary awaye: so that they were thre dayes in gatherynge of the spoyle, it was so muche. And þ fourthe daye they assembled in þ valeye of blessinge, for there they blessed the Lorde. And therfore they called þ name of the sayd place the valeye of blessinge, vnto this daye. And so all the men of Juda & Ierusalē returned & Jehosaphat among the thickest of them, for to go agayne

And the feare of God fell in the kyngedomes of all landes, when they had hearde that the Lorde fought agaynst the enemyes of Israel. And so the realme of Jehosaphat was in tranquillite: for his God had geuen hym rest on euery syde.

The rest of the actes of Jehosaphat fyrst & last, are wrytten in the workes of Iehu the sonne of Hanani, whiche noted them in the boke of the kynges of Israel.

After this, Jehosaphat kinge of Iuda ioynded him self with Phoziah king of Israel, whiche was a wycked doat. And he coupled him selfe with him, to make shippes to go to Charfis. And they made the shippes in Azion Gaber. And Elizer the sonne of Dodanah of Marefa, prophesied agaynst Jehosaphat, sayng: because thou hast ioynded thy selfe with Phoziah the Lorde hath broken thy workes. And the shippes were broken that they were not able to go to Charfis.

And he walked in the wayes of the kynges of Israel, like as dyd the house of Ahab (for a doughter of Ahab was his wife) & he wrought euell in the eyes of the Lorde. Howe be it, the Lorde wolde not destroye the house of David, because of the * couenaūt that he had made with David, and as he promised to gyue a lyght to him, and to his sonnes for euer.

* In his dayes the Edomites departed frō vnder the hāde of Iuda, & made thē a king. And after all that, the Lorde smote him in his bowels with an incurable disease. And in processe of tyme, euē about the ende of two yere, his guttes fell out by reaso of his sicknesse: & so he died of euell diseases. But they made him no boncfire, like the boncfires of his fathers. When he begane to raygne, he was. xxii. yere olde, and raygned in Ierusalem. viii. yere. And he walked not pleasauntly, & they buryed him in the cytie of Dauid: but not in the sepulchre of the kynges.

The. xxii. Chapter.

¶ Jehoas raygneth in the rowme of Jehoazam, Jehu kyng of Israel killeth Ohoziah. Athaliah putteth to death all the kynges children. Ohoziah is put to death.

¶ And the * enhabiteres of Ierusalē made Ohoziah his youngest sonne kyng in his stede. For the men of warre * that came with the Arabians in the hoste, had slayne all his elder sonnes. And so Ohoziah y sonne of Jehoza kyng of Iuda, was made kyng. Two & fourtie yere olde was he when he begane to raigne, and raigned one yere in Ierusalem. His mothers name was Athaliah the doughter of Amri. And he walked also in the wayes of the house of Ahab, for his mother was his counseller for to do euell. Wherfore he dyd y displeaseth y Lorde, like to the house of Ahab: for they were his counsellors after the death of his father, to his destruction. And he also walked after their coucell. And Jehoza sone of Ahab kyng of Israel wet to fight with Hazael kyng of Siria at Ramoth i Gilead: & they of Ramoth wounded him. Wherfore he returned to be healed in Jezrael of the woundes which were geue him at Ramoth, whē he fought with Hazael kyng of Siria. And Ohoziah the sone of Jehoazam kyng of Iuda went downe to se Jehoza the sone of Ahab at Jezrael, because he was diseased. * For it was thrust in to Ohoziah of god to go to Jehoza, and that when he was come, he shoulde go out with Jehoza agaynst Jehu the sone of Namī: whome the Lorde had annoynted to destroye the house of Ahab.

vpōn the house of Ahab. He founde the Lordes of Iuda & the sonnes of the brethren of Ohoziah that wayted on Ohoziah, & he slue the. And he sought * Ohoziah, & they caught hym where he was hyd in Samaria, and brought hym to Jehu. And when they had slayne hi they buryed him: because (sayd they) he was the sonne of Jehosaphat, which sought the Lorde with all his hert. And there was none of the house of Ohoziah, that coulde obtayne to be kyng.

* For Athaliah y mother of Ohoziah, whē she saw her sonne was deed, arose & destroyed all the seed of the kyngedome of the house of Iuda. But Jehosabeath the doughter of the kyng toke * Jehoas the sonne of Ohoziah and stalle hym fro amonge the kynges sonnes that were slayne, & put hym & his vource in a sepinge chābre. And so Jehosabeath the doughter of kyng Jehoza & wife of Jehoiada y preeke (because she was the systre of Ohoziah) hyd hym from Athaliah, that she slue him not. And he was yd the hrd in the house of god syre yere. And Athaliah raygned ouer the lande.

The. xxiii. Chapter.

¶ And in the * seuenth yere Jehoziada toke hert, and made a bonde with the capitaynes of hundredes Azariah the sonne of Jehoza, Ismael the sonne of Johana, Azariah the sonne of Obed, Maasiah the sonne of Adaiah and Elisaphat the sone of Zechi. And they wet aboute in Iuda and gathered the Leuites out of all the cytyes of Iuda and the auncient heedes of Israell: and they came to Ierusalē. And all the congregacyon made a bonde wyth the kyng in the house of God. And Jehoiada sayde to them: beholde, the kynges * sonne must raygne ouer the chyldren of Dauid, as the Lorde hath sayde.

This is it therfore y ye shall do: The thirde parte of you preestes & Leuites which come in the Saboth daye, shall kepe the dozes, & a nother thirde parte shall be in the kynges house: and another thirde parte shall be in the gate of y foundacyon, and all the people shall be in the * courtes of y house of y lord. And they brought out the kinges sonne, and put vpon hym the crowne, and the *testimonye, & made hym kynge. And Jehoiada and his sonnes annoynted hym, and sayde: God saue the kynge.

When Athaliah hearde the noyse of the people runnyng and prayng the kynge, she went amonge the people in to the house of the Lorde. And when she saw the kynge stande at his pyller in the enterynge, and the Lordes and trōpettes about the kynge, and all the people of the lande reioysynge, and blowinge with trompettes, and the syngers with instrumentes of musycke teachinge to prayse. Then she rent her clothes, and cryed: treason, treason. And Jehoiada the preste went out with the capitaynes of hundredes that were appoynted to gouerne the hoste, and sayde to them: haue her out wythout y arayes, & who-soeuer foloweth her, let hym be slayne with the swerde. For the preste sayde: slew her not in the house of the Lorde. And they layde handes on her, and whē she was come out to the entrynge of the horsgate besyde the kynges house, they slew her there.

him and all the people, and the kynge, to be the Lordes people. And all the people went to the house of Baal, and destroyed it, and brake his aulter & his ymages, and slue Nathan the preste of Baal, befoze the aulter. And Jehoiada put the offyces of the house of the Lorde in the handes of the prestes the Leuites, whiche * Dauid had deuyded in cōpanyes for the house of the Lord, to offer burnt offerynges vnto y Lorde, as it is wyrtten in the law * of Moses, wyth reioysynge and syngynge, as it was ordeyned by Dauid. And he set porters vnto the gates of the house of the Lord, that none that was vncleane in any poynte shoulde entre in.

And he toke the capitaynes of hundredes and the nobles, and the gouernours of the people, and all the folke of the lande, & brought the king downe out of the house of the Lorde, and they went thorow the hye gate in the kynges house, and set the kynge vpon the seate of the kyngedome. And all the people of the lande reioysed, and the cytie was in tranquillite: but they slue Athaliah wyth the swerde.

But there came a mā of God to him, and sayde: O kyng, let not the armye of Israel go with the: for the Lord is not with Israel, nether with any of his house of Ephraim. Or elles yf thou neades wylt, then go and do it, and make thy selfe stronge to battell: & thou shalt se, & God shall make & fall before thine enemyes. For God hath power to helpe, or to cast doune. And Amaziah sayde agayne to the man of God, what shall we do then, for the hundred talentes which I haue geue vnto the hoste of Israel? And the man of God sayde: the Lord is able to geue the muche more then that.

And then Amaziah seuered the armye that was come to him out of Ephraim, to go home agayn. Wherfore they were excedynge wrothe with Juda, and returned to their owne home in

For the Lorde brought Iuda lowe, because of Ahaz kyng of Iuda, whiche made Iuda naked, and traungressed agaynst the Lorde. And Tilgath palneser kyng of Assur came

vpon him a beleged hym, but preuailed not agaynst hym. For Ahaz toke away a porci<sup>o</sup> out of the house of the Lorde & out of the kynges house and out of the Lordes houses, & gaue vnto the kinge of Assur, though it holpe him not. And therto in the verie tyme of his tribulacyon dyd kyng Ahaz trespase yet more agaynst the Lorde. For he offered vnto the Gods of them of Damasco which bette hym and sayde, because the Gods of y<sup>e</sup> Sirciens healepe them, therfore wyl I offer to the, that they may helpe me also. But they were hys destruccyon, & the destruccyon of al Israel. And Ahaz gathered together the vessels of the house of God, and brake them, and shute vp the doores of the house of the Lorde, and made hyn<sup>e</sup> aulters in al cornets of Ierusalem. And in al the ctyes of Iuda, ctye by ctye he made hylaulters to burne incense vnto other gods, and angred the Lorde God of his fathers. The reste of hys actes & all hys wayes bothe fyrst and laste: are wyrtten in the boke of the kynges of Iuda and Israel. And then they wente in to Hezekiah the kynge, and sayde: we haue censed all the house of the Lord, and the altter of burnt offerings wythal his vessels, and the shewbreaide table wyth all hys apparel: and thereto all the vessels which kynge Ahaz dyd caste a syde when he raygned, and transgressed, the we haue repayred and sanctified: and se, they are before the altter of y<sup>e</sup> Lord. And Hezekiah the kynge rose erly, and gathered the Lordes of the cytye and wente vp to the house of the Lord. And there were broughte seven open, seven rammes, seven lambes and seven kyddes to be a synne offering for the kyngdome, for the sanctuarie and for Iuda. And he commaunded the preestes, the sonnes of Aaron to offer them on the altter of the Lord.

And they slue the open: and the preestes receaued the bloude and sprynkled it on the altter: and they slue the rammes and sprynkled the bloud vpon the altter: and they slue the lambes and sprynkled the bloude vpon the altter. And then they broughte forth the kyddes of the synne offeringe before the kynge and the congregacion, whiche put theyr handes vpon them. And the preestes slue the, and offered the bloude of them vpon the altter, to make satisfaction for all Israel: for the kynge sayde: that the burnt offeringe and the synne offeringe shoulde serue for all Israel. And they set the Leuites in the house of the Lord wyth symbales, psalteries and harpes accordyng to the commaundement of Dauid, and of Gad the kynges sear of visions, and of Nathan the prophete. For so was the commaundemente of the Lord, thow the hande of his prophetes. And so the Leuites stode with the instrumentes of Dauid, and the preestes with trompettes. And Hezekiah commaunded to offer the burnt offeringe vpon the altter. And when the burnt offeringe beganne, the sange of the Lord beganne, and the trolniettes with the instrumentes of Dauid kynge of Israel. And all the congregacion bowed them selues, and the syngers sange, and the trompettes blew, and continued vntyll the burnt offeringe

And when they had made an ende of the burnt offeringe, the kynge and all that were with hym kneled dawe and bowed them selues, and gaue prayse & thanckes. And Hezekiah the kynge and the lordes bade the Leuites to prayse the Lorde with the wordes of Dauid and of Asaph the sear of byspons. And the Leuites praysted that they reioyced agayne, and the other stowped and bowed them selues.

E And Hezekiah answered and sayde: nowe that ye haue fylled youre handes to the Lord, go to and brynge in the sacrificyes and thankoffrynges into the house of the Lorde. And the congregacion broughte in the sacrificyes and thankoffrynges, and all that were wyllynge brought burntoffrynges. And the numbze of the burntoffrynges whiche the congregacion broughte in was. lxx. oxen and an hundred rammes and two hundred lambes: and all for burnt offrynges to the Lorde. And besyde that they dedyicated syxe hundred oxen and thze thousande shepe.

But the preestes wer to few, & were not able to slepe al the burnt offrynges. Wherefore theye brethzen the Leuites holpe them tyll the worke was ended, and vntyll the preestes were sanctified. For the Leuites were purer herted to sanctifye them selues then the preestes. And thereto the burnt offrynges were manye with the fat of the peaceoffrynges, and the drinkeoffrynges that belonged to the burnt offrynges. And so y seruyce pertaynyng to the house of the Lorde wente forwarde. And Hezekiah reioyced and all the people, that God had made the folke so readye: for the thyng was sodenly done.

AND Hezekiah sent to all Israel & Juda: & therto wrote letters to Ephraim & Manasseh, y they should come to the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, to offer passeouer vnto the Lord God of Israel. And the king helde a counsell with hys Lordes and al the congregacion at Jerusalem to * kepe the feaste of passeouer in the seconde moneth. For they coulde not kepe it at that tyme: for there were not preestes ynowe sanctified, nether was the people gathered together to Jerusalem. And the thyng pleased the kynge and all the congregacion. And they decreed that it should be proclaimed thorow oute all Israel from Serlabe to Dan, that they should come and holde the feaste of passeouer vnto the Lord God of Israel, at Jerusalem: for they had not often done it, as it is wyrtten how they should.

And the messengers wente with letters of the hande of the kyng and of his Lordes thorow out al Israel and Iuda, at the commaundement of the king, whiche sayde: ye chyldzen of Israel, turne agayne vnto the Lorde God of Abraham, Isaac and Israel, and so wyl he turue to the remnaunte of you that are escaped oute of the handes of the kynge of Assur. And bee ye not lyke youre fathers and youre brethzen whiche trespassed agaynst the Lorde of youre fathers, whiche therefore gaue them bp that they are wasted as ye se. Wherefore be not styffnecked lyke vnto youre fathers, but yelde your selues vnto the Lorde, and come to hys holpe place whiche he hath sanctified for euer, and serue the Lord your God, that hys wrath maye turne frome you. For yf ye turne vnto the Lorde, then youre brethzen and youre chyldzen shal fynde compassion in the presence of the that holde them captiue, that they may come agayne vnto thys lande: for the * Lorde your God is full of mercye and compassion, and wyl not turne his face frome you, yf ye turne agayne to hym.

And the postes wente from cytpe to cytpe thorow out the land of Ephraim and Manasseh, and euen vnto Zabulon. But they laughed them to skorne and mocked them. Fewer the lesse yet diuerse of Asser, Manasseh and of Zabulon mened them selues and came to Jerusalem. And thereto the hande of God was in Iuda, to make them of one accord to do the commaundement of the kynge and the capitaynes, whiche was accordyng to the worde of the Lorde. And so there assembled to Jerusalem

And they arose and put a waye the *alters that were in Jerusalem. And thereto all the incense they dyd awaye and caste them into the broke Cedron. And they slue pascheouer þ̄ fourtene daye of the seconde monethe. And the prestes and Leuites sanctified them selues for shame, and brought in þ̄ burnt-offerynges into the house of the Lorde. And they stode in theyr standynge after theyr maner accordynge to the lawe of Moyses the manne of God. And the prestes sprynckled the bloude receauynge it of the handes of the Leuites. And because there were many in the congregacyon that wer not sanctified: and therfore dyd the Leuites sleue pascheouer for all that were not cleane, to sanctify them to the Lorde.

There was very much people oute of Ephraim, Manasseh, Issachar and Zabulon that were not cleane, and yet dyd eate pascheouer otherwyse then wytyng specyfeth. But Hezekiah prayed for them, and sayd: the good Lorde be mercifull to all that let theyr hertes to seke the God that is the Lorde God of their fathers, thoughe they do it not accordynge to the clenness of the holy place.

¶ And the Lord heard Hezekiah and healed the people. And so the chyldren of Israel that were found at Jerusalem, held the feast of swete breade seven dayes with great gladnesse and the Leuites and the prestes praysted the Lorde daye by day wyth lowde instrumentes.

And Hezekiah spake hartely vnto the Leuites that had good vnderstandynge of the Lorde. And they dyd eate that feaste seven dayes longe and offered peaceofferynges and thanked the Lorde God of theyr fathers. And the hole assemble toke counsell to kepe seven dayes moore: and they held those seven dayes with gladnesse. For *Hezekiah kynge of Iuda gaue for heaucofferynge to the congregacion a thousand oxen and seven thousand shepe. And the Lordes gaue to the congregacion for heaucofferynges a thousand oxen & ten thousand shepe. And the prestes sanctified them selues, that they wer ynow,

And all the congregacion of Iuda with the prestes and Leuites, and all the congregacion that came oute of Israel and the straungers, both that came oute of the lande of Israel and that dwelt in Iuda, reioysed: and there was great ioye in Jerusalem. For sence the tyme of Salomon the sonne of Dauid kynge of Israel, it happened not so in Jerusalem. And the prestes and the Leuites arose, and blessed the people, & theyr voyce was heard of the Lorde, and theyr prayer wente vp vnto his holy dwelling place heauen.

¶ The xxii. Chapter.

¶ And when they had finished all thys: then all Israel that were founde in the cyties of Iuda, went oute and brake * the images and cut downe the groues, and al to brake the hyllalters and the other alters thorow oute all Iuda and Benjamin, Ephraim and Manasseh, vntyll they had made an end of them. And afterwarde al the chyldren of Israel returned euery man to his possession in theyr owne cytyes.

And Hezekiah set the prestes and the Leuites in theyr ordre to wayte by course, euery man accordynge to his office, whether preste or Leuite: for the burnt-offerynges and peaceofferynges, and to mynistre, and to thanke and to praye in the gates of the lodge of the Lorde. And the kynge gaue a porcyon of his substance for burnt-offerynges at mornynge and euen, and for burnt-offerynges on the Sabothe dayes, and new mones, and other solempne feastes, accordynge * as it is wytyen in the law of the Lorde. And he bade the people that dwelte in Jerusalem, to geue the parte of the prestes and Leuites, that they myght be mayntened in the law of the Lorde. And as sone as the worde came abroad the chyldren of Israel brought aboundaunce of fyrste frutes of corne, wyne, oyle and honye, and of all maner of frutes of the felde: and the tythes of al maner of thynges brought they in plenteously. And the chyldren of Israell and Juda that dwelte in the cyties of Juda, they also brought in y cythes of oren and shepe, and cythes of dedicate thinges which were dedicated to the Lord their god, & put them on heapes. In the thyrz moneth they beganne to laye the heapes, and fynished them the seuenth moneth.

And when Hezekiah and the Lordes came and saw y heapes, they blessed the Lorde and his people Israell. And Hezekiah questioned with the pcestes and the Leuites, concernynge the heapes. And Azariah the chiefe pcest of y house of zadock answered him and sayd: sence they beganne to bring the heaueoffringes into the house of the Lord, we haue eaten and had ynoughe, and yet leste a boundaunce, for the Lorde hath blessed hys people and therof is thys heape leste. And Hezekiah bade dresse vp the store houses aboute the house of the LORD. And so dyd, and carped in the heaueoffrynges and the cythes and the dedycat gyftes euen of ydelyte.

Ouer whiche Chonaniah the Leuit had the rule with Semet hys brother nexte to hym. And Jehiel, Azariah, Razbath, Asaell, Jerimoth Josabad, Eliell, Jesmachiah, Mahath and Bananiah were ouersears ordeyned by Chonaniah and Semet hys brother, at the apoyntment of Hezekiah the kynge, and Azariah the ruler of the house of God. And Chozethe sonne of Jemima the Leuit porter of the East dore, had the ouer syght of the frewyllofferynges of God, to geue heaueoffrynges vnto the Lord, and was ouer thynge moste holy. And vnder hym were Eden, Miniamin, Jesua, Semetiah, Amariah and Secheziah in the cyties of the pcestes of theyr ydelyte, to geue to theyr brethre theyr porcions, as well to the small as to the great.

And to the males also that were rekened from thre yere and aboue, (amonge all that wente into the house of the Lord) they should geue day by day, to do seruice & to wayte by course. And to the pcestes that were rekened in the householdes of their fathers from twentye yere & aboue, to wayte when theyr courses came. And to them that were rekened thozowe quite all theyr babes, wyues, sonnes and doughters thozowe out all the congregacion. For to the ydelytie of them dyd men comynge theyr sanctified gistes. And therto amonge theyr chyldren of Aaron the pcestes were men named by name in the felde of the suburges of all theyr cyties, cytie by cytie, (the men whose names wer expressed afore) for to geue porcions to all the males of the pcestes, and to all that were rekened amonge the Leuites.

And of thys maner dyd Hezekiah thozow out all Juda, and dyd that was good, right and truthe, before the Lord his God. And in all the worckes that he began in the seruice of the house of god, to seke his God after the law and commaundement, that dyd he wyth all hys herte, and prospered.

The xxxii. Chapter.

Sennaherib, whiche should haue besieged Jerusalem is streken of the Angell. Hezekiah dyeth after whome succedeth Manassch.

After these dedes and truthe, Sennaherib kynge of Assur came and entred * in to Juda and pyched agaynst the strong cyties and thought to drawe them to hym. And when Hezekiah sawe that Sennaherib was come, and that he was purposed to fyghte agaynst Jerusalem: he toke counsell with hys capitaynes & men of myght, to stop the water of the fountaines that were without the cty: & they were content to helpe hym. And so there gathered much people together and stoppe all the welles, and the broke that ran thozow the myddes of the lande, entending that the kiges of Assur should not finde muche water when they came. And he went to lustelye and builde by the walle where it was broken, and made towres aboue vpon, and yet another walle without, and repayred Belo the ctye of Dauid, and made manye dartes and shyldes.

And he set Capitaynes of war ouer the people and gathered them to gether into y large strete of the gate of y ctye & spake sentely to them, saying. Plucke vp youre hertes and be strong: Be not afrayde oz in any wise discouraged for dreade of the kynge of Assur, and of the greates multitude that is wyth hym, * for there is one greater with vs then with him. With * hi is an arme of flesh:

lande, God lette him: to tēpte him that al þ was in his herte myght be knowē.

The rest of the dedes of Hezekiah and his goodnesse: are wrytten in the vision of Iſaiah the prophete the sonne of Amoz in the boke of the kynges of Juda and Iſrael. And then Hezekiah laid him to rest with his fathers, and they buryed him in the hest sepulchre of the sonnes of David: and all Juda and the enhabiteres of Ierusalē dyd hym worship at his death. And Manasseh his sonne raygned in his steade.

The. cxxiii. Chapter.

Manasseh is taken prisoner, and after he cometh oute he destroyeth the ydoles: he openeth, and after hym succedeth Amos. After Amos was kyled of his owne people, Josiah his sonne raygneth for hym.

Manasseh was. xii. yere olde when he was made kyng, and raygned. lb. yere in Ierusalē.

* And he dyd wickedly in the syghte of the Lorde, lyke vnto the abhominacions of the hethen, whiche the Lorde cast out before the children of Iſrael. For he went to, and buylte agayne the hylaulters whiche Hezekiah his father had broke downe. And he rered vp aulters vnto Baals, and made groues and bowed him selfe vnto all the host of heauen and serued them. And he buylte aulters in the house of the Lorde: Of whiche the Lorde had said: * in Ierusalem shall my name be for euer. And he made aulters vnto all the hoste of heauen in the two courtes of the house of the Lorde. And he burnt his childre in fyre in the valey of þ sonnes of Hennon. And he obserued dysmalle dayes, & occupied wytchcraft and soylcye, and maintained workers w spirites, & sears of fortunes: & wrought much euil in the syghte of the Lord, to angre him w all.

And he put the kerued Image of an Idole whiche he made, in the house of God. Of which house God said to David and to Salomon his sonne: in this house here in Ierusalem which I haue chosen oute of all the tribes, * I wyll put my name for euer, & no more bryng the seate of Iſrael fro of the lāde which I haue ordeyned for youre fathers: If so be they shalbe diligēt to do al I haue commaunded by Moyses in all the lawe ordynauces and maners. But Manasseh made Juda and the enhabiteres of Ierusalem to erre, and to do worse then the heathen whiche the Lorde destroyed before the children of Iſrael. And when the Lorde spake to Manasseh and to his people, they attended not to hym.

Wherfore the Lorde broughte vpon them the Capitaynes of the hoste of the Kyng of Assur, whiche toke Manasseh in an holde, and bounde him with chaynes, and carped him to Babilon. And whē he was in tribulaciō, he besought the Lorde hys God, and humbled hym selfe exceedyngly before the God of his fathers, and made intercession to hym: and he was entreated of hym, & hearde hys prayer, and broughte hym agayne to Ierusalem into hys kyngedome. And then Manasseh knewe howe that the Lorde was the very God.

After that he buylte a wall without the cytye of David, on the west syde of Gihon in the broke and so forth to the fyste gate and rounde aboute * Ophel and broughte it vp of a berre greate heygth, and put captaynes of warre in all the stronge cytyes of Juda. And he toke awaye straunge Gods and the Idoles oute of the house of God, and all * the aulters that he had buylte in the mounte of the house of God, and in Ierusalem, and cast them oute of the cite. And he made an aulter vnto the Lorde, and sacrificed thereon peace offeringes, and thanke offerynges, & charged Juda to serue the Lorde God of Iſrael. Neuerthelesse, the people dyd offer styll in the hylaulters, howe be it vnto the Lorde theyr God onely.

The rest of þ actes of Manasseh, and hys prayer vnto his God, and þ wordes of the sears of visciōs that spake to him in the name of the Lord God of Iſrael, are wrytten amonge the deades of the kynges of Iſrael. And his prayer, and howe that he was hearde, and all hys synne and trespase, and þ places where he made hylaulters, and set vp groues and kerued Images (before he was mekened) are wrytten amonge the deades of the sears of visciōs. And when Manasseh was layde to reste with hys fathers, they buryed hym in hys owne house: and Amos hys sonne raygned in hys rowme. Amos was. xii. yere olde, when he beganne to raygne, and raygned two yere in Ierusalem.

And he dyd that dyspleased the Lorde, like vnto Manasseh his father, for Amō sacrificed to all the kerued Images, whiche Manasseh his father made, and serued them, and mekened not him selfe before the Lorde, as Manasseh hys father had mekened him selfe: But Amō trespassed greatlie. Wherfore his owne seruauntes cōspired against him, & slue him in his owne house. And y people of the lande slue all that had conspired against king Amō. ## ¶ The. xxxiii. Chapter.

Josiah* was made kyng when he was. viii. yere olde, and he raygned in Ierusalē. xxi. yere. And he dyd that pleased the Lorde, and walked in the wayes of David his father, bowynge nether to the ryght hande or to the lefte. In so muche that the eyght yere of his raygne, (when he was yet a lad,) he beganne to seke after the God of David his father. And in the twelue yere he beganne to pource Iuda and Ierusalem of hylaulters, groues, kerued ymagēs, and Images of metal: so that they brake downe the aulters of Baals, euē in his p̄sence, and y ydoles that were vpon them, he caused to be destroyed. And the groues, kerued Images, and Images of metal he brake, and made dust of thē, and strawed it vpon y graues of thē that had offered to thē. And he burnt the bones of the priestes vpon the aulters, and clenſed Iuda & Ierusalem. And euē so dyd he in the cytyes of Manasseh, Ephraim, Simeon, & of Nephtali therto. And in the wylder- nesses of them rounde about he plucked a sondre the aulters & the groues & dyd beate them and stampe them to powdre, and bete downe the ydoles thoroowe out all the lande of Israel: & then returned to Ierusalem agayne.

And in the. xviii. yers of his raigne, when he had purged the lande, & the temple* he sent Saphan the sonne of Azariah, and Maasiah y gouernoure of the cytie, and Joah the sonne of Joahaz the recorder, to repayre the house of y Lorde his God. And when they came to Helkiah the hye priest, men deliuered thē the money y was brought in to y house of God, which the Leuites y kept y enteris es, had gathered of y handys of Manasseh, & Ephraim, & of all y yet remayned in Israel, & of al Iuda & Bēiamin, & of the enhabitors of Ierusalem. And they put it in y hādys of y worckemē y had the ouersyght of y house of y Lorde, which gaue it to the labourers y wrought on the house of y Lorde, to repayre & mēde it, and to masons and carpēters to bye hewed stone, & tymbre for to make cou- ples and beames for the houses which the kynges of Iuda had destroyed: And the mē wrought in y worcke of fidelite.

And the ouer sears of thē to courage them forwarde, were Jahath & Obadiah Leuites, of y childre of Merari: and Secharia, and Mesulam, of y children of the Cahathites, and as manye other of y Leuites: as coulde skylle of instru- mentes of Musick. And ouer y bearers of burthens, and ouer al that wrought, in whatsoeuer worckemanship it were, were there scribes, officers, and porters of the Leuites.

And as they brought out the money that was brought into the house, Helkiah the priest* founde the boke of the lawe of the Lorde geuen by Moles. And Helkiah answered and said to Saphan the scribe: I haue fōude the boke of the lawe in the house of the Lorde, and gaue the boke to Saphan. And Saphan cari- ed the boke to the kyng, and broughte the kyng worde agayne, saying: al that was committed to thy seruauntes, that do they. And they haue powred oute the money that was founde in the house of the Lorde, and haue deliuered in to the handes of the ouer sears of the worckemē. And then Saphan the scribe shew- ed the kyng, saying: Helkiah y priest hath geuen me a boke, and he reade it before the kyng.

And when the kyng had hearde the wordes of the lawe, he tare his clothes, and commaunded Helkiah & Ahikā the sonne of Saphan, and Abadō the sonne of Micah, and the layde Saphan the scribe and Alaiā a seruaūt of y kynges, sayinge: go & enqurre of the Lorde for me and for them that are lefte in Israel and Juda, concernynge the wordes of the boke that is founde. For greate is the wraethe of the Lorde that is fallen vpon vs, because oure fathers kept not the worde of the Lorde, to do after all that is wyrtten in this boke.

And Helkiah with them that pertayned to the kynge went to Holdah a prophetesse, wyfe of Selum the sonne of Thekohath, the sonne of Hasarah keeper of y wardrope (which prophetesse dwelt in Jerusalem in the seconde warde) and they comuned so with her. And she sayd vnto them: thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel, tel ye the man that sente you to me. Euen thus sayeth the Lorde: se, I wil byynge euil vpon this place, & vpon the enhabitors therof, (euil al y curses that are wyrtten in the boke which they haue reade before the kynge of Juda) because they haue forlaken me, & haue offered vnto other gods, to angre me w all maner worckes of theyr hads, therefore is my wraath set on fyre against this place, and shall not be quenched.

And as for the kynge of Juda which sent you to enquire of the Lorde, so shall ye saye vnto him: thus sayeth y Lorde God of Israel, concernynge the wordes whiche thou hast hearde. Because thine hert dyd melt, and thou dydest meke thy selfe before god, whē thou heardest his wordes against this place and against the enhabitors therof: and humbledest thy selfe before me, & tarest thy clothes, and wepest before me, y haue I hearde also sayeth the Lorde. Beholde, I wyl take the to thy fathers, and thou shalt be put in thy graue in peace, and thine eyes shall not se all the myscheue that I wyl byynge vpon this place, and vpon the enhabitors of the same. * And they brought the kynge worde againe. Then the kynge sent and gathered together al the elders of Juda and Jerusalem. And the kynge went vp in to the house of the Lorde, & all the men of Juda, & the enhabitors of Jerusalem, & the priestes and Leuites, and all the people greate and smalle: and reade all the wordes of the boke of the couenaunte that was founde in the house of the Lorde. And the kynge stode at his stadyng, and made a couenaunte before the Lorde, to folowe the Lorde, and to kepe his commaundmentes, his wytnesses, & his statutes, with all his herte, and w al his soule, and to fulfyll the wordes of the appoyntment wyrtten in the said boke.

And he made to come forth the all that were founde in Jerusalem, & Benjamin, and the enhabitors of Jerusalem promysed to kepe the couenaunte of y God which was the God of their fathers. And Joziah put away al maner of abominacions out of al landes y pertained to the childre of Israel, and brought all that were founde in Israel, to serue the Lord their god. And they turned not a syde from after the Lord God of their fathers, as longe as he lyued.

Joziah holdeth passeouer. He fyghteth agaynst the kynge of Egypt, and dyeth. The people bewaile hym.

And Joziah helde the passouer vnto y Lorde in Jerusalem, and they que passeouer in the. xiiii. daye of y fyrst moneth. And he set the priestes in theyr offices, and ayded them in the seruice of the house of the Lorde. And he sayde to the Leuites (that taught thorow out al Israel and were sanctified vnto y lord:) put the holy arcke in the house whiche Salomon the sonne of Dauid kynge of Israel dyd buylde, ye shall beate it no more vpon your shoulders. Wherfore nowe serue the Lorde youre God & hys people Israel. forwarde the sayde daye in offerp̄nge passeouer of burnte offerp̄nges vpon the aulter of the Lord, accordyng to the commaundement of kyng Josiah.

And so the chyldren of Israel that coulde be founde, offered passeouer the same tyme, and kepte the feast of swete breade seven dayes.
And there was no passeouer lyke to that, kepte in Israell from p̄ tyme of Samuel p̄ prophete: ne ther dyd anye of the kynges of Israel holde suche a passeouer feast as did Josiah & the p̄riesters & Leuites & al Juda, & as muche of Israel as coulde be had, and the enhabiteres of Jerusalem. And this passeouer was holden in the xviii. yere of the raygne of Josiah.

* After all this, when Josiah had flied nyghed p̄ temple, Necho kyng of Egypt came bp to fight agaynstē Carcamis vpon Euphrates, and Josiah went out agaynstē him. And the other sente messengers to him, sayyng: what haue I to the nowe at this tyme, but agaynst an house with whome I haue warre, and God bad me haste. Leauē of therfore and medle not with God which is with me, leaste he destroye p̄.

Neuer thelesse, Josiah turned not his face fro him, but made him readye to fight with him, and herkened not vnto the wordes of Necho oute of p̄ mouthe of God. And when he was come to spyght in the valey of Megido, the shoters shotte agaynstē the kyng Josiah.
And the kyng sayde to his seruantes: carye me awaye, for I am sore hurte. And hys seruantes had him out of p̄ charēt, and put hym in a nother, and broughte him to Jerusalem where he dyed, and was buryed in the sepulchre of his fathers. * And all Juda and Jerusalem mourned for Josiah. And Jeremiah lamented Josiah, and all syngyng men & syngyng wenmen speake of Josiah to this daye, and made it an ordynauce in Israel: & they be

The priestes. The children of Jedajah of the house of Jesua, nyne hundred and thre and seuentie: the chyldren of Emet, a thousande and two and fyftie: the children of Phasur, a thousand and two hundred, and seven and fourtye: the chyldren of Harim, a thousande and seuentene.

C The Leuites. The children of Jesua and Cadmiel of the children of Hodaniah, foure and seuentie. The singers, the children of Alaph, an hundred and eyght and twentye. The children of the doorekeepers. The childre of Selum, the children of Ater, & chyldren of Talmon, the children of Akub, the chyldren of Hatifa, and the children of Sobai: all together an hundred and nyne and thirtie.

of Barcon, the chyldren of Gedell, the chyldren of Saphattiah, the chyldren of Hattyll, the chyldren of Pochereth of Zebaim, the children of Ami. All the Nethinims and the children of Salomons seruauntes were al together, thre hundred and two and nyntye.

And these went vp also, Thelmelah, Thel Harfa, Cherub, Addo and Emet. But they could not shewe their fathers house nor theyr sede, whether they were of Israel. The children of Dalaiab, the children of Tobiah, the children of Recoda, fyve hundred and two and fyftie. And of the children of the priestes. The chyldren of Hobatah, the childre of Hakoz, the children of Berzilai, which took one of the daughters of * Berzilai the Gileadite to wyfe, and was counted amonge the same names: these soughte the registryr of their byrthe, and founde none, therfore were they put from the priesthode. And Hathirsatha sayd vnto them, that they shoulde not eate of the most holy, til there rose vp a priest with the * lyght and perfectnesse.

The whole congregacio as one man, was two and fourtye thousande, thre hundred and thre score: beside their seruauntes and maydens, of whome there were seven thousande, thre hundred and seven and thirtie. And they had two hundred syngynge men and women, seven hundred and fyve & thirtie horses, two hundred and fyve and fourtie mules, foure hundred and fyve and thirtie Camels, and fyve thousande, seven hundred and twentye asses. And certayne of the chiefe fathers, when they came to the house of the Lorde at Ierusalē, they offered wyllynglye vnto the house of God, that it shoulde be set in his place, and gaue after their abylyte vnto the treasure of the worcke, one & thre score thousande drammes, and fyve thousande pounce of syluer, and an hundred priestes garmentes. So the priestes and the Leuites, and certayne of the people and the syngers, and the porters, and the Nethinims dwelte in theyr cyties, and all Israel in their cyties.

And when the buylders layde the foundation of the temple of the Lorde, the priestes stode in their araye, with trompettes. And the Leuites the chyldren of Asaph with cymbales, to praise the Lorde * after the maner of Dauid kynge of Israel. And they sange together, geuyng prayse and thanks vnto the Lorde, because he is gracious, and because his mercye endureth for euer vpon Israel. And all the people shouted loude in praylynge the Lorde, because the foundation of the house of the Lorde was layde. Manye also of the olde priestes and Leuites & aunciet fathers, which had sene the first house: when the foundation of this house was layed before theyr eyes, wepte with a loude voyce. And many shouted with ioye, so that the noyse gaue a greate sounde, in so muche y<sup>e</sup> the people coude not knowe the ioyful sounde for y<sup>e</sup> noyse of the wepyng amonge the people: for the people shouted with a loude crye, so that the noyse was herde farre of.

The buyldynge of the temple is hindered, and let.

BUT * when the aduersaries of Iuda and Ben Jamin heard, that the chyliden of the captiuite buylded the temple vnto the Lorde God of Israel, they came to zorobabel and to the principal fathers, and said vnto them: We wil builde with you: for we seke the Lorde youre God lyke as ye do. And we haue done sacrifice vnto him, sence the tyme that Assor hadon the kynge of * Assur brought vs vp hyther. But zorobabel & Iesua and the other aunciet fathers of Israel answered them: It belongeth not to you, but to vs to buylde the house vnto our God: for we oure selues wyll buylde as lone vnto the Lord oure God of Israel, * as Cyrus the kynge of Persia hath commaunded vs.

And in the tyme of Artaxerxes, wrote Bisellam, Mithridates, Tabeel and the other of their counsell vnto Artaxerxes the kyng of Persia. But þ scrip- ture of the letter was wyrtten in the Siriens speache, and was interpreta- ted in the language of the Siriens. And thys is the summe of the let- ter that they sente vnto kyng Ar- taxerxes.

Thy seruauntes the men on thys syde the water and in Ceneeth. Be it knowen vnto þ kyng, that the Jewes are come vp frome the to vs vnto Je- rusalem a citie sedicious & froward, & buylde the same, and laye the founda- cion of the walles thereof, and repayre them. But now that we all are thereby whiche des- troyed the temple, we wolde no lon- ger se þ kynges dishonour. Therefore sent we out, & caused the kyng to be certified therof: that it maye be sought in the Chronicles of thy progenitours and so shalte thou fynde in the same Chronicles, & perceaue, þ thys cytye, is sedicious & noysome vnto kynges & lades, & þ they cause other also to rebel of olde, & for þ same cause was this ci- tie destroyed. Then sent the kyng an answere vn- to Rehum the chaunceler, and Sam- sai the scribe, and to the other of their counsell þ dwelte in Samaria, & vnto the other beyond the water. Peace and salutacion. The letter whiche ye sente vnto vs, hathe bene opelye read befoze me, & I haue comaunded to make lea- che: and it is founde, þ this citie of olde hath made insurreccio agaynst kiges, & howe þ vproze & rebellion hathe bene committed therein. There haue bene mightie kings also at Jerusalem which haue raygned ouer al that is beyonde the water, & tolle, tribute and yerely custome was geuen vnto them. Do ye now after this commaundement, for- byd the same men, that the citie be not buylded, tyll I haue geuen comaunde- ment. Take hede now that ye be not negligent herein, lest the kyng haue harme there thorowe.

And when kyng Artaxerxes letter was reade befoze Rehum þ chaunceler and Samlai the scribe and their coun- cel, they wente vp in all the hast to Je- rusalem vnto the Jewes, and forbad them with violence and power. Then ceased the worke of the house of God at Jerusalem, & continued so vnto the second yere of Darius kyng of Persia.

The .v. Chapter.

By the exortacion of Aggeus and zachary is the temple buylded agayne.

The prophetes, Aggeus and zachary the sonne of Abo, propheticd vnto the Jewes, that were in Juda & Jeru- salem, in the name of the God of Isra- el. Then gat vp zorobabell the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesua the sonne of Josedec, and beganne to buylde the house of God at Jerusalem, and wyth them the prophetes of God which hel- ped them. At the same tyme came to them Thathanai the captayne on this syde the water, and Starbuzanai, and their councelers, and sayde thus vnto them: Who hathe commaunded you to buylde this house, and to make vp the walles therof? But the eye of their God came vpon the Elders of the Jewes, that they coulde not cause them to cease, tyll the matter was brought before Darius, and tyll they had answered by letters therunto.

This is the coppe of the letter that Thathanai the captayne on this syde the water, and Stharbazanai, and their counceilers of Apharsach (whiche were on this syde the water) sent vnto kynge Darius. And this is the entent of the wordes þ they sente vnto hym: Vnto Darius the kynge, all peace.

Be it knowen vnto the kynge, that we came in to Jewrye to the house of the greate God, whych is buylded wyth rough stone, & beames are layed in þ walles, & the worcke goeth fast forthe, & prospereth in their hādes. We asked therfore the Elders & sayd vnto them: Who hath commaunded you to buyld this house, and to make by the walles therof? We asked their names also, that we might certifie the, and wrytten the names of the men that were their cūclers.

But they answered vs with these wordes, & said: We are the seruauntes of the God of heauen & earth, & bulde the house þ was buylded manye yeres agoe* whiche a great kynge of Israel buylded and set vp. And after oure fathers had prouoked the God of heauen vnto wrath, he gaue them ouer into the hande of Nabuchodonozor þ kyng of Babilon the Chaldee, whiche brake downe this house, and carped the people awaye vnto Babilon.

But in the firste yere of Cyrus the kynge of Babilon, the same kynge Cyrus commaunded to buyld this house of God, for þ vesselles of golde & syluer in þ house of God, which Nabuchodonozor toke out of þ temple at Jerusalem, and brought thē into þ tēple at Babilon, those dyd Cyrus the kynge take out of the temple at Babilon, and deliuered thē vnto Salsbazar by name, whō he made captayne, & sayd vnto hi: Take these vesselles, goe thy waye and bringe them to the temple at Jerusalem, and let the house of God be buylded in hys place. Then came the same Salsbazar and layde the foundation of the house of God at Jerusalem.

Since that tyme hath it bene in buyldinge, and yet it is not synished. Yf it please the king now, let there be search made in þ kinges treasure house which is at Babilon, whether it haue bene kinge Cyrus commaundemēt, that the house of God at Jerusalem shoulde be buylded, & sende vs the kynges mynde concernynge the same.

The. vi. Chapter.

At the commaundement of Darius kyng of Persia, after the temple was buylded and dedicate, the chylde of Israel kept the feast of unleuened bread.

When commaunded kynge Darius, þ search shuld be made in þ librarie of the kynges treasure house, which lay at Babilō. So at Egbathanis in a castel that lyeth in þ land of Medes, there was founde a booke, & in it was there an acte wrytten after this maner: In the first yere of kinge Cyrus, commaunded the same kynge Cyrus to buyld the house of God at Jerusalem, in the place where þ sacrifice is made, and to laye the foundation to beare thre scoze cubites height, and thre scoze cubites bredeth, & thre walles of rough stone, & one wall of timbre, & þ expences shalbe geue of the kynges house. And þ golde and syluer bestell of the house of God (which Nabuchodonozor toke oute of the tēple at Jerusalem, & broughte vnto Babilon) shalbe restored agayne, that they maye be broughte vnto the temple at Jerusalem to their place in to the house of God.

Get you farre from thē therfore, thou Thathanai captayne beyonde the water, & Stharbazanai, & youre counceilers whiche are beyonde the water, get you awaye from them. Let thē worcke in þ house of God, that the captayne of the Jewes & their Elders maye bulde the house of God in hys place. I haue commaunded also, what shal be done, to the Elders of Iuda for the buyldinge of þ house of God, that there shal dyligentlye bee taken of the kynges goodes, euen of the rentes beyonde the water, and geuen vnto the men, & that they be not hyndred. And the chyldren of the captiuite helde Pascheouer vpon & fourtenth day of the first moneth: for the priestes and Leuites had purged them selues, so that they were all cleane as one man, & kylled Pascheouer for all the children of the captiuite, and for their brethren the priestes, and for them selues, And the childre of Israel which were come againe out of captiuite, and al such as had separated them selues vnto them frome the fylthynges of the heathen in the lande, to seke the Lorde God of Israel, ate and helde the feast of vnleuened bread seue dayes with ioye: for the Lorde had made them glad, and turned the heart of the kyng of Assur vnto them, so & their handes were strengthened in the worke of the house of God, whiche is the God of Israel.

The. vii. Chapter.

By the commaundement of Artaxerxes, Eldras taketh hys companions the chyldren of Israel, and returneth to Jerusalem.

After these actes in & raygne of Artaxerxes kyng of Persia, there went vp fro Babilon, Eldras the sonne of Saratah, the sonne of Azariah, the sonne of Helkiah, the sonne of Selum, the sonne of Zadoc, the sonne of Ahitob, the sonne of Amariah, the sonne of Azariah, the sonne of Maraioth, the sonne of Zaraias, the sonne of Ozi, the sonne of Boki, the sonne of Abisua, the sonne of Phinehes, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron & chiefe prieste. This Eldras was a quicke scribe in the lawe of Moles, whiche the Lorde God of Israel vpd gyue. And & kyng gaue hym al & he requyred, because & hand of the Lord his god was vpo him. And there went vp certaine of the children of Israel, & of the priestes, and of the Leuites, of the syngers, of the porters, and of the Bethinims vnto Jerusalem, in the seuenth yere of kyng Artaxerxes. And they came to Jerusalem in & fifti monethe that is the seuenth yere of the kyng. For vpon the fyrste daye of the fyrst moneth, deuyled he to goe vp from Babilon: and on the fyrste daye of the fyfth monethe came he to Jerusalem, because the good hande of God was vpon hym. For Eldras prepared hys heart to seke the lawe of the Lord, & to doe it, and to teache the precepte and iudgement in Israel.

And thys is the coppe of the letter, that kyng Artaxerxes gaue vnto Eldras the priest, & scribe, whiche was a teacher in the wordes of & Lorde & of hys statuts ouer Israel. Vnto Eldras

the priest and the scribe in the lawe of the God of heauen, peace & salutation. I haue comaunded, þat al they of þe people of Israel, and of thy priestes & Leuites in my realme, whiche are mynded of their owne good wyl to go by to Jerusalem, that they goe wyth the, beyng sente of the kynge and of the seven Lordes of the counceyl, to viset Juda & Jerusalem, accordyng to the lawe of God, whiche is in thy hande: And that thou shuldest take with the, syluer and golde, whiche the kynge & the lordes of hys counceyl geue of their owne good wyl vnto þe God of Israel (whose habitation is at Jerusalem) & al the syluer and golde þe thou canst fynde in all the contre of Babilon: with it that þe people & priestes geue of their good wyl vnto the house of God at Jerusalem.

C Take thou the same, & by diligentlly with the same money, calves, lambes, goates, & meateofferynges & drincker offerynges, to be offered vpon the altar of the house of your God at Jerusalem. And loke what it lyketh the and thy brethren to doe with the remnaunt of the money, þe do alter the wil of your God. And the vesselles that are geuen the for the ministracion in the house of thy God, those deliuer thou before God at Jerusalem.

And whatsoeuer thyng more shall be needefull for the house of thy God, whiche is necessarye for the to spende, let the same be geuen out of the kinges chābre. I kynge Arthaxerxes haue comaunded al the treasures beyonde the water, þe loke whatsoeuer Edoas the priest and scribe in the lawe of þe God of heauen requireth of you, that ye fulfill the same diligentlly, vntyl an hundred talētes of syluer, vntyl an hundred quarters of wheate, vntyl an hundred batthes of wyne, vntyl an hundred batthes of oyle, and salte withoute measure. Whatsoeuer belongeth to the lawe of the God of heauen, let the same be done with diligence for the house of the God of heauen, that there come no wrath vpon the kinges realme and hys chyldren.

And knowen be it vnto you, that ye shall haue no auctorite to require taxing and custome, & yetely rentes vpon anye of þe priestes, Leuites, wyngers, porters, Bethinims & ministers in the house of hys God. But thou Edoas (after the wysdome of the God that is in thy hande) set thou iudges & arbiters, to iudge al the people that is beyonde Jordan, euen al suche as knowe the lawe of thy God: and them þe know it not, those se, þe ye teache: & whoso euer wyl not diligentlly fulfill the lawe of thy God, and the kinges lawe, shal haue his iudgemente for the deade whether it be vnto deathe, or to be banished, or to be condempned in goodes, or to be putte in prilon.

* Praised be þe Lorde God of our fathers, whiche so hath inspired the kinges heart to garnish the house of God at Jerusalem: & hath enclined his mercye vnto me in the presence of þe kynge, and his councelers, & before all þe kinges hys estates. And I was comforted (accordyng to the hande of the Lorde my God ouer me) & so gathered I the heades of Israel together, that they myght go by with me.

The. viii. Chapter.

The number of them that returned to Jerusalem wyth Edoas.

These are the heades of their fathers that were named, whiche went by with me fro Babilō, what tyme as kynge Arthaxerxes raygned. Of the chyldren of Phinehes, Serlom: of þe chyldren of Ithamar, Daniell: of the chyldren of Dauid, Hatus: of the chyldren of Zecaniah, of the chyldren of Pharog, Zachary, and with hym were numbred an hundred and fiftie men. Of the chyldren of Phahath Moab Elioenai the sonne of Zarakiah, and with hym two hundred men. Of the chyldren of Zechaniah, the sonne of Jahasiell, and wyth hym thre hundred men. Of the chyldren of Adin Abed the sonne of Jonathan, and with hym fiftie men. Of the chyldren of Elam, Isaiah the sonne of Athaliah, and with him seuentie men. Of the chyldren of Saphatia, Zabadiah þe sonne of Michaell, and with him foure score men.

Of the chyldren of Joab, Obadiah the sonne of Jehiel, and with him two hundred and eyghtene men. Of the chyldren childre of Selomith, the sonne of Iosaphiah, and wyth hym an hundred and thre men.

C Of the chyldren of Bebai, zachary the sone of Bebai, and with hym eyght and twentye men. Of the chyldren of Algad, Iohanan, the sonne of Hakatan, and with him an hundred & ten men. Of the last chyldren of Adoniram, and these were their names: Eliphelet, Jesiel and Samaiah, and with the thre scoze men. Of the chyldren Begui, Uthai, and zabud and with them seuentymē. And I gathered the together by the water that renneth towarde Ahazua, and there abode we thre daies. And when I loked amonge the people and the priestes, I founde no Leuites there. Then sent I Eliezer, Aziel, Senieiah, Elnathan, Jarib, Elnathan, Nathan, zachary, and Mosolam the ruelers, and Joiatib & Elnathan the teachers, and those sente I vnto Edo the chieft at Chalphia, that they shulde fetch vs ministers for the house of oure God, and I tolde them what they shuld saye vnto Edo and to hys brethzen the Bethinims at Chalphia.

D And (because the good hand of our God was vpon vs) they broughte vs a wyse man from amonge the chyldren of Moholi the sonne of Leui the sonne of Israell, euen Sarabia wyth hys sonnes and brethzen, eyghtene. And Hasabia, and with hym Iaiiah of the chyldren of Merari, with his brethzen and their sonnes, twentye. And of the Bethinims, whom Dauid and y prince gaue to minister vnto the Leuites, two hundred and twentye, all named by name.

And euen there at the water besyde Ahaua, caused I a fastynge to bee proclaimed, y we myghte humble oure selues before our God, to seke of hym a ryght waye for vs, and oure chyldren, and all oure substance. For I was ashamed to require of the kynge, soudiers and horsemen, to helpe vs agaynst the enemye in the waye. For we hadde sayde vnto the kynge: The hand of our God is vpon al them that seke hym in goodnes, and hys byolence and wraath vpon all them that forsake hym. So we fasted, & soughte thys at our God,

And I toke out twelue of the chiefe priestes, Sarabia and Hasabia, and ten of their brethzen with them, & weyed them there the syluer and golde and vesselles for the heucofferynge vnto the house of our God, whych the kyng and the Lordes of hys counsell and Prynces, and all Israell that were at hande, had geuen to the heucofferyng: and there weyed I the vnder their had syxe hundred & fiftie talentes of syluer, & in syluer vessell an hundred talentes, and in golde an hundred talētes, twentye cuppes of golde of a thousande drammes, and two costlye ornaentes of good brasse, as cleare as golde, and sayd vnto them: Ye are holpe vnto the Lorde, therefore are the vesselles holpe also, and so is the syluer & golde that is geuen of a good wyll vnto the Lorde God of poure fathers: Wathe ye therfore and kepe it, tyll ye weye it downe before the chiefe priestes and Leuites, and auncient fathers of Israel at Jerusalem in the chestes of the house of the Lorde. Then toke the priestes & Leuites that weyed the syluer & gold and vessel, to bringe it to Jerusalem vnto the house of oure God. So we brake bp, frome the water of Ahaua on the twelue daye of y first moneth, to goe vnto Jerusalem: and the hande of oure God was vpon vs, and delpyered vs from the hande of the enemyes, & preynt waytynges by the waye. And we came to Jerusalem, & abode there thre dayes. But on the fourth daye was the syluer and golde, and vessell weyed in the house oure God vnder the hande of Meremoth the sone of Uriah y priest, and wyth hym Eleazar the sonne of Phinehes, and with them Josabad the sone of Iesua, and Maodiah the sonne of Benoi the Leuites, accordynge to the numbre and weyght of euerye one. And the weyghte was all wyrtten bp at the same tyme.

And the chyldren of the captiuyte, which were come out of prisson, offered burntofferpynges vnto the God of Israel: twelue bullockes for all Israell, syxe & nyntye rammes, seuen and seuentye lambes, and twelue goates for a sinoffering, al to the burntofferpyng, bery soze. And Sechaniah the sonne of Jehiel one of the children of Elam, answered, and sayde vnto Eldras: We haue trespassed agaynst the Lorde our God, in þ̄ we haue taken straunge wy-ues of al þ̄ people of þ̄ land. Now there is hope yet in Israell concerning this, therfore let vs make a couenaunt now with our God, that we shall put awaye all the wyues (and suche as are bozne of them) accordynge to the counsell of the Lorde, and of them that feare the commaundement of oure God, that we maye doe accordynge to the lawe. Get the vp therfore for the matter belongeth vnto the. We wyll be with the, be

iii. Eld. 1. 2

* Then arose Eldras, and tooke an oth of þ̄ ruelers, priestes and Leuites, and of al Israell, þ̄ they shuld do accor-dyng to thys worde: and they swate.
And Eldras stode vp before þ̄ house of God, and went into the chambze of Jo-hanan the sonne of Eliasib. And when he came thither, he ate no breade, nor dranke no water: for he mourned because of the transgression of them that had bene in captiuite.

And they caused a proclamacion to be made thorowe out Juda and Jeru-salē, vnto al þ̄ children which had bene in captiuite, that they shoulde gether them selues together vnto Jerusalē:
And that whosoever came not wyth in thre dayes accordynge to the deuyce of the rulers and Elders, all hys substaunce shuld be forfet, and be put out from the cōgregacion of the captiue.

Then al the men of Juda and Ben-Jamin gathered them selues together vnto Jerusalem in thre dayes, that is on the twentye daye of the nyneweth mo-neth: and al the people sate in the strete the straunge wyues. Then answered al the congregaciō, & said with a loude voyce. Let it be done as þ̄ haste sayde.

But the people are manye, and it is a raynye wether, & they can not stande here without, neither is this a worcke of one daye or two, for we are manye that haue offended in thys transgressi-

In the moneth * Nisan in the twentieth yere of kynge Artaxerxes, when the wyne stode before him, I toke vp the wyne, and gaue it vnto the kynge & I was heuy in his presence. Then sayd the king vnto me: why lokest thou so sadly? Thou art not sicke, that is not the matter, but thou art heuy herted. Neuer theles I was sore aftrayed & sayd vnto the kyng: God saue the kynges lyfe for euer, Moulde I not loke sadly: the citie of my fathers buryall lyeth waste & the gates therof are consumed with fyre. Then sayd the king vnto me: what is the thy request? then made I my prayer to the God of heaue, & sayd vnto the kyng: yf it please the kyng, and yf thy seruaunt be fauoured in thy sighte. I beseeke the sende me in to Iuda vnto the citty of my fathers buryall, that I maye buylde it.

25 And the kyng sayde vnto me, and so dyd the quene that sat by him: how longe shall thy iourney continue, and whe wilt thou come agayne? And it pleased the kinge to sende me, & I set him a tyme, & sayd vnto y king: yf it please the kyng, let him geue me letters to the capitaynes beyonde the water, that they maye conueye me ouer, tyll I come into Iuda: and letters vnto Asaph the Lord of the kinges wood, that he maye geue me wood for beames to the gates of y palace, whiche are harde on the house, and harde on the walles of the ctyte, & for the house that I shall entre in to. And the kyng gaue me accordynge to the good hande of God vpon me: And whe I came to the capitaynes beyonde the water, I gaue them the kinges letters. And the kyng sent capitaynes and horsemyn wyth me.

C But when Sanabalat the Horonite & Tobiah the seruaunt of the Ammonites hearde that, it greued the fore, that there was come a man whiche soughte the welth of the chyliden of Israel. And whe I came to Ierusalē, and had bene there thre dayes, I gat me vp i y night season, & a fewe mē with me: for I tolde no man what God had geuen me in my hert to do at Ierusalē: & there was not one beast with me, saue it that I rode vpon. And I rode by nyghte vnto the valley porte before the Dragon well, & to the Dongeporte, and considered the walles of Ierusalem that were broken downe, and the portes therof consumed with the fyre. And I wet ouer vnto the wellporte, & to the kynges condyte, and there was no rowme for my beast, that it coulde go vnder me. The wete I on in the nyghte by the broke spde, & cosydered the wall, and turned back & came home agayne to the valley porte.

D And the rulers knewe not whither I wete or what I dyd: for hetherto had I not tolde the Jewes and the prestes, the counsellors & the rulers, & the other that laboured i the worke. And I sayd vnto the: ye se the miserie y we are in, how Ierusalē lyeth waste, & howe the gates therof are brent with fyre, come let vs buylde vp the walles of Ierusalē, that we be no more a rebuke. And I tolde the of the good hand of my God which was vpo me: & the kynges wordes that he had spoken vnto me. And they sayd: then let vs get vp, & buylde: and theyr handes were strengthened to good.

But when Sanabalat the Horonite, and Tobiah the seruaunt of the Ammonites, and Gesem the Arabian herde it, they laughed vs to skorne, and despised vs, & sayde: what is this that ye do? Wyl ye fall awaye agayne fro y king? Then answered I them, and sayde: the God of heauen he it is that causeth vs to prospere: and we be his seruautes. Let vs get vp and buylde. As for you, ye haue no porcion nor right nor remembrance in Ierusalem.

The.iiii. Chapter.

The buylding of Jerusalem is hyndred and let, but the Jewes buylded it beyng readye harnysed: lest their enemyes should lviade them.

But when Sanabalat hearde that we buylded the wall, he was wroth and toke greate indignacion and mocked the Jewes, and said befoze his brethren, and the hoste of Samaria: what do the impotent Jewes? shall they be thus suffred: shall they offer: shall they persour me it in one daye? shall they make the stones whole agayne that are brought to dust, and brett? And Tobiah the Ammonite beside him sayde: let the buylde on, if a fore go vp, he shal breake downe their stone wall. Heare O thou oure God, howe we are despised, turne their shame vpo their owne heade, that thou mayest geue them ouer into despisinge in the lād of their captiuite. Couer not their wickednesse, and put not out their sinne from thy presence: for they haue prouoked y buylders. Yet buylded we the wall, and toynded it whole together, vnto the halfe heygth. And the people were well mynded to labour.

But when Sanabalat, and Tobiah, and the Arabians, & Ammonites, & Asdodites hearde that the walles of Jerusalem were made vp, and that they had begonne to stoppe by the gappes, they were very wroth, & cōspired al together to come & fight agaynst Jerusalem, & to make an hinderauce therin. Neuertheles we made our prayer vnto oure god, and set watchmē vpo the wall daye and nyght ouer agaynst them. And Juda said: the strength of the beateres is to feble, & there is to much dust, we are not able to bulde on the wall. And oure aduersaries thought: they shall not know nether se, tyll we come in the myddes amonge the, and slaye them, and hynder the worcke. But when the Jewes that dwelt besyde them, came out of all the places where they dwelt aboute vs, & tolde vs as good as ten tymes, then set I the people after their hundreds with their swerdes, speares & bowes beneth in the lowe places behynde the wall, & looked, and gat me vp, and sayd vnto the chiefe men and rulers, and to the other people: be not ye afrayed of the *thinke vpon the greate Lorde whiche ought to be feared: and fyghte for youre brethren, sonnes, doughters, wyues, and houses. Neuertheles when oure enemyes hearde that we had gotten worde of it, God broughte their counsell to nought, and we turned all agayne to the wall, euery one vnto his labour. And fro that tyme forth it came to passe, that the halfe parte of the yonge mē dyd the labour, & the other halfe parte helde the speares, shyldes, bowes, and brestplates: & the rulers stode behynde all the house of Juda, whiche buylded on the wall, & bare burthens, from those that laded them. With one hande dyd they the worke, and with y other helde they their weapon. And euery one that buylded, had his swerde girded by his syde, and so buylded they. And the tro: petters stode besyde me.

And I sayde vnto the principall mē, and rulers, and to the other people: the worcke is greate and large, and we are separated vpo the wall one farre from another. Loke in what place howe ye heare the noyse of the trompet, resorte ye thither vnto vs. * Oure God shall fight for vs, and we will be labouringe in the worcke. And the halfe parte of the helde the speares from the moynynge spring, tyll the starres came forth. And at the same tyme sayde I vnto the people: euery one abyde with his seruauant at Jerusalem, that in the night season we maye geue attēdaunce to the watch, and to labour on the daye tyme. As for me and my brethren, and my seruantes, & the men of the watch behynde me, we put neuer of oure clothes, so muche as to washe oure selues.

money of the kynges tribute for oure landes and vineyardes. Now are oure brethrens bodyes as oure owne bodyes and their chyldren as oure chyldren: els shoulde we subdye oure sonnes and daughters vnto bondage, and some of oure daughters are subdied already, * and no strength is there in oure handes, and other men shall haue oure landes and vineyardes.

But whē I hearde their complaynte and such wordes, it displeased me sore, and I aduysed so in my mynde, that I rebuked the counsellors, and the rulers, and sayd vnto them: * wyl ye requyre vsurp one of another? And I brought a greate congregacion agaynst the and sayde vnto the: we (after oure abyltye) haue boughte oure brethre the Jewes, whiche were solde vnto the hepythen. And wyl ye sell youre brethren, whome we haue boughte vnto vs? Then helde they their peace, & coulde fynde nothing to answer.

And I sayde: It is not good that ye do. Dughte ye not to walke in the feare of God, because of the rebuke of y<sup>e</sup> hepythen oure enemyes? I and my brethre, and my seruantes haue lent them money and coyne: but as for vsurp, let vs leaue it. Therefore this same daye se that ye restore the their lades agayne, their vineyardes, oyle, gardens & houses, & the hundred parte of the money of the coyne, wyne and oyle that ye haue wonne of the. Then sayde they: we wyl restore them agayne, and wyl requyre nothyng of them, and wyl do as thou hast spoken. And I called the prestes, & toke on ooth of them, that they shoulde do so. And I shoke my lappe, and sayd: God make out euery mā after the same maner fro his house and labour, that mainteyneth not this worde: eue thus be he make out, and voyde. And all the congregacion sayd: Amen, and praysed the Lord. And the people dyd so.

* And fro the tyme forth that it was committed vnto me to be a captayne in the lande of Iuda, namely from the twentyeth yere vnto the two and thirttyeth yere of kyng Arthaxerxes (that is twelue yere) I and my brethren lyued not of such sustenance as was geuen to a captayne: for the olde captaynes that were before me, had bene charitable vnto the people, and had taken of them bread and wyne, and fortye syckles of syluer: yea and their seruantes had oppressed the people. But so dyd not I, and that because of the feare of God. I laboured also in the worke vpon the wall, and boughte no lande. And all my seruantes came thither together vnto the worke. Moreover there were at my table an hundred and fyfthe of the Jewes and rulers, whiche came vnto me, from among the hepythen, that are aboute vs. And there was prepared me daylye an oxe, and syxe chosen shepe, and byrdes, and euery once in ten dayes a greate summe of wyne. Yet requyred not I the wyng of a raptayne for the bondage was greuous vnto the people. * Thycke vpon me my God vnto the best, accordyng to all that I haue done for this people.

The vi. Chapter.

And whē Sanabalat, Tobiah and Geselem the Arabians, & the other of oure enemyes hearde that I had buylded the wall, & that there were no mo gappes therein (howbeit at the same tyme had I not hanged the doores vpon the gates) Sanabalat & Geselem sent vnto me, saying: come and let vs mete together * in the villages vpon the playne of the cypre vno. Neuertheles they thoughte to do me euell. Notwithstandyng I sent messengers vnto them, sayinge: I haue a greate busynes to do, I cannot come downe. The worke shoulde stāde still, yf I were neygnt, and came downe to you. Howbeit they sent vnto me as good as foure tymes after y<sup>e</sup> same maner. And I gaue the same answer. The sent Sanabalat his seruant vnto me the fyfth tyme, wyth an open letter in his hande, wherein was wyrtten: it is tolde the hepythen, & Geselem hath sayde it, that thou and the Jewes thinke to rebell: for the whiche cause thou buyldest the wall, and wylt be their kyng in these matters, & hast ordeyned the prophetes to preach of the at Jerusalem, and to saye: he is kyng of Iuda.

For they were all mynded to make vs astrayed saynge: they shall withdrawe their handes frome the worke, that they shal not labour. Howbeit I streng-
Cthed my hande the more. And I came vnto the house of Semaiah the sonne of Delaiah the sonne of Shebtabeel, & he had shut him selfe within, and saide: let vs come together in to the house of God, euen vnto the myddes of the temple, and shutte the dozes of the temple: for they wyl come to slaye the, yea euen in the night will they come to put the to death. But I sayd: should any such mā as I syle who is that, being as I am, that wyl go in to the temple, to saue his life? I wyl not go in.

For I perceaued, that God had not sent him: Yet spake he prophecie vpon me, neuerthelesse Tobiah and Sanabalat had hired him for money. Therfoze toke he the moncy, that throughte teare I should so do, & synne: that they might haue an euell reporte of me, to blasphem me. My God thinke thou vpon Tobiah and Sanabalat accordynge vnto these their workes, and of the Prophet Hoadaiah and of the other Prophetes, that wolde haue put me in feare.

And the wall was fynished on the fyue and twentye daye of the moneth * Elul, in two and fyfthe dayes. And when all our enemies hearde therof, all the Hei-
Dthē that were aboute vs, were astrayed, and their courage fayled them: for they perceaued, p̄ this worke came of God. And at the same tyme were there many of the chefe of Iuda, whose letters wete vnto Tobiah, and from Tobiah vnto them (for ther were many in Iuda that were sworne vnto hym: for he was the sonne in lawe of Sechaniah the sonne of Arah, and his sonne Jehohanan had the doughter of Hosolam the sonne of Barachiah and they spake good of hym before me, & tolde hym my wordes) and Tobiah sent letters, to put me in feare.

The. vii. Chapter.

After the wall once buylded is the watch apoynted. They that returned from the captiuitie are nombred,

Now when we had buylded the wall I hanged on the dozes, & the porters syngers and Leuites were appointed And I commaunded my brother Hanani, and Hananiah the ruler of the palace at Ierusalem: for he was a faythfull man, and feared God more then dyd many other, and I sayde vnto them: let not the gates of Ierusalem be opened vntill the sonne be whote. And whyle they are yet stādpyng in p̄ watch, the dozes shall be shut and barred. And there were certayne citelins of Ierusalem apoynted to be watchmē euery one in his watch, and aboute his house. As for the cytie, it was large of rowme, & greate, but the people were fewe therein, and the houses were not buylded.

And my God gaue me in my hert, that I gathered together the principall men and the people to nombze them and I founde * a registryr of the nombze of them, whiche came bp afore out of the captiuitie: and founde wyztten therein: * these are the sonnes of the lande that went bp from the captiuitie of the caryng awaye (whom Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon had brought awaye) and came agayne to Ierusalem & Iuda, euery one vnto his cytie, which came with zorobabel: Iesua, Nehemiah, Alariah, Raamiah, Rahamani, Hardochee, Belsai, Selparath, Be-guat, Rahum and Saanah.

This is the nombze of the men of the people of Irael. The children of Phasros were two thousande, an hundred & two and seuētye: the chyldre of Saphatiah, thre hundred & two & seuētye: the chyldre of Arah, fyre hundred and two & fiftye: the chyldren of Pahath Moab among the chyldre of Iesua and Joab, two thousand, eight hundred, and eigh-

E The preestes. The chyldren of Jadaiah of the house of Jesua, nyne hundred and thre and sevenye: the chyldre of Emer, a thousande and two and fyfthe: the chyldre of Phaschur, a thousande two hundred and seven and fortye: the chyldren of Harim, a thousande and sevenyentene. The Levites. The chyldren of Jesua of Cadmiel among the chyldren of Hoduiah, foure and sevenye. The syngers. The chyldren of Asaph, an hundred and eyght and fortye. The porters: The chyldren of Selum, the chyldren of Ater, the chyldren of Talmon, the chyldren of Acub, the chyldren of Hatita, and the chyldren of Sobai, all together an hundred and eyght and thyrtye.

The Bethinims. The chyldren of Ziba, the chyldren of Hasupha, the chyldren of Tebahoth, the chyldren of Cecos, the chyldren of Sia, the chyldren of Phadon, the chyldren of Lebanah, the chyldren of Hagaba, the chyldren of Salmai, the chyldren of Hanan, the chyldren of Gidel, the chyldren of Gabher, the chyldren of Raaiia, the chyldren of Razin, the chyldren of Becoda, the chyldren of Geseu, the chyldre of Ussai, the chyldren of Phasceah, the chyldren of Belai, the chyldren of Meunim, the chyldren of Nephusasim, the chyldren of Bachuc, the chyldren of Bacupha, the chyldren of Bathur, the chyldren of Bazlith, the chyldren of Bahida, the chyldren of Barla, the chyldren of Bercos, the chyldren of Sissera, the chyldren of Chamah, the chyldren of Rezia, the chyldren of Hatipha.

The chyldren of Salomons seruautes: The chyldren of Sotai, the chyldren of Sophereth, the chyldre of Phasrida, the chyldren of Jaala, the chyldren of Barcon, the chyldren of Gidel, the chyldren of Saphatiah, the chyldren of Hatil, the chyldren of Bochereth of Zabaim, the chyldre of Amon. All the Bethinims and the chyldren of Salomons seruautes, were thre hundred & two and nyntye.

F And these wente bp also of Thel Mela, Thel Barla, Cherub, Adon and Emer: but they coulde not shewe their fathers house nor their sede, whether they were of Israell. The chyldren of Dalaiiah, the chyldren of Tobiah and the chyldren of Becoda, sixe hundred and two and fortye. And of the preestes the chyldren of Jadaiah: the chyldren of Bacos, the chyldren of Bersilai, whiche toke one of the daughters of Bersilai the Gileadite to wyfe, and was named after their name. These soughte the register of their generacion & when they founde it not, they were put from the presthode. And Bathirsatha sayde vnto them, that they shoulde not eate of the moost holy, tyll there came bp a prest with the lyght and perfectnesse.

The whole congregacion as one mā, was two and fortye thousande thre hundred, & thre skore: besyde their seruautes and maydes, of whom there were seven thousande, thre hundred and seven and thyrtye. And they had two hundred and seven and fortye syngynge men and women, seven hundred and sixe and thyrtye horses, two hundred and and fyue & fortye Mules, foure hundred and fyue & thyrtye Camels: fyve thousande, seven hundred & twentye asses.

And certayne of the aunciet fathers gaue vnto þe worcke. Hathirathah gaue to the treasure a thousand drammes, fiftye basens, fyve hundred & thyrtye prestes garmentes. And some of the chiefe fathers gaue vnto the treasure of the worcke, twentie thousande drammes, two thousande and two hundred ponde of syluer. And the other people gaue twentie thousande drammes, and two thousande ponde of syluer, and seven and thre score prestes garmentes. And the prestes and Leuites, the porters, the syngers, and the other of the people, and the Iethinims, and all Israel dwelt in theyr cyties.

The. viii. Chapter.

Esdraas gathereth together the people and readeth to them the lawe. They hepe the feast of tabernacles of bothes.

Now when the seven moneth dwe nye, and the children of Israel were in their cyties, * all the people gathered the selues together as one man vpon the strete before the watergate, and sayde vnto Esdras the scribe, that he shoulde fetch the boke of the lawe of Moses, which the Lord comaunded to Israel.

* And Esdras the preaste brought the law before the congregacion both of men and women, and of all that coulde vnderstande it, vpon the fyrst daye of the seuenth moneth, and red therein in the strete that is before the watergate, fro the morning vntyll the noone daye before men and weme and such as coulde vnderstande it: and the eares of all the people were inclined vnto the boke of the lawe. And Esdras the scribe stode vpon an hye pulpit of wod, which they had made for the preachinge, and besyde him stode Mathathiah, Sema, Ananiah, Uziah, Helkiah, and Maasethah, on his ryghte hande: and on his lefte hande stode Phadaiah, Misael, Melchiah, Hasum, Hasebadanah, zachary and Mosolam.

And Esdras opened the boke before all the people, for he stode aboue all the people. And when he opened it, all the people stode vp. And Esdras praysed the Lord the greate God. And all the people answered Ame, Ame, with their handes vp, and bowed them selues, and worshipped the Lorde with their faces to the groude. And Iesua, Baani, Serabiah, Jamin, Acuba, Sebatthai, Hodaiah, Maasiah, Celita, Azariah, Porzabed, Hanan, Phalaiah, and the Leuites, caused the people to geue hede vnto the law, and the people stode in their place. And they red in the boke of the lawe of God distinctly and playnly, so that men vnderstode the thinge that was red. And Nehemiah (which is Hathirathah) and Esdras the prest & scribe, and y Leuites that caused the people to take hede, sayde vnto all the people: this daye is holy vnto the Lorde your God: be not ye sozry therfore, and wepe not. For all the people wepte when they herde the wordes of the lawe.

Therfore sayde he vnto them: * go your waye, & eate the fat, and dryncke the swete, and sende parte vnto the also that haue not prepared them selues: for this daye is holy vnto our Lord, be not ye sozry therfore: for the ioye of the lord is your strength. And the Leuites stilled all the people, and sayd: holde your peace for the daye is holy, beere not ye your selues. And all the people wente their waye to eate and dryncke, and to sende parte vnto other, and to make greate myrth, because they had vnderstande the wordes that were declared vnto them.

3. Esd. ix. d.

And on the nexte daye were gathered together the chiefe fathers amonge all the people and the prestes and Leuites, vnto Esdras the scribe, & he shoulde teach them the wordes of the lawe. And they founde wrytten in the lawe * howe that the Lord had comaunded by Moses that the childre of Israel shoulde dwell in bothes in the feast of the seuenth moneth. And so they caused it be declared & proclaimed in all their cyties, & at Jerusalem, saying: go vp vnto the mount & fetch Olyue braunches, Pynebraunches, Myrtbraunches, Palmebraunches, and braunches of thicke trees, to make bothes as it is wrytten.

courtes, and in the courtes of the house of God, and in the strete by the watergate, & in the strete by porte Ephraim. And all the congregacion of them that were come agayne out of the captiuite, made bothes, & dwelt therein: for sence the tyme of Josua & sonne of Nun vnto this dave, had not the chyldren of Israel done so, and ther was very greate gladnesse. And euery dave fro the fyrst dave vnto the last, red he in the boke of the lawe of God. And seuen dayes helde they the feast, and on y<sup>e</sup> pyght dave they gathered together, accordyng vnto the maner.

Deu. vii. a.

ii. Es. xlii. c

Who dwelled in Jerusalem after it was builded and who in the cyties of Juda.

And the rulers of the people dwelte at Jerusalem. But y other people cast lottes therfore, so that amonge ten one parte went to Jerusalem into the holy cytie to dwell, and nyne partes in the cyties. And the people thanked all the menne that were willinge to dwell at Jerusalem.

These are the heades of the land that dwelt in Jerusalem and in the cities of Juda: And euery one dwelte in his possession, and in theyr cyties of Israel, the preestes, Leuites, the Bethinims, & the chyldren of Salomons seruauntes. And at Jerusalem dwelte certayne of the chyldren of Juda and of Benjamin.

C. par. x. a.

* Of the chyldren of Juda: Athaiash the sonne of Asiah the sonne of zachary, the sonne of Amariah, the sonne of Saphatiah, the sonne of Mahalaleell, of the chyldren of Phares. And Maasiah the sonne of Baruch, the sonne of Chal Hose, the sonne of Haseia, the son of Adaia, the sonne of Josarib, the sonne of zachary, the sonne of Siloni. All the chyldren of Phares that dwelt at Jerusalem, wer foure C. and eyght and thre score valeaunt men.

These are the chyldren of Benjamin: Sallu the sonne of Mesullam, the son of Joeb, the sonne of Phadaiash, the sonne of Colaiash the sonne of Mahiah, the sonne of Jthiel, the sonne of Jaiash. And after hym Abai, Selai nyne hundred and eyghte and twenty. And Joel the sonne ofzechzi had the ouersight of them: and Juda the sonne of Senuah ouer the seconde parte of the cytie.

Of the preestes ther dwelt: Jedaiash the sonne of Josarib, Jachin. Saraiah the sonne of Helkiah the sonne of Hosolam, the sonne of zadoe, the sonne of Metarioth, the sonne of Abitob, was prince in the house of God: and his brethren that performed the worke in the house: of whome there were. viii. C. and xlii. And Adaiash the sonne of Jeroham, the sonne of Blalaliell, the sonne of Amazi, the sonne of zachary, the sonne of Phalhur the sonne of Melchiah and his brethren, these amonge the fathers: of whom there wer two hundred and two & fortie. And Amasai the sonne of Amasai the sonne of Amasai the sonne of Emer: and his brethren were valiaunt men, of whom there were an hundred and eyght and twenty. And theyr ouersear was zabbie the sonne of Hagdolin.

Of the Leuites: Semeiah the sonne of Halub, the sonne of Aserikam, the son of Halabiah the sonne of Boni: & Sabathai and Josabad of the chefe of the Leuites, in the outwarde busines of the house of God. And Mathaniah the sonne of Micha, the sonne of zabdi, the sonne of Alaph, whiche was the principall to begynne the thankesgeuing vnto prayer. And Sackbukiah the second amonge his brethren, and Abda the son of Saminua, the sonne of Galal, the sonne of Jouthun. All the Leuites in the holpe cytye were two hundred and fourescore. * And the porters Acub and Calmon, and theyr brethren that kepte the portes, were an hundred and two and seuentye. As for the resydue of Israel, the preestes and Leuites, they were in all the cities of Juda, euery one in his inheritaunce.

ii. par. x. c.

And the Bethinims dwelt in Ophel: and ziha and Galspha belonged vnto the Bethinims. The ouersear of the Leuites at Jerusalem, was Ussi the sonne of Baani, the sonne of Halabiah, the sonne of Mathaniah, the sonne of Micha.

Of the chyldren of Alaph there were syngers about the busynes in the house of God: for it was the kinges commaundement concernynge them, that the syngers should deale saythfully euery day, as accordyng was.

And Mathaiash the sonne of Mesela, bell of the chyldren of zarah the sonne of Juda nexte the kinge in all maters concerning the people and theyr byllages, thoroowe oute all theyr regyons. And y chyldren of Juda that were without in the townes of theyr lande, dwelte some at Kariah Arbe, and in the byllages thereof, and at Dibon, and in the byllages thereof: and at Cabzell, and in the byllages thereof: and at Jesua, Moladah, Bethphalet, Hazerual, Bersabe and in their byllages: and at Sikelag and Moconah, and in theyr byllages: And at Entemon, Sarah, Jerimuth, zonoah, Odollam, and in theyr byllages: At Lachis, and in the felde thereof: At Asebah, and in þe byllages thereof: and dwelt frome Bersabe vnto the valleie of Hebron.

The chyldren of Benjamin of Saba, dwelte at Machmas, Aia, Bethell and in theyr byllages. And at Anathoth, Nob, Ananiah, Hazor, Ramah, Gethaim, Hadid, zeboim, Nabalath, Lod, Ono and in the carpenters valleie. And certayne of the Leuites that had porcions in Iuda, dwelt in Benjamin.

¶ The. xii. Chapter.

¶ The preeſtes and Leuites whiche came with zorobabell to Ierusalem are numbred: and the walke is deduced.

Theſe are the preeſtes and Leuites that wente vp with zorobabell the ſon of Salathiel and with Jeſua: Saraiah, Jeremy, Eldras, Amariah, Meluch, Hatus, Sechaniah, Kehum, Merimoth, Abo, Genthoi, Abiah, Amin, Maadiah, Belgah, Semaiah, Joiarib, Jadaiah, Salu, Amok Melkiah and Jadaiah. Theſe wer the heades amonge the preeſtes and theyr brethren in the tyme of Jeſua. The Leuites wer theſe: Jeſua, Benui, Cadmiel, Saraiah, Iuda and Mathaniah ouer the offyce of thankesgeuyng, they and theyr brethren: Sachbukiah and Ani, and theyr brethren, were aboute them in the watches.

Jeſua begate Joakim. Joakim begat Eliaſib. Eliaſib begat Joiada. Joiada begate Jonathan. Jonathan begat Jadia. And in the tyme of Joakim were theſe the cheſe fathers among the preeſtes: vnder Saraiah Jadaiah, vnder Jeremy Hananiah, vnder Eldras, Moſolam, vnder Amariah Jehoanan, vnder Miſico Jonathan, vnder Sebaniah Joſeph, vnder Harim Edna, vnder maraioth Melchai, vnder Adia zachary, vnder Genthō Moſolam, vnder Abia zechari, vnder Miniamin and Moadia Melchai, vnder Belgah Samua, vnder Semetah Jehonathan, vnder Joiarib Mathnai, vnder Jadaiah Uſi, vnder

And in the tyme of Eliaſib Joiada, Johanan and Jadia, wer the cheſe fathers among the Leuites, and the preeſtes written vnder the raygne of Darius the Perſian. The chyldren of Leuit the principall fathers were wyrtten in the Chronicles, butyll the tyme of Jonathan the ſonne of Eliaſib. And theſe were the cheſe among the Leuites, Haſabiah, Serebiah and Jeſua the ſonne of Cadmiel, and theyr brethren ouer agaynſte them, to geue prayſe and thankes, accordyng as Dauid the man of God had ordeyned it, one watche ouer agaynſte another. Mathania, Salbukiah, Obadiah, Moſolam, Calmō and Abub were porters in the watch at the threſholdes of the gates. Theſe wer in the tyme of Joiakim the ſonne of Jeſua the ſonne of Joſedec, and in the tyme of Nehemiah the captaine & of the preeſte Eldras the ſcribe.

And in the dedicacion of the walle at Ierusalem, were the Leuites ſoughte out of all theyr places, that they myght be broughte to Ierusalem, to kepe the dedicaciō and gladneſſe, with thankesgeuings, with ſpynginge with Tymbales, Pſalteries and harpes. And the chyldren of the ſpyngers gathered them ſelues together from the playne countre aboute Ierusalem, and from the byllages of Bethophathi, and fro the houſe of Galgal, and oute of the feldeſ of Geba and Aſmaueth: for the ſpyngers had builded them byllages about Ierusalem. And the preeſtes and Leuites purified them ſelues, and clenſed the people, the gates and the wall.

And I cauſed the princes of Iuda to goo vp vpon the wall, and appoynted two great queers of thankesgeuyng whiche wente on the righte hande of the wall towarde the Donggate, and after them wente Moſaiah, and halfe of the princes of Iuda, and Alaria, Eldras, Moſolam Iuda, Benjamin, Semetah and Jeremy: & certayne of the preeſtes chyldren with trompettes, namelpe zachari the ſonne of Jonathan, the ſonne of Semetah, the ſonne of Mathaniah, the ſonne of Michatah, the ſonne of zechari, eur, the sonne of Alaph, and hys brethren, Semeiah, Asarael, Melalai, Galalai, Maai, Nathanael and Juda and Hanani, with the muscalle instruments of Dauid the man of God.

And Eldras the Scribe before them, towarde the welgate, and they wente bp ouer agaynst them vpon the steps of the cytie of Dauid at the going bp of the walle to the house of Dauid, vnto the Watergate Eastward.

D The other queer of thankesgeuinge wente ouer agaynst them, and I after them, and the halfe parte of the people vpon the wall, toward the fornegate bpwarde, vntyll the brode wall, and to the porte of Ephraim, and to the Oldegate, and to the fishgate, and to the tower of Hananeel, and to the tower of Meshah, vntyll the Shepegate. And in the pylongate stode they styll, and so stode the two queers of thankesgeuinge of the house of God, and I and the halfe of the rulers wyth me, and the preestes, namely Eliakim, Maasiah, Miniamin, Michajah, Elioenai, zachary, Hananiah with trompettes, & Maasiah, Semeiah, Eleazar, Uri, Jehohanan, Melchiah, Elam and Ser. And the syngers sang loude, and Iestahiah was p ouerleat.

And the same daye were there great sacrifices offered, and they reioysed: for God had geuen them greates gladnesse, so that bothe the wyues and chyldren were ioyfull, and the mirth of Ierusalem was herd far of.

At the same tyme were there manne appoynted ouer the treasure chestes (wherein were the heueofferinges, the fyrstpynges and the tythes) that they shoulde gather them oute of the felde aboute the cyties, to destribute them vnto the preestes and Leuites accordyng to the lawe: for Juda was glad of the preestes, and Leuites, that they stode and waityd vpon the offyce of theyr God, and the offyce of the purificacion. And the syngers and porters stode after the commaundement of Dauid and of Salomon his sonne: for in the tyme of Dauid and Alaph, were the chese syngers founded, and the songes of praise and thankesgeuinge vnto god. In the tyme of zorobabell and Nehemiah, dyd al Israel geue porcions vnto to the syngers and porters, euerye daye hys porcion, and they gaue thynges halowed vnto the Leuites, and the Leuites gaue thynges that were sanctified, vnto the chyldren of Aaron.

The. xiii. Chapter.

C Deuteronomy is read, and when they haue heard it they separte from them all straungers. &c.

Ad what time as p boke of Moles was read in the eares of the people there was founde wyrtten therein, that the Ammonites and Moabites shoulde neuer come in to the congregacyon of God, because they met not the chyldren of Israel wyth bread and water, and byred Balaam agaynst them, that he shoulde curse them: neuertheles oure God turned the curse in to a blessing. Now when they herde the Lawe, they separated from Israell euery one that had myrte hym selfe therein. And before thys had the preeft Elisib deliuered the chesse of the house of our God vnto hys kynsman Tobiah: for he had made hym a great chesse, and there had they afore tyme layed the meateoffringes, frankencense, vessell, and the tythes of corne, wine and oyle (accordyng to the commaundemente geuen to the Leuytes, syngers and porters) and the heueoffringes of the preestes.

Am. 2. 10.

But in all thys was not I at Ierusalem: for in the two and thyrtyeth yere of Archaxerxes kinge of Babilon, came I vnto the king, & after certayne dayes optayned I lycence of the kyng to come to Ierusalem. And I gat knowledge of the euil that Elisib dyd vnto Tobiah, in that he had made hym a chesse in the courte of the house of God, and it greeued me sore, and I caste forth the all the vesselles of the house of Tobiah out of the chesse, and commaunded them to cleanse the chesse. And thither broughte I agayne the vesselles of the house of God, the meateofferynge and the incense.

And I rebuked them earneſtly the ſame day that they ſolde the vitayles. Ther dwelt mē of Tyze alſo therein, which brought fyſhe and all maner of ware, and ſolde on the Saboth day vnto the chyldꝛe of Iuda and Ieruſalem. Then reproued I the rulers in Iuda, and ſayde vnto them: what euell thinge is thys that ye do, and bꝛeake the Saboth daye? Dyd not oure fathers euen thus, and oure God broughte all thys plague vpon vs and vpon thys ctyte? And ye make the wꝛathe moꝛe yet vpon Iſrael, in that ye bꝛeake the ſaboth.

Then remainned the chapmen and marchaun- tes once oꝛ twyſe ouer nyghte without Ieruſalem with all maner of wares. Then reproued I them ſore, and ſayde vnto them: whye tarpe ye all nyghte a- bouthe the wall? If ye do it once agayne, I wyll laye handes vpon you. ### The fyꝛſte Chapter.

Chynge Thaurus, whiche ſealled Betharces was with a roſall ſeale, wherunto the queene Maſti wyl not come: foꝛ whiche cauſe he is denoꝛed.

At the tyme of Ahasuerus whiche raygned fro India vnto Ethiopias, ouer an hundred and seuen and twentye landes, what time as he sat on his seate royall in the castell of Susa in the thyrde yere of hys raygne, he made a feaste vnto all his princes and seruantes, namelye vnto the myghty men of Persia and Media, to the capitaynes and rulers of hys countreys, that he myghte shewe the noble riches of his kingdome, and the glorious worshyppe of hys greatnesse, manye dayes longe, euen an hundred and foure score dayes.

And when these dayes wer expyred, the kynge made a feast vnto all the people that were in the castell of Susa, bothe vnto greete and smal, seuen dayes longe in the courte of the garden by the kynges palace: where there hanged white, reed and palow clothes, fastened with coardes of linnen & scarlet in syluer cynges, vpon pylers of Marble stone.

The benches were of golde and syluer made vpon a pavement of grene, whyt, palowe and blacke Marble. And y<sup>e</sup> dryncke was caried in vessels of gold, & there was euer chaunge of vessel. And the kynges wyne was much accordyng to y<sup>e</sup> power of the kynge. And no manne was appoynted what he should drynck: for the kynge hadde commaunded all the officers of his house, that euery one shoulde do as it liked him. And the quene Vasthi made a feaste also for the women in the palace of Ahasuerus. And on the seuenth daye when the kynge was merue of the wyne, he commaunded Behuman, Bartha, Harbona, Bagatha, Abagatha, Zathar and Carchas, the seuen chamberlaynes (that dyd seruyce in the presence of king Ahasuerus) to fetch the quene Vasthi with y<sup>e</sup> crown regall, that he myghte shewe the people and princes her fairnesse: for she was bewtiful. But the quene Vasthi would not come at the kynges worde by hys chamberlaynes. Then was the kynge very wrothe, and hys indignacion kindled in hym.

And the kynge spake to the wyse men that had vnderstanding in the ordinaunces of y<sup>e</sup> lande for the kynges matters must be hadled before all such as haue knowledge of y<sup>e</sup> lawe & iudgement: and the next vnto him were, Carlena, Setthat, Admatha, Charlis, Mares, Marsana & Hamucan, the seuen princes of the Persians, & Medes, which saw the kynges face, & sate aboue in the kynges dome. What law shoulde be execut vpon the quene Vasthi, because she dyd not accordyng to the worde of the kynge by his chamberlaines. Then sayd Hamucan before the kynge & the princes: the quene Vasthi hath not only done euell against y<sup>e</sup> king but also againste all the princes & al the people in al the landes of king Ahasuerus for this dede of the quene shal come abroad vnto al weime, so that they shal despice their husbandes before their eyes, & shal say: y<sup>e</sup> king Ahasuerus comaunded Vasthi y<sup>e</sup> quene to come before him, but she would not. And so shal the princeesses in Persia, and Media saye lykwise vnto all the kynges prices, whe they heare of this dede of the quene, thus shal there arysse despytfulnes and wrathe ynoughe. If it please the kynge, let there go a commaundement from him, and let it be written accordyng to the lawe of the Persians and Medians (and not to be transgressed) that Vasthi come no more before kynge Ahasuerus, and lette the kynge geue the kingdome vnto another that is better then she.

And that this wytyng of the kynge whiche shalbe made, be published thorow out al his empyre (which is great) y<sup>e</sup> all wyues may hold their husbandes in honour, both among great & small.

This pleased the kynge and the princes, and the kynge dyd accordyng to the worde of Hamucan. Then were there letters sente forth into all the kynges landes, in to euery land accordyng to the wytyng thereof, and to euery people after theyr language, y<sup>e</sup> euery man shoulde be lord in his owne house. And thys caused he be spoken after the language of his people.

Of Esther

chens openeth vnto the kinge those that would betraye hym.

After these actes when the displeasure of kinge Ahasuerus was layed he thoughte vpon Mithri, what she had done, and what was concluded concerning her. Then sayd the kinges seruantes: Let there be faire young virgins soughte for the kyng, and let the king appoynt ouerseers in all the landes of his empire, that they may bringe together al faire younge byrgis vnto the castell of Susan to the womens buyldinge, vnder the hande of Hagei the kynges chamberlayne, that kepeth the women, and let hym geue them their apparrell. And loke whiche damsel pleaseth the kinge, let her be quene in Mithris steade. This pleased the kyng, and he dyd so.

In the castell of Susan there was a Jewe, whose name was Haradocheus, the sonne of Jair, the sonne of Semei, the sonne of Cis the sonne of Jemini, which was caried away from Ierusalem, * whan Jekoniah the kyng of Iuda was led awaye, (whome Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon caried awaye) and he nourished Hadalah (that is Esther) hys vnckles doughter: for she had neyther father nor mother, and she was a faire and beutyful damsell. And whē her father and mother dyed, Haradocheus receaued her as hys owne doughter.

Nowe when the kynges commaundement and comynssyon was publyshed, and many damselfs were brought together vnto the castell of Susan vnder the hand of Hagei, Esther was taken al so vnto the kynges house vnder the hand of Hagei the keeper of the women, & the damsel pleased him, & she founde grace in his sight. And he caused her to continēt to be gyven her, and her gyftes, & gaue her. vii. notable gentyl women of the kynges house, and arayed both her and her gentyl women very richely in the house of the women. But Esther shewed not her people nor her kynred: for Haradocheus had charged her, that she should not tell it. And Haradocheus walked euerye daye before the courte of the we-mens buyldinge, that he myght knowe how Esther dyd, and what shoulde become of her.

And when the appoynted tyme of euery damsell came that she should come to the kyng Ahasuerus, after that she had bene twelue monethes in the deckyng of the women (for their deckyng muste haue so muche tyme, namely sixe monethes with Balme and Myrr, and sixe monethes with good spyes, so were the women beutyfied) then wente there one damsel vnto the king, & what soeuer she requyred, that must be geuen her to go wyth her oute of the womens buyldinge vnto the kinges palace. And when one came in the euenyng, the same went from him on the morow into the seconde house of women, vnder the hand of Safagas the kinges chamberlayne, which kepeth the concubins. And she must come vnto the kyngs nympe, except it pleased the kinge, and that he caused her to be called by name.

Now when the tyme came of Esther the doughter of Abihail Haradocheus vnckle (whome he had receaued as hys owne doughter) that she should come to the king, she desyred nothyng but what Hagei the kinges chamberlayne the keeper of the women sayde.

And Esther founde fauoure in the syghte of all them that looked vpon her. And Esther was taken vnto king Ahasuerus into the house royal, in the tenth moneth which is called * Tebeth, in the seuenth yere of his raigne.

And the kyng loued Esther aboue al the women, and she founde grace and mercy in his syghte before all the virgins: and he set the quenes crowne vpon her head, & made her quene in steade of Mithri. And the kyng made a great feast vnto all hys prynces and seruantes (which feast was because of Esther) and let the landes bee in quietnes, and gaue roiall gyftes.

And whan the byrgins were gathered together the seconde tyme, Haradocheus sat in the kinges gate. And as yet had not Esther shewed her kynred and her people, according as Haradocheus had bydden her: for Esther did after the worde of Haradocheus, like as when he was her tutoure. At the same tyme whyle Harbocheus sat in the kynges gate, two of the kynges chamberlaines Bagathan and Thares whiche kepte the doze, were wroth, and sought to lay their handes on the kyng Ahasuerus: wherof Harbocheus gat knowledge, and*tolde it vnto quene Esther, & Est- her certified the kyng therof in Har- docheus name. And when inquisicion was made, it was founde so. And they were bothe hanged on tre: and it was wrytten in the Cronycles before the kyng.

Haman the eunuch, after he was exalted, ob- tained of the kyng that al the Jewes shoulde be put to death, because Harbocheus had not done hym worship as other had.

After these actes dyd the kyng promote Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite, and set him hye, & set his seate aboue al the prynces that were with him. And al þ kynges seruauntes that were in the gate, bowed their knees, and did reuerence vnto Haman: for the kyng had so commaunded. But Harbocheus bowed not the knee, and worshipped him not. Then the kynges seruauntes whiche were in the kynges gate, said vnto Harbocheus: why traſ- gresseth thou the kynges commaunde- ment? And when they spake this daylye vnto him, and he folowed the not, they tolde Haman, that they myght se whe- ther Harbocheus matters woulde en- dure: for he had tolde them, that he was a Jewe. And when Haman sawe, that Harbocheus bowed not the knee vnto him, nor worshipped him, he was full of indignacion and thought it to lytel to laye handes onely on Harbocheus: for they had shewed him the nacio of Har- docheus, but he soughte to destroye all the Jewes the nacio of Harbocheus, that were in the whole empire of Aha- suerus.

In the fyrste moneth (that is the mo- neth Nisan) in the twelueſe yere of kig Ahasuerus they cast Phur (þ is a lote) before Haman, on what daye and what moneth this shoulde be done: and it wet oute the twelueſe moneth that is þ mo- neth*Adar. And Haman said vnto kyng Ahasuerus: There is a people scattered abrode and dispersed amonge al people in all the landes of thine empire, & their lawe is contraty vnto al people, & they do not after the kynges lawes, nether is it the kynges profyt to suffer the af- ter this maner. If it please the kyng, let him wryte, that they may be destroy- ed, and so wyll I weye downe ten thou- sande talentes of syluer, vnder þ han- des of the worckme, to be brought in- to the kynges chamber. Then toke the kyng his rynge from his hande, & gaue it vnto Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite the Jewes enemye. And the kyng sayde vnto Haman: Let the syl- uer be geuen the, & that people also, to do with al what pleaseth the.

Then were the kynges scribes cal- led on the thirteenth daye of the fyrste moneth, and there was wrytten (accoz- ding as Haman comaunded) vnto the kynges prynces and to the captiues e- uery where in the landes, and to the ru- lars of euery people in the countreyes on euery syde, accordyng to the wry- tynge of euery nacion, and after the language in the name of kyng Ahasu- erus, and sealed with the kynges ringe. And the wrytinges were sent by postes in to all the kynges landes, to rote out, to kyll, and to destroye all Jewes, bothe yonge and olde, chyldren and women in one day (namely vpon þ thir- tenth daye of þ twelueſe moneth, which is the moneth Adar) and to spoyle theyr goodes.

This was the summe of the wrytinge, that there shoulde be a commaundemēt geuē in al landes, to be publyshed vnto all people, that they shoulde be readye agaynste the same daye. And the postes wente in all the haste accordyng to the kynges commaundemente. And in þ cas- tel of Susan was the commaundement deuysed. And the kyng and Haman sat and dranke. But the cite of Susan was dysquieted.

Of Esther.

Myddes of the citie, & cryed loude and lamentable, and came before þe kynges gate: for there myghte no man entre within the kynges gate, that had sacke clothe on. And in all landes and places, as farre as the kynges word and commaundement extended, there was great lamentacion amonge the <sup>a</sup> Jewes and many fasted, wepte, mourned, and laye in sacke clothes and in ashes. So Esther, hers damfels, and her chamberlaynes, came and tolde it her. The was þe quene exceedingly astonied. And she sent rayment, that Hardocheus should put the on, and laye the sacke clothe from hym. But Hardocheus would not take the. Then called Esther Hathath one of the kynges chamberlaynes (whiche stode before her) and gaue hym a commaundement vnto Hardocheus, þe he myght know what it were, and wherfore he did so. So Hathath went forth to Hardocheus vnto the strete of þe cytye, which was before the kynges gate.

And Hardocheus tolde him of all that had happened vnto him, and of the summe of syluer that Haman had promysed to weye doune in þe kynges chamber because of the Jewes for to destrope them: and he gaue him the coppe of the commaundement, that was deuyled at Susan to destrope them, that he might shewe it vnto Esther, and to speake to her and charge her, that she should go in to the kynge and make her prayer and supplicacion vnto hym for her people.

And when Hathath came in, & tolde Esther þe wordes of Hardocheus, Esther spake vnto Hathath, and commaunded hym to saye vnto Hardocheus: all the kynges seruauntes, and the people in the landes of the kynge knowe, that whosoener commeth within the courte vnto the kynge, whether it be man or woman, whiche is not called, the commaundement is that the same shal dye immediatlye, excepte the kynge holde oute the golden scepter vnto hym, that he maye lyue. As for me, I haue not bene called to come in to the kynges now this thirtie dayes.

And whē Hardocheus was certified of Esthers wordes, Hardocheus bad saye agayne vnto Esther: thynke not to saue thyne owne lyfe, whyle thou art in the kynges house before all Jewes: for yf thou holdeste thy peace at this tyme, then shall the Jewes haue helpe and deliuerance oute of another place, and thou and thy fathers house shalbe destroyed. And who knoweth whether thou art come to the kyngdom, for this tymes sake? Esther bad geue Hardocheus this answer: Go thou thy waye then, and gather together al the Jewes that are founde at Susan, and faste ye for me, that ye eate not and dryncke not in thre dayes, nether daye nor nyghte. I and my damfels wyll faste lyke wyse, and so wyll I go in to the kyng contrarye to þe commaundement: yf I perishe, I perishe. So Hardocheus wēt hys way, & did all þe Esther had commaunded him.

The Notes.

a. The Jewes were first called Hebrewes, of Heber the eldest sonne of Sale sonne of Arphapat, as it appeareth. Gen. xi. b. & i. Paral. i. c. after were they called Israel of Jacob, & after Jewes of one of the sonnes of Jacob that is to wete of Juda.

The. v. Chapter.

Esther entred in to the kyng and to detest him and Ham in to a feast. Hamā prepareth a galouise for Har- docheus.

And on þe thirde daye put Esther on her royal apparel, and stode in the courte of the kynges palace win ouer against the kynges house. And the kynge sate vpon hys royal seate in the kynges palace ouer agaynst the gate of þe house. And when the kynge sawe Esther the quene standynge in the courte, he foude grace in his syght. And the kynge helde out the golden scepter in hys hande towarde Esther. So Esther stepte forth, and touched the toppe of the scepter.

Then sayde the kynge vnto her: What what wylte thou quene Esther? & what requyrest thou? aske euen the halfe of the empire, and it shall be geuen the. Esther sayde: If it please the kynge, let the kynge and Haman come this daye vnto the banket that I haue prepared. The kynge sayde: cause Hamā to make hast, þe he maye do as Esther hath said.

Now when the kynge & Hamā came to the banket þe Esther had prepared, the kynge said vnto Esther at the banket of wine. Esther, what is thy petition and it shalbe geuen the. And what requyrest thou? If it be euen the halfe of the empyre, it shalbe done.

Then

C Then answered Esther and sayde: my petition & desyre is, yf I haue founde grace in the syght of the kynge, and yf it please the kynge to geue me my petition, & to fulfil my request, then let y king and Haman come to the bancket that I shall prepare for them, and so wyll I do to morowe as the kynge hath sayde.

Then wente Haman forthe the same daye ioyfull and merie in his mynde. And when he sawe Har-docheus in the kynges gate, that he stode not vp and kneled before hym, he was full of indignacion at Har-docheus. Neuertheles he refrayned hym selfe: & when he came home, he sete, and called for his frendes, and zares his wyfe, and tolde the of the glozpe of his riches, and the multitude of his children all together how y king had promoted him so greatly, and how that he was taken aboue the prynces and seruauntes of the kynge. Haman sayde moreouer: Yea, and Esther the quene let no man come with the kynge vnto the bācket that she had prepared, excepte me, and to morowe am I bidden vnto her also with the kynge. But in all this am I not satisfied as longe as I se Har-docheus the Jewe syttinge at the kynges gate. Then said zares hys wyfe and all his frendes vnto him: Let them make a galowes of fyfte cubites hie, and to morow speake thou vnto the kynge, that Har-docheus may be hanged thereon, yf thou comest metelye with the kynge vnto the bancket. Haman was well contente with all, and caused a galowes to be prepared.

C The. vi. Chapter.

The kyng turneth ouer the Chronicles and findeth the syneltrie of Har-docheus: & then to the confusion of Haman commaundeth Har-docheus to be had in honour.

In the same nyghte coulde not the kynge slepe, and he commaunded to brynge the Chronicles and storyes: whiche whē they were red before the king they happened on y place where it was written, howe Har-docheus had tolde, that the kynges two chamberlaynes (which kepte the thresholds) soughte: to laye handes on kynge Ahasuerus. And the kynge sayde: what worshyp and good haue we done to Har-docheus there? Then sayde the kynges seruauntes that ministred vnto hym. There is nothynge done for him. And the kynge sayde: Who is in the courte? (for Haman was gone in to the courte without before the kynges house, that he might speake vnto the kynge to hange Har-docheus on the tree, that he had prepared for hym.) And the kynges seruauntes sayde vnto hym: beholde, Haman standeth in the courte. The kynge said: let him come in. And when Haman came in, the kynge sayd vnto him: what shall be done vnto the man, whome the kynge woulde sayne brynge vnto worshyppe? But Haman thoughte in hys herte: Whome shoulde the kynge els be glade to brynge vnto worshyppe, but me? And Haman sayde vnto the kynge: Let the man vnto whome the kynge woulde be glade to do worshyppe, be broughte hither, that he maye be arayed with the royall garmentes whiche the kynge useth to weare: and the horse that y king rydeth vpon, and that the crowne royal maye be set vpon his head. And let this raymente and horse be deliuered vnder the hande of one of the kynges prynces, that he maye araye the man withall (whome the kynge woulde sayne honour) and carye hym vpon the horse thorow the strete of the cytie, and cause it to be proclaimed before hym: thus shall it be done to euery man, whome the kynge woulde sayne honour.

The kynge sayde: make haste, and take as thou hast sayde, the raymente and the horse: and do eue so with Har-docheus the Jewe that sytteth before the kynges gate, and let nothynge faile of all that thou hast spoken. Then toke Haman the raymente and the horse, arayed hym, and broughte hym on horses backe thorow the strete of the cytie, and proclaimed before hym: Euen thus shall it be done vnto euery man whom the kynge is dysposed to honour. And Har-docheus came againe to y kynges gate, but Haman gat hym home in all the haste mournynge with bare heade, and tolde zares hys wyfe and all hys frendes, euery thyng that had happened hym. Then sayde hys wyfe men and zares hys wyfe vnto hym: If it be Har-docheus of the seide of the Jewes, before whome thou hast begonne to fall, thou canste do nothyng vnto hym, but shalt fall before hym. Whyle they were yet talkynge with him, came the kynges chāberlaynes, and caused Haman to make haste to come vnto the bancket that Esther had prepared.

The. vii. Chapter.

The quene byddeth the kyng and Haman agayne, and prayeth for her selfe and her people. She accuseth Haman: and he is hanged on the galowse, which he had prepared for Mordocheus.

AND when the kynge and Haman came to þe bancket that quene Esther had prepared, the kynge sayde vnto Esther on the seconde daye at the bancket of wyne: what is thy peticion quene Esther, that it maye be geuen the? And what requyrest thou? Yea, aske euen halfe of the empyre, and it shal be done.
Esther the quene answered and sayde:
If I haue founde grace in thy syghte (O kynge) and yf it please the kynge then graunte me my lyfe at my desyre and my people for my peticiōs sake: for we are solde I and my people bothe to be destroyed, to be slayne and to perishe.

She rede
although the enemy
could not receyue
the kynges
harme.

B And woulde God we were solde to be bonde men and bondewymē, thē would I holde my tounge, * so shoulde not the enemye be so hye to the kynges harme.
The kynge Ahasuerus spake and said vnto quene Esther: what is he that? Or where is he that darre presume in hys mynde to do suche a thyng after that maner? Esther sayde: the enemye and aduersarye is this wicked Haman.

C As for Haman, he was exceedyngly afrayed before the kyng and the quene.
And the kynge arose from the bancket and from the wyne in hys dyspleasure and wente into the palace garden. And Haman stode by, and besoughte quene Esther for his lyfe: for he sawe þe there was a mischefe prepared for him of the kyng all readye.

And when the kyng came againe out of the palace garden into the parler

D where they had eaten, Haman had laied him vpon the bed that Esther sat vpon.
Then said the kynge: wyl he force the quene also besyde me in the house? As sone as that worde wente out of þe kynges mouth, they couered Hamans face.

And Harbonah one of the chamberlay-nes that stode before the kynge, sayde.

Beholde, there standeth a galowse in Hamans house fyfthe cubytes hie, which he had made for Mordocheus, þe spake good for the kynge. The kynge sayde: hange him theron. So they hanged Haman on the galowse that he had made for Mordocheus. Then was the kynges wrath pacified.

The. viii. Chapter.

After the death of Haman is Mordocheus exalted, and then are there comfortable letters sente vnto the Jewes.

H He same daye did kynge Ahasuerus geue the house of Haman the Je-wes enemye, vnto quene Esther. And Mordoche-us came before the kig:
for Esther tolde howe that he beloged vnto her. And the kynge put of his syngetrynge, whiche he had taken fro Haman, and gaue it vnto Mordocheus.
And Esther set Mordocheus ouer the house of Haman. And Esther spake yet more before the kynge, and fell downe at his fete, and besought hym, that he would put awaye þe wyckednes of Haman the Agagite, and hys deuyce that he had ymagined agaynst the Jewes.
And the kynge helde oute the golden scepter vnto Esther. Then rose Esther, and stode before the kynge, and sayde: yf it please the kynge, and yf I haue foude grace in his syghte, and yf it be conue-nyent for þe kynge, & yf it be accepted in hys sight then let it be written, that the letters of the deuyce of Haman þe sonne of Hamadatha þe Agagite, maye be called againe: whiche letters he wrote, to destroye the Jewes in al the kynges lā-des. For how can I se the euel that shal happen vnto my people? and howe can I loke vpon the destruccion of my kynred?

Then sayde the kynge Ahasuerus vnto quene Esther, and to Mordoche-us the Jewe: Beholde, I haue geuen Esther the house of Haman, and hym haue they hanged vpon a tre, because he layed hande vpon the Jewes. Wryte ye now therfore for the Jewes, as it lyketh you in the kynges name, & seale it with the kynges trynge (for the wrytynges that were wrytten in the kynges name, and sealed with the kynges

kynges ryng, durst no mā dysanulle.) Then were the kynges scribes called at the same tyme in the thyrde moneth, that is the moneth * Sivan, on the thre and twentyeth daye.

And it was wrytten (as Hardocheus commaunded) vnto the Jewes and to the princes, to the Debityes and cap- taynes in the landes from India vntyl Ethiopia, namely an hūdzred and seuen and twenty landes, vnto euery one ac- cordynge to the wrytynge therof, vnto euery people after theyr speche, and to the Jewes accordynge to theyr wryting and language.

D And it was wrytten in the kynges A- hasuerus name, and sealed with y kynges ryng. And by postes that rode vpon swyfte ponge Mules, sent he y wry- tynges, where in the kyng graūted the Jewes (in what cytyes locuer they were) to gather them selues together, and to stande for theyr lyfe, and for to *rote out, to slaye, and to destroye al the power of the people and lande y woulde trouble them, with chyldren and women, and to spoyle their good vpon one daye in all the landes of kyng Ahasuerus namely vpon the thirtenth daye of the twelue moneth, whiche is the moneth Adar.

To make for theyr lyfe, is a maner of speakinge samylar to the be- haves, for that we say, to de- fende their liues, and wiste the selues fro the cruell psecucion of their enemyes.

The summe of the wrytynge was, howe there was a commaundement ge- uen in all landes to be publyshed vnto all the people, that the Jewes should be readye agaynste that daye to auenge them selues on theyr enemyes. And the postes that rode vpon y Mules made haste with all speede, accordynge to the kynges worde: and the commaundemēt was deuysed in the castell of Susan.

As for Hardocheus, he wente oute from the kyng in royall apparel of ye- lowe and whyte, and w a great crowne of golde, beyng arayed with a garmēt of linnen and purple, and the cytye of Susan reioysed and was glad: but vnto the Jewes there was come lyghte and gladnesse, and ioye and worthyppe. And in all landes & cytyes, into what places locuer the kynges worde and commaundemente reached, there was ioye and myrth, prosperite, & good dayes amonge the Jewes: in so muche that many of the people in the lande became of the Jewes belefe, for the feare of the Jewes came vpon them.

The ix. Chapter.

It the commaundement of the kyng the Jewes put theyr aduersaries to death. The sonnes of Haman are hanged. The Jewes kepe a feaste daye in remembraunce of theyr deliuerance.

In the twelue moneth, that is y moneth Adar, vpon the thyrtyenth daie, whiche the kyngs worde and commaundemēt had appoynted, that it shuld be done, euen vpon the same daye y the enemyes shoulde haue destroyed y Jewes to haue oppressed them, it turned contrary wyse, euen y the Jewes shoulde subdue their enemyes. Then gathered the Jewes together in their citie with in al the landes of kyng Ahasuerus, to laye hande on suche as woulde do them euil, and no man coulde withstande them: for the feare of them was come ouer all people. And al the rulers in the landes, and prynces & Debities, & offi- cers of the kyng, promoted the Jewes: for the feare of Hardocheus came vpon them. For Hardocheus was greate in the kynges house, and the reporte of hym was noysed in all landes, howe he increased and grewe.

Thus the Jewes smote all their e- nemyes with a sore slaughter, and slew and destroyed, and dyd after their wyll vnto suche as were their aduersaries. And at the castel of Susan slewe y Jewes and destroyed fyue hundzeth men: & slewe Pharlandatha, Delphō, Alphas- tha, Phoratha, Adalia, Aridatha, Phat- mastha, Arisai, Aridai, Uaisatha, y ten sonnes of Hamā the sonne of Hamada- tha the enemye of the Jewes: but on his goodes they layed no handes. At the same tyme was the kyng certifyed of the nombze of those that were slayne at the castell of Susan. And the kyng e- sayde vnto the quene Esther: The Je- wes haue slayne and destroyed fyue hū- dzeth mē at the castel of Susan, & y ten sonnes of Haman: What shall they do in the other landes of the kyng? What is thy petition, that it may be geue the- and what requirerest y more to be done? Esther said: If it please the kyng, let him suffer y Jewes to morowe also to do accordynge vnto this dayes commaundement, that they maye hange Hamans ten sonnes vpon the tre. And the kynge charged to do so, and the commaundement was deuyled at Susan, and Hamans ten sonnes were hanged. And the Jewes gathered them selues together at Susan, vpon the fourteenth daye of the moneth Adar, and slew thre hundreth me at Susan, but on their goodes they layed no handes.

the letter

D As for the other Jewes in þe kynges landes, they came together, and * stode for their lyues, and gat rest from theyr enemyes: & slewe of theyr enemyes fyue and seuentye thousande, how be it they layed no handes on their goodes. This was done on the thirteenth daye of the moneth Adar, and on the fourteenth daye of the same moneth rested they, whiche daye they ordeyned to be a daye of feastinge and gladnesse. But the Jewes at Susan were come together both on the thyrtyenth daye and on the fourteenth, and on the fyftenth daye they rested, and the same daye ordeyned they to be a daye of feastinge & gladnes. Therefore the Jewes that dwelte in the byllages and walled townes, ordeyned þe fourtenth daye of þe moneth Adar, to be a daye of feastinge and gladnes, and one sent gyftes vnto another.

C And Mardocheus wrote these actes, and sente the wrytynge vnto al þe Jewes that were in all the landes of kyng Ahasuerus, bothe nye and farre, that they shoulde yearlye receaue and holde the fourteenth and fyftenth daye of þe moneth Adar, as the dayes wherein the Jewes came to rest fro theyr enemyes, and as a moneth wherein their payne was turned to ioye, and theyr sorowe into prosperite: that they shoulde obserue the same as dayes of wealth and gladnes, and one to sende gyftes vnto another, and to dystribute vnto the poore.

F And the Jewes receaued it þe they had begonne to do, & that Mardocheus wrote vnto them: how that Haman the sonne of Hamadatha all the Jewes enemye, had deuyled to destroye all the Jewes, and caused to caste Phur (that is Lot) for to put them in feare, and to brynge them to noughte: and how Hester wente and spake to the kynge, that thorowe letters hys wycked deuyces (which he ymagined against þe Jewes) myghte be turned vpo his owne heade, and howe he and his sonnes were hanged on the tre, for the which cause they called this daye Phurim after þe name of * Phur, accordynge to all the wordes of this wrytynge: and what they them selues had sene, and what had happened vnto them.

That is Lot.

And the Jewes set it vp, and toke it vpon them and theyr sede, and vpon all such as ioynd them selues vnto them, that they woulde not mysse to obserue these two dayes yearly, accordynge as they were wrytten and appoynted, how that these dayes are not to be forgotte, but to be kepte of the childers chyldren amonge all kyntedes in all landes and cities. They are the dayes of Phurim, which are not to be ouerslypte, amonge the Jewes, and the memorye all of them ought not to peryshe from their sede.

And quene Hester the doughter of Abihail and Mardocheus the Jewe wrote with all auctorite, to cofirme this seconde wrytynge of Phurim, and sente the letters vnto all the Jewes in þe hundredeth and seuen and twentye landes of the empyre of Ahasuerus, with frendlye and faythfull wordes, to confyrme these dayes of Phurim, in theyr tyme appoynted, accordynge as Mardocheus the Jewe and Hester the quene had ordeyned concernynge the: lyke as they vpon theyr soule & vpon their sede had confyrmed the actes of the * fastynges and of hys complaynte. And Hester commaunded to stablyshe these actes of this Phurim, and to wryte them in a booke.

As for all the worke of his power and auctorite, and the great worthyppe of Mardocheus, whiche the kynge gaue hym beholde, it is wrytte in þe Cronycles of þe kynges of Media & Persia. For Mardocheus the Jewe was þe seconde nexte vnto kynge Ahasuerus, & great amonge þe Jewes.

The fyrste Chapter.

Job is plagued of God by the losse of his goodes and chyldren.

In þe lāde of * þus there was a mā called Job: an innocent and vertuous man, suche one as feared God eschued euell. This man had. vii. sonnes and

iii. doughters. * þys substance was vii. M. shepe. iii. M. camels. v. c. pouck of oxen. v. C. the asses, and a very great household: so that he was one of þe most principall men amonge all them of the east countre. And his sonnes went, and made banckettes: one daie in one house, another daie in another, and sente for thei. iii. systers to eate & dryncke with them. So when they had passed ouer the tyme of thei banckettyng rounde aboute, Job sente for them, and censed them agayne, and gat vp earlye, & offered for euery one a bzentofferynge. For Job thoughte thus: peraduenture my sonnes haue done some offence, & haue bene vnthankful to god in thei hertes. And thus dyd Job euery daie. * Nowe vpon a tyme, when the <sup>a</sup>seruauntes of God <sup>b</sup>came and stode before the Lord, Sathan came also amonge them. And the Lorde sayde vnto Sathan: from whence comest thou? Sathan answered the Lorde, and sayd: * I haue gone aboute the lande, and walcked thorow it.

Then sayde the Lord vnto Sathan: haste thou not consydered my seruaunt Job, how þe is an innocent & vertuous man: suche one as feareth God, and escheweth euell, and that there is none lyke hym in the lande. Sathan answered, and sayde vnto the Lorde: Not he

Job feare God for houghte: haste thou not preserued hym, his house, and al his substance on euery spde: haste thou not blessed the worckes of his handes: Is not his possessiō encreased in þe lād? But laye thyne hande vpon him a litle, touche once all that he hathe, and (I holde) he shall curse the to thy face. And the Lorde sayde vnto Sathan: lo, all that he hathe, be in thy power: onely vpon hym selfe, se that thou laye not thyne hande. Then went Sathan forth from the Lorde.

Nowe vpon a certayne daie, when his sonnes & doughters were eatynge, and drynckinge wyne in thei eldest brothers house, there came a messenger vnto Job, and sayde: Whyle the oxen were a plowynge, and the asses goynge in the pasture besyde them: the Sabees came in violentlye, and toke them all away: yea, they haue slayne thy seruantes with the swearde, and I onely ranne my waye, to tell the.

And whyle he was yet speakynge, there came another, and sayd: The tye of God is fallen from heauen, it hathe consumed, and bzente vp all thy shepe and seruantes: and I onely ranne my waye, to tell the. In the meane ceason whyle he was yet speakynge, there came another, and sayde: The Caldees made thre armies, and fel in vpon thy camels, whiche they haue carted away: yea, and slayne thy seruantes with the swearde: and I onely am gottē away, to tel the: Whyle he was speakynge, there came yet another, and sayd: Thy sonnes and doughters were eatynge & drynckynge wyne in thei eldest brothers house: and sodenlye there came a myghtie greate wynde oute of the Southe, and smote the. iiii. corners of the house: whiche fel vpon thy childre, so that they are deade: and I am gotten away alone, to tell the.

a. By the seruantes of God here, vnderstande, not onely angelles, by whom he ordereth þe course and workes of the world: but also the godly and chosen, whome he continually careth and pro- uydeth for. Job. ii. a.

b. Came and stode before the Lorde. Thinke not that God some tyme appeareth to the angelles, and sometyme not, for the good auingelles do al- wayse se the face of God. Neither comeneth god ether with the auingelles or with the deuill with bodely speache, but the holy ghoost in the scrip- tures speaketh manye thynges vnto vs accordyng to oure scalpyng and vseth a maner of speakyng familyare to vs, attrepytunge, appearyng, spea- kyng, enquiryng, answeryng to God & to au- ingelles, whiche thyng man onely vseth, to thyntet that we therby maye the caselyer perceyue hys meanyng. The comyng of the auingelles here is no other thyng then to geue accountes of the offyce intownd them: which they geue, knowing that God seeth with what tru they dyd it: and so geue thanks, and wayte for theyr reward. They came (sayeth Origen) honouryng, magni- fyng, praysyng, geuyng thanks. Of Sathā also wyrteth he thus. He came, nether with go- ingeto, or comyng in, but he came in thought, counsel, and moost wycked desyre to accuse the ryghteous before God. His thoughte and desyre are taken as a comyng. The deuill then is con- sidered to haue come into the syghy of God, not that the moost wycked came in dedde in the syghy of the good God, but because his cruell and mooste wycked thoughtes came into the syghy of God. And thus euen now a dayes also cometh þe deuill with them into the syghy of God, in that he dailye accuseth, fynderth faule, vereth, persecuteth and troubleth the godlye.

The. ii. Chapter.

Job is plagued with sore byles, and afterwarde is touched of hys wyfe. His frendes vlyte hym, and haue compassion on hym.

IT happened also vpo a tyme, that when the seruantes of God came and stode before the Lorde, Sathan came amonge them, & stode before him. And the Lorde sayde vnto Sathan: From whence comest thou? Sathan answe- red, and sayde: I haue gone aboute the lande, and walcked thowowe it.

Then sayde the Lord vnto Sathā: haste thou not considered my seruante Job: how that he is an innocēt and ver- tuous man, suche one as feareth God, and escheweth euil, & that there is none lyke him in the lande? But þe mouedest me agaynste hym, to punyssh hym: yet is it in wayne, for he contynueth styll in hys godlynesse. Sathan answered the Lorde, and sayde: Skynne for skynne- pea a man wyll geue all that euer he hath, for his lyfe. But laye thyne hande vpon him, touche him onice vpon þe bone and flethe, & (I holde) he shall curse the to thy face. Then sayde the Lorde vnto Sathan: lo, there hast thou hym in thy power, but spare his lyfe.

So wente Sathan forthe from the Lorde, and smote Job with maruelous sore byles, from the sole of the fote vnto his crowne: so þe he sat vpo þe groude in the ashes, and scraped of the fylthe of his sores with a pottherde.

Then sayde hys wyfe vnto hym:

* Doest thou contynue yet in thy per- fectues? curse God, and dye. But Job said vnto her: Thou speakest lyke a fo- lythe woman. Sepnge we haue recea- ued prosperite at the hande of God, whertore shoulde we not be contēt with aduersyte also? In all these thynges, dyd not Job synne with his lyp- pes. Job. ii. b. Job. iii. b.

Nowe when Jobs frendes herde of all þe trouble, that happened vnto him, there came thre of them, euery one from hys owne place: namelye, Eliphaz the Thamanite, Baldad the Suhite, and Zophar the Naamathite.

For they were agreed together to come, to shewe their compassion vpon him, and to comforte hym. So when they lyfte vp theyr eyes a farre of, they knewe him not.

Then they cryed, and wepte: then euery one of them rente hys clothes, and spzynckled dust vpon theyr heades in the ayre. They sat them doune by him also vpon the grounde. vii. dayes and .vii. nyghtes. Neither was there any of them that spake one worde vnto hym, for they sawe, that hys payne was verye greate.

The Notes.

a. God is here descreybed as hyng and demaunde dyng, nor that he vnto whome all thynges are knowen shoulde therby learne anye thyng: but that the deccates and reuickoner of Sathā which alwayes lyeth in wayte, myghte be vnto vs the better knowen, to thertent that we shoulde walke the more warelye.

The. iii. Chapter.

The wordes of Job, wherein he declar- eth that thys present lyfe is myscreable: and that the death of þe ryghteous is ioyous and fortunable.

After this opened Job hys mouth, & a cursed his daye, and said: lost be þe day, wherein I was borne: & the nyghte, in the which it was sayde: there is a man chylde chylde concealed. The same daye be turned to darckenesse, and not regarded of God from aboue, nether be shyned vpon wyth lyghte: But he couered wyth darckenesse, and the shadowe of death. Let the dynne cloude fall vpon it, and let it be lapped in wyth sorowe on the day tyme. Let the darcke storme ouercome that nyght, let it not be reckened amonge the dayes of the yere, nor counted in the monethes. Despyred be that nyghte, & dyscommended: Let them curse the day, euen those that be ready to rayse vp mournynge gene it also their curse. Lette the starres of that nyghte be dynne thorowe darckenesse of it. Let it loke for lyght, but let it se none, nether the risynge vp of the fayre moonyng: because it shut not vp þe wombe that bare me, nor hyd these sorowes fro myne eyes.

Jer. xx. 11

Alas why died I not in the byrth? Why dyd not I perishe, as sone as I came out of my mothers wombe: why let they me vpon their knees? Why gaue they me sucke wyth their brestes? The shoulde I now haue lyeen styll, I shoulde haue slept and bene at rest: like as the kinges and Lordes of the earth, whyche buylde them selues specyall places: As the prynces that haue great substance of golde, and their houses full of syluer. O that I bitterlye hadde no beyng, or were as a thyng borne out of tyme (that is put a side) ether as ponge chylde, whiche neuer sawe the lyghte. There muste the wycked ceasse frome their tyrannye, there suche as are ouerlaboured be at reste: There are those let out fre, whyche haue bene in prysō, so that they heare no more the voyce of þe oppressour: There are small and great: The bondman, and he that is fre from hys maister.

Wherefore is the lyghte geuen to hym that is in myserye? And lyfe vnto them, that haue heuie heartes? Which longe for deathe, yf it come not: And seache for it more then for treasure, whyche also woulde bee excedyng gladde, and reioyce, yf they fōude their graue any where. That shoulde ioye to the man whose waye is hyd: whiche God kepeth backe frome hym. For my sighes come before I eate, and my roarynges fall oute lyke flowynge water. For the thyng that I feared is come vpon me: And the thyng that I was afrayed of, is happened vnto me: was I not happye? Had I not quyetnesse? Was I not in reste? And now cometh suche myserye vpon me

a. Cursed hys dape. Lyke as a man hauinge an impostume (saith Chrysostome) yf he be cut of the surgeon, hauing nothinge wherewith he may resist, duringe the tyme of hys cuttinge, holdeth fast the thynges that be nye him, and is ready to byte them that stande by him, and yet can do nothing vnto them: euen so Job fearinge the great vniuerses of blasphemynge and cursynge, dothe wronge to vniuerses thynges, & speakynge after the maner of the common people, whych impute their myserye to the influence of the starres, & to the daye of their birth, curseth his dape, that is, testifieth with cursynge howe bitter a lyfe he liueth, and vnto howe greate myseryes he was borne (as we commenlye saye) in an unhappye houre, euen as though now a dayes a man repentyng his synnes, shoulde say: Wo is me wretch. In an unhappye houre was I borne, whiche in my deades haue denyed my maker, wo worth it. & cetera.

b They that curse the dape, are those that are werye of their lyfe, in so muche that they fall in dede to cursynge.

The.iiii. Chapter.

Job is reprehended of impacyence and iniustyce, & of the presumption of hys owne ryghteousnes.

When answered Eliphaz the Themanite, and sayde vnto hym: If we begynne to come with the peraduenture thou wilt be discontent, but who can withholde hym selfe frome speakynge? Beholde, thou haste bene a teacher, of manye, and haste comforted the werye handes. Thy woordes haue sette vp those that were fallen, thou haste refreshed the weake knees. But now that the plage is come vpon the, thou thynckest awaye: Nowe that it hath touched thy selfe thou arte faynte hearted. * Is not thys thy feare, thy stedfastnesse, thy pacience, and the perfectnesse of thy wayes? Consydre (I praye the) whoeuer perished beyng an innocent? Or, whē were the godly destroyed? As I haue sene them that plowe vanite & sow malice, reape the same. ## The Notes.

a. By the roaringe, the voyce, and the teethe, are vnderstand the blasphemies and backbitinges. that are vsed agaynst the innocent, as it is said Psou. xxx. b. By the similitude of the Lyon he meaneth, that wicked shal perceyue how great or mightie soeuer they be.

b. Shal man be more iust? &c. Of this principle wyll Eliphaz reason thus agaynst Job. If God woulde destroye an innocent, it should followe ymā were more righteous & pure thā God, but this is impossible, for the contrarye is shewed vnto me by reuelation.

c. Beholde there is no trust. &c. He labourerth in confirminge that which he had before propounded. The summe of the reason is, Angels are not purer then God, ergo not men.

d. Dignite signifieth here what soeuer they haue wherin they excel other, whether it be in riches or honour, power, or conninge, &c. For none of these shal redeame them from death.

The Notes,

a. He deliuereth & c. This sentence propounded after the maner of a propheticke, signifyeth alone with that of Dauid. i. Cor. x. c. ## The. vi. Chapter.

Job answered, that his payne is more greivous the his faulte, yet notwithstanding he desyret therein.

Job answered, and sayd: O that my miserie were weyed, and my punishment layed in the balaunces: for then shulde it be heuier, then the sande of the sea. Thys is the cause, that my wordes are so sorowfull.

For the arrowes of the almyghtye are in me, whole indignacion hathe droncke by my spirite, & the terryble feares of God fight agaynst me. * Doeth the wylde Ass roare when he hath grasse: Or crieth the oxe, when he hath fodder ynough: that which is vnsaue-ry shall it be eaten withoute salt: or is there any tast in the white of an egge: The thinges that some time I might not away with all, are nowe my meate for verye sorow. O that I might haue my desyre: O that God wolde graunt me the thyng, that I longe for: That he wolde beginne & smite me: that he wolde let his hande goe, and hewe me downe. Then shuld I haue some comfort: yea, I wold desire hi in my payne, that he shulde not spare, for I wyl not be agaynst the wordes of the holy one.

What power haue I to endure: Or what is myne ende, þy my soule might be paciente: Is my strength þy strength of stones: Or is my fleche made of brasse: Is it not so þy there is in me no helpe: and þy that my substance is take fro me. He þy is in tribulacion ought to be comforted of his neighbour: but the feare of the Lorde is cleane awaye: Mine owne brethren passe ouer by me, as the water brouke, that hastely runneth thorowe the valleyes. * But they that feare the hoare froste, the snowe shal fall vpon them.

Esa. lvi. a

When their time cometh, they shal be destroyed and perishe: And when they be set on fyre, they shalbe remoued oute of their place, for the pathes that they goe in, are croked: they hast after vayne thinges, and shal perishe. Considre the pathes of Cheman, & þy wayes of Saba, wherein they haue put their trust. Confounded are they that putte any confidence in them: for when they came to obtaine the thynges, that they looked for, they were brought to confusion.

Euen so are ye also come vnto me: but nowe that ye see my miserie, ye are a frayde. Wyd I desire you, to come hither: Or to geue me anye of your substance: To deliuer me from the enemies hand, or to saue me from þy power of the mightie: Teache me, and I wyl holde my tounge: and yf I do erre, hewe me wherein.

Wherefore blame ye then the wordes, that are wel and truely spoken: which of you can reprove them: Sauynge onely þy ye are sotil to checke mens saynges, and can speake manye wordes in the wynde. Ye fall vpon the fathers lesse, & goe aboute to ouerthrowe your owne frende. Wherefore looke not onely vpon me, but vpon your selues: whether I lye, or no. Turne into youre owne selues (I praye you) be indifferent iudges, and consydre myne vngiltynesse: whether there be any vnrightheousnes in my tounge, or vayne wordes in my mouth.

them selues, and so are healthfully kylled: as it is sayde: Psalme. xxxvii. a. Some agayne expoundeth to be the crosse of miserie and wretchednes, wherein God had now wrapped hi. For þe sanctes (saye they) receiue their crosse of the hande of God. Th. same wyll, that this sentence be a encreasing and amplifyinge of that, which his aduersarye had fearefully layde agaynst hym. Eliphaz in the beginning of the. iiii. chapter had sayde, that the plage was come vpon him: & had touched him, w this (say they) meateth he now. Behold, it not only toucheth me, but woundeth me with arrowes, and thate venomed with venoume, hapely with gal of dragons, with which touchinge, bothe my bloude wapeth woode, and al my spirite is supped vp. Moreouer God hath not onely throwen these darres vpon me, but also his dreadfyll feares, that is, what soeuer he hath that is terrible, layeth he on me.

b. That my substance is taken frome me. The Chal. interpie. hath. Wisdom is departed from me, and that after. Rab. Mos. the wisdom of deuisinge iudginges and tryng of thynges. As though he shoulde saye, so sore is my greefe, sith my helpe is taken frome me, that I am not permitted to breath so longe, tyl I maye call to remembrance what is mooste acceptable to God. Some reade. Is not al the strengthe of myne inforcement gone frome me.

c. But the feare of the Lorde. & c. As though he sayde. But alas, now a dayes, there is no feare of the Lorde left: and therefore it is no meruayle, yf charite also which is toynd to the feare of God, be not in vfe.

The. vii. Chapter.

Job sheweth that this lyfe is but a battayle or warfare.

psa. xxxix. b

Not the lyfe of man vpon earth a verie battayle: * Are not his dayes lyke the dayes of an hyred seruaunt: for lyke as a bonde seruaunte desireth the shadow, & as an hyrelynge wold sayne haue an ende of hys woorkke: Euen so haue I laboured whole moneth longe (but in vayne) and manye a carefull night haue I told. * When I layed me downe to slepe, I sayde: O when shall I ryse: Agayne, I longed sore for the night. Thus am I ful of sorowe, tyl it be darcke. My fleshe is clothed wth wormes, fylthynesse and dust: my skine is wythered, and cromptled together:

* my dayes passe ouer more spedelye, then a weeuier can weeuie out his web: And are gone, or I am aware. O remembre, that my lyfe is but a wynde, and that myne eye shal no more se the pleasures therof, yea, and that none other mans eye shal see me anye more. For yf thou fasten thine eyes vpon me, I come to nought like as a cloude is consumed & vanished awaye, euen so he y goeth downe to hel, cometh no more vp, nether turneth agayne into hys house, nether shal his place know hi anye more.

Therefore I wyl not spare my mouth, but wyll speake in the trouble of my spirite, in þe bytternesse of my mynde I talke. Am I a sea or a whalfish, that thou kepest me so in prisone: When I thinke: my bedde shal comforte me. I shal haue some refreshynge by talynge by my selfe vpon my couche: * Then troublest thou me wyth dreames, & makest me so afrayed thowow visions, that my soule wytheth rather to be strangled, and my bones to be deed.

Rom. viii. c

Job answered, and ſayde: As for that, I know it is ſo of a trueth, that a man copared vnto God, can not be iuſti- fied. If he wil argue with him, he ſhal not be able to anſwere hym vnto one amonge a thouſande. He is wyſe of heart, and mightie in ſtrength. Who e- uer prospered, that toke parte agaynſt him: a he traſſated the mountaynes, oz euer they be aware, and ouerthro- weth them in his wrathe. He remoueth the earth out of her place, that her pyl- lers ſhake withall, he commaundeth the ſunne, and it ryſeth not: he cloſeth vp the ſtarrs, as it were vnder a lig- net. He hym ſelfe alone ſpredeth oute the heauens, and goeth vpon the wa- ues of the ſea. He maketh the waynes of heauen, the Orions, *y. vii. ſtarrs and the ſecrete places of the Southe. He doeth great thinges, ſuche as are vnſearchable: Yea, and wōders with- oute nombze.

Amos. v. d

If he came by me, I might not loke vpon hym: Yf he wente hys waye, I ſhulde not perceaue it. If he be haſtye to take anye thyng awaye, who wyl make him reſtoze it agayne: Who wyl ſay vnto him: *what doeſt thou: He is God, whoſe wrath no man may with- ſtande: But the proudeſt of all muſte ſcoupe vnder him. Howe ſhoulde I the anſwere him: Or what worde ſhulde I finde out agaynſt him: Yea, though he I be righteous, yet wyl I not geue him one woorde agayne, but mekelye ſubmit my ſelfe to my iudge. Al be it y I cal vpon him, and he heare me, yet am I not ſure, that he hath hearde my voyce: he troubleth me ſo with the re- peſt, and woundeth me out of meaſure without a cauſe. He wyl not lette my ſpिरितe be in reſte, but fylleth me with bytterneſſe.

Eccle. viii. a Ierem. x. a

If men will ſpeake of ſtrengthe, he is the ſtrongeſt of all: Yf men wyl ſpeake of righteouſnes, who darre be my recorde. If I wyl iuſtifie my ſelf, my owne mouthe ſhall cōdemne me: If I wyl put forth my ſelfe for a per- fecte man, he ſhall proue me a wicked doer: For that I ſhuld be an innocent, my conſcience knoweth it not: yea, I my ſelfe am weery of my lyfe.

This one thinge wil I ſaye: He de- ſtroyeth bothe the righteous & vngod- ly. And though he ſlaye ſodaynlye with the ſcourge, yet laugheth he at the puniſhment of the innocent. As for the worlde, he geueth it ouer into y po- wer of y wicked, ſuch as the rulers be, wherof al landes are ful. Is it not ſo: where is there any, but he is ſuch one.

that hasteth to the praye. When I am purposed to forget my cōplayninges to chaūge my cōtēnauunce, & to cōforte my seife: then am I asayed of all my workes, for I knowe thou fauourest not an euyl doer. If I be then a wycked one, why haue I laboured in vayne? Though I washed my seife with snow water, and made myne handes neuer so cleane as y<sup>e</sup> wel, yet shuldest y<sup>e</sup> dip me in the mier, & myne owne clothes shuld defyle me. For he y<sup>e</sup> I muste geue answere vnto, and with whome I goe to lawe, is not a man as I am. Nether is there anye dayes man, to reprove both the parties, or to laye hys hāde betwixt vs. Let him take his rodde awaye from me: yea, let him make me no more as frayed of him, and thus shal I answere hym without feare, for as longe as I am in suche fearefulnessse, I can make no answere: And why? It greueth my soule to lyue,

a. God translate the mountaynes, not onely these of the earth, but also the arrogant & proud tyrantes, and the great realmes of the worlde, which by a borrowed speache are often tymes in the scripture signified by mountaynes and hylles. So translated he Pharao. Exod. xxi. g. and kynge Senacherib. Esay. xxxvii. g.
b. Here is it good to see that Job presumeth not of his owne righteousness, but playnly confesseth him selfe vnrightheous and a sinner before God, although before the worlde he had lyued blamelesse. God loketh on the hearte though men loke but onely on the outward apperaunce. His aduersaries thought that he shulde neuer haue had such a crosse laide on him, onlesse then he had also outwardly and openly liued in wickednesse. So pauseth Job in diuers places that he therein was not culpable, & therefore accuseth as it were after the maner of men, the iudgement of God, concerninge suche as are outwardly righteous: and studious to lyue vertuously: namelye suche as lyue without blame amonge men, and that bothe entende and doe well to all men, and yet are wrappd in manye miseries and wretchednes often tyme ouer cruel. And herein lyeth the chiefe of the contrarietye betwixt Job & his aduersaries, that Job defendeth him selfe not to haue deserued his punishment by his outward lyuing: where as his aduersaries armed onely with manly and fleshly witte, thoughte God to be vnrightheous, yf he wolde so greuously punish him that had not bene an outward sinner agaynst him. Job, his conscience bearinge hym witness, had lyued innocensly and freyghtly, and hurt no man, had alwayes feared God, and worshipped him onely, his children also had he nouerred to the feare of God, & coulde of no man be accused of wickednes. Yet witnesseth he in this here (as the godly do) that he was not vicerly without sinne, for other wise had he bene a liar.

i. Iohn. i. If we saye, we haue no sinne, we deceaue our selues, and truerth is not in vs. Wherfore in the places where he sayeth that he hath not deserued his punishment, and that shoulde seme to swete him blamelesse, knowe, that he speaketh of his outward manner of liuinge, not of the inward thoughtes and desires of the hert, wherein he was vndouted an offender.

The .x. Chapter.

Job is weere of his lyfe, & setteth oute hys fragilitie before God. He desireth the tyme to repēt. A description of death.

Euert helosse, nowe wyll I put forth my wordes: I wyll speake out of y<sup>e</sup> verve heynesse of my soule, and wyll saye vnto God: I do not condēpne me, but shewe me the cause, wherfore thou iudgest me on thys maner. Thinkest thou this wel done, to oppres me, to cast me of (beinge a worcke of thy handes) and to mayntayne the counsell of y<sup>e</sup> vngodlye? Hast thou fleshy eyes then, or doest thou loke as man loketh? Are thy dayes as y<sup>e</sup> dayes of mā, & thy yeares as mans yeares? That y<sup>e</sup> makest suche inquisition for my wyckednes, & searchest out my sinne: where as (not withstandinge) thou knowest that I am no wycked person, and that there is no man able to deliuer me oute of thyne hand. Thy hādes haue made me, & fashioned me altogether rounde aboute, wyll thou then destroye me todaye? I remēbre (I beseeche the) how y<sup>e</sup> thou madest me of the mould of the earth, and shalt bringe me to earthe agayne.

Hast thou not milked me, as it were milcke: and turned me to cruddes like chese? Thou hast couered me wth skinne and flesh, and ioyned me together with bones, and sinowes. Thou hast graunted me lyfe, and done me good: and the diligente hede that thou tokest vpon me, hath preserued my spirite.

Though thou hydest these thinges in thine heart, yet am I sure, that thou remēbrest the al. Wherfore dydest thou kepe me; when I synned, and hast not clenched me from myne offence? If I do wickedlye, wo is me therfore: If I be righteous, yet dare I not lyfte vp my heade: so full am I of confusion, and se myne owne miserie.

That I had perished, and y<sup>e</sup> no eye had sene me. If they had caried me to my graue, as soone as I was borne, then shoulde I be nowe, as though I had neuer bene.

The. xi. Chapter.

Job is vniustly reprehended of Sohar. God is incomprehensible. He is mercifull to the repentant.

A Then answered Sophar the Naamathite, & sayd: Shulde not he that maketh manye wordes, be answered? Shoulde he that bableth muche, be commended therein? Shoulde men geue eare vnto the onely? Thou wilt laugh other men to scoorne, and shal no bodye mocke the agayne? Wylte thou saye vnto God: The thynges that I take in hande is perfecte, & I am cleane in thy syght? That God woulde speake, and open hys lippes agaynst the, that he might shewe the (oute of his secreete wisdom) howe manyfolde hys lawe is: then shouldest thou know, that God had forgotte the, because of thy synnes.

B Wylte thou finde out God wth thy synger? Wylte thou attayne to the perfectnesse of the almightie? He is hyer then heauen, what wylte thou doe? Deeper then the hell, howe wylte thou then knowe hym? Hys lengthe exceedeth the lengthe of the earthe, and hys bredeth the bredeth of the sea. D The shuldest thou forget thy misery, and thynke no more vpon it, then vpon the waters that runne by. Then shuld thy lyfe be as cleare as the noone day, and sprynge forth as the mornynge. Then myghtest thou haue comforte, in the hope that thou hast: And slepe quietlye, when thou arte buried. Then shouldest thou take thy rest, and nomā to make the astrayed: yea, manye one shulde set much by the. The. xii. Chapter.

Job in shewing hys patience declareth y<sup>e</sup> myghte and power of God.

S Job answered, and sayd: Then (no doute) ye are the men alone, & wisdom shal perswade with you. But I haue vnderstandynge as well as ye, and am no lesse then ye. Yea, who knoweth not these thynges? Thus he that calleth vpon God, and whom God heareth, is mocked of his neighbour: the godlye and innocent mā is laughed to scoorne. ## The .xiii. Chapter.

Job reproveth his frendes w their owne saynges, and condemneth hypocrisie.

In al thys haue I serie with myne eye, hearde with myne eare, & vnderstande it. Loke what ye knowe, that same doe I knowe also, nether am inferior vnto you. Neuerthelesse I am purpo- sed to talke with the almyghtye, & my desire is to comē with God. As for you, ye are workmaisters of lyes, and vn- profitable physicyans all to gether. Wolde God ye kept your tongue, that ye might be taken for wise men. Ther- fore heare my wordes, & ponde the sē- tence of my lippes. Wyl ye make an- swere for God with lyes, & mayntayne hym with disceate? Wyl ye accept the persone of God, and intreate for hym? Shall that helpe you, when he calleth you to rekenyng. Thynke you to be- gyle hym, as a man is begyled? He shall punyssh you and reprove you, yf ye doe secretlye accepte anye personne. Shal he not make you astrayed, when he sheweth hym selfe? Shal not his ter- ryble seare fall vpon you? Your re- membraunce shalbe like vnto the dust, and your pryde shalbe turned in to claye. Holde your tongues now, and let me speake, for there is some thyng into my minde. <sup>a</sup> Wherefore do I beare my flesh in my teethe, & my soule in myne handes? Lo, there is nether com- fort nor hope for me, yf he wyl slaye me. But yf I shewe and * reprove my- ne owne wayes in his syghte, he is euē the same, that maketh me whole: And why? there maye no hypocrite come be- fore hym. Heare my wordes, and pou- dre my saynges w your eares. <sup>b</sup> Be- holde, now haue I prepared my iudge- ment, and knowe that I shalbe founde righteous. What is he, that wyl goe to lawe with me? For yf I holde my tongue, I shall dye. Neuerthelesse graunte me two thynges, & then wyl I not hyde my selfe from thee.

Withdrowe thyne hande from me, & let not the fearfull drede of the make me astrayed. And then sende for me to the lawe, yf I may answere for my selfe: or els, let me speake, and geue thou the answer. Howe great are my misdedes and synne? Let me know my transgressi- ons and offences. <sup>c</sup> Wherefore hydest thou thy face, and holdest me for thyne enemye? Wylte thou be so cruel and ex- treme vnto a flyng leafe, & folow vp- on drie stubble: that y layest so sharply to my charge, and wylte vtterlye vn- do me, * for y sines of my youth: & thou hast put my fote in the stockes: Thou lokest narrowlye vnto all my pathes, & marckest the steppes of my fete: where as I (not wythstandyng) must confu- me lyke as a foule carpon, & as a clothe that is moth eaten.

Job describeth the lyfe of a man, and prophesieth of the resurrection. Hope susteyneth the goodly, till they obtaine that they loke for.

All that is bozne of a woma, hath but a shorte tyme to lyue, & is full of diuerse miseries. He cometh vnto falleth awaye lyke a floure. He lyeth as it were a shadowe, & neuer cōtinueth in one state. Thynkest thou it now well done, to opē thyne eyes vnto such one, & to brynge me befoze the iudgement.
Who can make it cleane, that cometh of an vncleane thinge. No body. * The dayes of mā are shorte, the nobre of his monethes are knowne only vnto the.
Thou hast apoynted him his boundes, he can not go beyonde them. So from him, that he maye rest a lytle: vntill his daye come, which he loketh for, lyke as an hyzelpnge doth.

B If a tre be cut dōwne, there is some hope yet, that it wyl sproute, and shute forth þ bzaunches agayne: for though a rote be waxen olde, & deēd in þ ground, yet when the stocke getteth the sent of water, it wyl budde, and brynge forth bowes, lyke as when it was fyrst planted. But as for man, when he is deēd, perysshed & consumed awaye, what be-cometh of him? The floudes when they be dyed vnto, & the ryuers when they be emptie, are filled agayne thowowe the flowynge waters of the sea: but when man slepeth, he ryseth not agayne, * vntill the heauē perishe: he shall not wake vp nor ryse out of his slepe. O þ thou woldest kepe me, & hyde me in the hell, vntill thy wyath were styllled: & to ap-poynte me a tyme, wherin þ myghtest remembre me. Make a deed man lyue agayne. * All the dayes of this my pil-grymage am I loking, when my chaū-ginge shall come. If thou woldest but call me, I should obeye þ: only * despise not the worke of thyne owne handes.

D For thou hast nombzed all my goyns:

ges, yet be not thou to extreamie vpon my synnes. Thou hast sealed vp myne offēces, as it were in a bag: but be mercyfull vnto my wickednesse. The moun-taynes fall awaye at the last, the rockes are remoued out of their place, the waters pearse thorow the very stones, by lytle & lytle, the floudes washe awaye the grauell & earth: Euen so destroyest thou þ hope of mā in lyke maner. Thou prenailest agaynst him, so that he passeth awaye: thou chaungest his estate, & puttest him fro the. Whether his chyldren come to worshippe or no, he cā not tell: And yf they be mē of lowe degre, he knoweth not. While he lyueth, his fel-

* The vngodly desparyeth all the dayes of his lyfe, as it were a woman with chylde, and the nombre of a tyraun- tes yeres is vnkowen. A fearfull sound is euer in his eares, and when it is peace, yet feareth he destruction: he bele- ueth neuer to be deliuered out of dark- nesse, the swearde is alwaye before his eyes. When he goeth forth to get his lyuinge, he thinketh plainely, that the daye of darknesse is at hande. Sorowe and carefulnesse make him a traped, & compasse him rounde aboute, lyke as it were a kinge with his host redy to the battayll. For he hath stretched out his hāde agaynst God, and armed him self agaynst the Almyghtye. He runneth proudly vpo him, and with a styffnecke fighteth he agaynst hym: where as he couereth his face with fatnesse, and ma- keth his body well lykynge. Therfore shall his dwellyng be in desolate cities, and in houses which noman inhabiteth, but are become heapes of stones.

He shall not be rich, nether shall his substance continue, nor encrease vpon earth. He shall neuer come out of dark- nesse, the flame shall drye vp his braun- ches: with the blast of the mouth of god shall he be taken awaye. He wyll ne- ther applye hym selfe to faythfulnes nor trouth, so sore is he discaued wyth vanite.

He shall perishe, afore his tyme be worne out, and his braunche shall not be grene. He shall be pluckt of as an vntymely grape fro the vyne, and shall let his floure fall, as the olyue doth.

For the congregacion of ypocrites is vnfrutefull, and the fyre shall consume the houses of such, as are greedy to re- ceauie gyftes. * He conceaueth trauayle, he beareth myscheffe, & his body byn- geth forth disceate.

Or, hast thou yet any more to saye? I coude speake, as ye do also. But wolde God, if youre soule were in my soules steade: the should I heape vp wordes agaynst you, & make my heade at you. I should comforte you with my mouth, & release youre payne with the talkynge of my lippes. But what shall I do? For all my wordes, my sorowe wyll not cease: and though I holde my tounge, yet will it not departe fro me. And now that I am full of payne, and all that I haue destroyed (wherof my wyngles beare wytnesse) there standeth vp a dyssem- blet to make me answere wyth lyes to my face. He is angrey at me, he hateth me, & gnasheth vpon me with his teth. Myne enemy shouleth vpon me wyth his eyes.

They haue opened their mouthes wyde vpon me, and synptē me vpon the cheke despytfully, they haue eased the selues thowowe myne aduersyte. God hath geuen me ouer to the vngodly,

C and deliuered me into the handes of the wicked. I was som tyme in wealth, but sodenly he hath brought me to nought. He hath taken me by the necke, he hath rente me, and set me, as it were a mark for him to shote at. He hath compassed me rounde aboute with his dartes, he hath wounded my loynes, and not spared. My bowels hath he poured vpon the ground. He hath geue me one wound vpon another, & is fallen vpon me lyke a gyaunte. I haue sowed a sacke cloth vpon my skynne, & lye with my strength in the dust.

D My face is swollen with wepyng, and mine eyes are warē dymme. Howbeit there is no wyckednesse in my handes, & my prayer is cleane. O earth, couer not my bloud, and let my cryenge fynde no rowme. For lo, my witnesse is in heauen, and he that knoweth me, is aboue in the heyght. My frendes laugh me to scozne, but myne eye poureth out teares vnto God. Though a body myght pleate with God, as one man doth with another, yet the nombre of my yeares are come, and I must go the waye, from whence I shall not turne agayne.

The notes.

a. To open the mouthes, signifieth to threaten with most extreme and cruell punishment, and to reprove with shamefull and spytfull wordes, as in the psal. xlii. c.

b. O earth couer not my bloude, that is, as Rabbi Abraham expoundeth it: hyde not my bloude so but that it be auenged, let not the auengement therof be vnknewen, but open vnto all mens eyes: as was the auengement of Dathan and Abiram, whom the earth swallowed. Num. xvi. c. Ye maye also expounde it thus. Hyde not my bloude but let it testifie and wytnes myne innocencie, as dyd the bloud of Abel, of whom we reade that his bloude cryed from the earth. Gene. iiii. b.

The. xliii. Chapter.

Job sayth that he consumeth awaye, and yet doth patiently abyde it.

My breth faileth, my dayes are shorten. I am harde at deathes doze. I haue disceaued no mā yet must myne eye continue in heynesse. O deliuer me and set me by the: who shall the be able to thrust my handes together? Thou hast withholden their hertes from vnderstandynge, therefore shall they not be set by on hys. He prompseth his frendes parte of his good, but his owne childe spende it. He hath made me as it were a byworde of the comō people. I am his gestynge stocke amonge the. My countenance is heuy for very anger, & the membres of my body are become lyke a shadow. Vertuous men therefore shall well consydre this, & the innocent shall take parte agaynst the poccite.

The ryghteous wyl kepe his waye, and he that hath cleane handes, wyl euer be stronger and stronger. As for you, turne you, and get you hence, for I can not se one wyse man among you. My dayes are past, my thoughtes are banysht awaye, whiche haue vexed myne herte, chaunginge the nyght in to daye, and the lyght into darckenes. Though I tary neuer so much, yet the graue is my house, and I must make my bed in the darke. I call corruption my father, and the wormes call I my motther & my syster. What helpeth them my longe tarpenge? Or, who wyl fulfill the thinge, that I loke for? All that I haue, shall go downe in to the pyt, & lye with me in the dust.

The. xliii. Chapter.

Baldad reherceth the paynes of the vnchastfull and wycked.

When answered Baldad the Subite, and sayde: When wyl ye make an ende of youte wordes? Marke well, and consydre, we wyl speake also. Wherefore are we counted as bestes, & reputed so byle in youte syght? Why destroyest thou thy selfe with anger? Shall the earth be forsaken, or the stones remoued oute of their place because of the? Shall not the lyght of the vngodly be put oute? yea the flame of his fyre shall not burne. The lyght shalbe darke in his dwellinge, and his candle shalbe put out with him. His presumptuous goinges shall be kepte in, & his owne coucell shal cast him downe. For his fete shalbe taken in the nette, and he shall walke in the snare. His fote shalbe holdē in the gilder, and the thurstie shal catch him. The snare is layed for him in the grounde, and a pitfall in the waye.

Then Job and such as thou.

Fearfulnesse shall make him afrayed on euery syde, that he shall not knowe, where to get out. Hunger shall be his sustaunce, and my fortune shall hang vpon him. He shall eat the strength of his skynne, <sup>a</sup> the fyrst borne of death shall eat his membres. All his comforte and hope shall be rote out of his dwelling, very fearfulnesse shall bringe him to the kyng. <sup>b</sup> Other men shall dwell in his house (whiche now is none of his) and bymstone shall be scatered vpon his habitation. His robes shall be dyed vpon beneth, and aboue shall his haruest be cut downe. His remembraunce shall perishe from the earth, and his name shall not be prayesed in the stretes: he shall be dryuen fro the lyght into darcknesse, & be cast cleane out of the world. He shall nether haue chyldren nor kynfolkes amonge his people: no, nor any posterite in his countre: young and olde shall be astonysed at his death. Suche are now the dwellinges of the wycked, and this the place of him that knoweth not God.

The. xix. Chapter.

Job receyvethe his myscries and greuous paynes. He propheseth of the generall resurrection.

Job answered, and said: howe longe will ye bere my mynde, and trouble me wyth wordes? Lo, tē tymes haue ye reproued me: are ye not ashamed, for to laugh me so to scoorne? yf I go wrōge, I go wrōge to my self. But yf ye wyll enhaunce your selues agaynst me, and accuse me to be a wicked personne, because of the shame that is come vpon me: knowe this then, that it is GOD, which hath hādled me so violently, and hath cōpassed me aboute wth his scourges. Behold, though I crye, yet violence is done vnto me, I can not be herde: * Though I complayne, there is none to geue sentence with me. He hath hedged vpon my path, I can not get awaye, he hath set darcknesse in my gate. * He hath spoyled me of myne honoure, and taken the <sup>a</sup> crowne awaye fro my head. He hath destroyed me on euery side, and I am vndone: My hope hath he taken awaye fro me, as it were a tree plucked vpon by the rote. His wrath is kyndled agaynst me, he taketh me, as though I were his enemy.

His men of warre came together, whiche made their waye ouer me, and beseged my dwellinge rounde aboute.

* He hath put my brethren farre awaye Plat. 18.2 fro me, and suche as were of myne acquaintance, are become straungers vnto me. Myne owne kynfolkes haue forsaken me, and my frendes haue put me out of remembraunce. The seruantes and maydes of myne owne house, take me for a straunger, and I am become as an aleaunt in their syght.

When I call vpon my seruant, he geueth me no answer: no though I praye him with my mouth. Myne owne wyfe maye not abyde my breath, I am fayne to speake fayne vnto the chyldren of myne owne body. Yea, the very deserte fooles despyse me, and whē I am gone from them, they speake euell vpon me. All such as were my most familiers, abhorre me: and they whome I loued best, are turned agaynst me. My bone hangeth to my skynne, and my fleshe is awaye, only there is left me the skynne aboute my teth. Haue ppytie vpon me, haue ppytie vpon me (O ye my frendes) for the hande of the LORD hath touched me. Why do ye persecute me <sup>b</sup> as GOD doeth and are not satisfied of my fleshe?

That my wordes were written, D that they were put in a boke: wold god they were grauen wyth an yron penne in leade, or in stone to continue. For I am sure, that my redeemer lyueth, and that I shall ryse out of the earth in the latter daye: yf I shall be clothed agayne with this skynne, & se God in my fleshe. Yea, I my selfe shall beholde hym, not wyth other but wyth these same eyes. My reynes are consumed within me, when ye saye: why do not we persecute him? we haue founde an occasiō agaynst hym. But beware of the swearde, for the swearde wyll be auenged of wyckednesse, and be sure, that there is a iudgement.

The notes.

a. Abi Abraham understandeth by the crowne, the dignitie that cometh to the riche by the meares of their riches: for all men haue the riche in honoure: although some vnderstande thereby his chyldren, as in the 19. ouer. The crowne of olde men are their chyldrens chyldren. Other some, vnderstande the dignitie that came vnto hym of his wysdome and conynge. So Jobs meaning is, that of a worshipfull and riche man, he is become poore and despised.

b. The Hebrewes reade as they do, meanynge the euell which are not satisfied wth his fleshe: suche wolde he not that his frendes shoulde counterfer.

c. Are not satisfied of my fleshe. To eate and be satisfied of a manes fleshe, is a borrowed speache taken both in the good & euell parte. In the good parte it signifieth to loue to iudge frendlye, and then at the length to fall to praylinge. In the euell parte, it is cruelly and beastly to missepe, and (as it were) to teare with spitefull and haineouse wordes.

The xx. Chapter.

Sophar saith, that the vnfaithfull, the couetouse, and the wicked shall haue a shorte ende.

When answered Sophar the Naamathite, & sayd: for y<sup>e</sup> same cause do my thoughtes compell me to answer. And why my mynde is troubled here and there. I haue sufficiently herde thy checkinge & reprove, therefore am I purposed to make answer after myne vnderstanding. Knowest thou not this, namely: that from the begynnyng (euer sence the creacion of man vpon earth) the prayse of the vngodly hath bene shorte, and that the toyce of ypocrites continued but the cwynecklynge of an eye. Though he be magnified vp to the heauen, so that his heade reacheth vnto y<sup>e</sup> cloudes: yet he perissheth at the last lyke dounge: In somuch that they whiche haue sene hym, saye: Where is he? He vanissheth as a dreame, so that he can no more be founde, and passeth awaye as a visio in the nyght. So that the eye which sawe him before, getteth now no syght of hym, and his place knoweth him no more. His chyldren go a beggynge, their handes bringe them to sorow and heupnesse.

from his youth his bones are full of vyce, which shal lye downe with him in the earth. Whē wickednesse is swete in his mouth, he hydeth it vnder his tonge. That he fauoureth, that wyl he not forlake, but kepeth it close in his throte. The meate that he eateth, shalbe turned to the poyson of serpentes, with in his body. The riches that he deuouretch, shal he perbrake agayne, for GOD shall drawe them out of his belly: he shall sucke the serpent's head, and the adders tonge shall nape hym: so that he shall nomore se the ryuers and brokes of hony and butter: But labour shall he, and yet haue nothyng to eate. Greate trauaile shall he make for riches, but he shall not enioye them. And why he hath opprest the poore, and not helped them: houses hath he spoyled, and not buyled them. His belly coude neuer be filled, therefore shal he perissh in his coueteousnesse. He deuoured so greedely, that he lefte nothyng behinde, therefore his goodes shall not prospere. Though he had plenteousnesse of euery thyng, yet was he poore, and therefore he is but a wretch on euer y<sup>e</sup> lyde.

For though the wicked haue neuer somuch to fill his belly, yet GOD shall sende his wrath vpon hym, and cause his battayll to raygne ouer him: so that yf he fle the yron weapens, he shall be shotte with the stele bowe. The arowe shall be taken forth, and go out at his backe, and a glisterynge sworde thorowe the gall of him, feare shall come vpon him. There shall no darknes be able to hyde hym. An vnkindled fyre shall consume hym, and loke what remaineth in his house, it shall be destroyed. The heauen shall declare his wickednesse, and the earth shall take parte agaynst hym. The substance that he hath in his house, shalbe taken awaye and perished, in the daye of the Lordes wrath. * This is the porcyon that the wicked shall haue of God, and the heritage that he maye loke for of the Lorde.

The notes.

a. He shall sucke the serpent's head, that is, he shalbe subject to all cursednesse and suffer all manner sorowes. It is suche a manner of speache as is before in the xv. ch. of dyuyllynge wycednesse.

b. That is, he can not hyde him from percelles.

The. xxiii. Chapter.

Job affirmeth that he toke knoweth and feareth the power and sentence of the iudge: & sayth that he hath walked in his rightnesse.

Ob answered, & sayde: My sayinge is yet this daye in bitternes, & my hāde hely amonge my gromynges. O that I myght se hi & fynde hym: O that I myght come before his seate, to pleate my cause before hym, & to fylle my mouth wth argumētes: That I might know, what answer he wolde geue me: and that I might vnderstāde, what he wolde saye vnto me. Wyl he pleate agāst me with his greate power and strength, or wyl he leane him selfe vtterly vpon me: Oh no, let him not do so with me. But let hym geue me lyke power to go to the lawe, then am I sure to wyne my matter. For though I go before, I fynde hym not: If I come behynde, I can get no knowledge of him: Yf I go on the lefte syde, to pōdye his worckes, I can not attayne vnto them.
Agayne, yf I go on the right syde, he hydeth him selfe, that I can not se him.
But as for my waye, he knoweth it: & he tryeth me as the golde in the fyre.

Dep. iii.

Nevertheless my fete kepe his path, & his hye strete haue I holden, & not gone oute of it. I haue not forsaken the com-maūdemēt of his lippes, but loke what passe what he wyl. He rewardeth me in mo doth he, as he maye by his power.

This is the cause, that I thyncke at his presence, so that when I consydre him, I am afrayed of hi. For in somuch as he is God, he maketh my herte softer: and seynge that he is Almightye, he putteth me in feare. Thus can not I get out of darcknesse, the cloude hath so co-owne: that *dyeue awaye the asse of the fatherlesse: that take þ wyddowes ore for a pledge: that thrust the pooze oute of the waye, & oppresse the symple of the worlde together. Beholde, the wylde asses in the deserte goo by times, as their manner is, to spoyle: Yea, the very wyl- dernesse minnstreth foode for their chil- dren. They reape the corne felde that is not their owne: & gather the grapes out of his vineyarde, whom they haue oppressed by violence. They are the cause that so many me are naked and bare, haupnge no clothes to couer them, and to kepe them from colde: So that when the showets in the mountaynes haue rayned vpon them, and they be all wet, they haue none other succour, but to kepe them amonge the rockes.

They spoyle the suckinge fatherles chyldren, and put the pooze in prison: In somuch that they let them go naked without clothinge, and yet the huli grie beate the sheeues. The pooze are fayne to labour in their oyle milles: yea, and to treade in their wyne presses, and yet to suffre thyrst. The whole cytie cryeth vnto the Lord with syghyng, *the soules of the mayne make their cōplaynte: But God destroyeth them not for all this, where as they (not withstandyng) are rebellious & disobedient enemyes: which seke not his lyght and waye, nor turne agayne in to his path. * Tymely in the moornyng do they aryse, to mur- thur the symple and pooze, and in the nyght they go a stealynge.

The eye of the vngodly is lyke the aduouterer, that wayteth for the darck- nesse, & sayeth thus in him selfe: Cusch, there shall no man se me, and so he dys- gyseth his face. In the nyght ceason they search the houses, and hyde them selues in the daye tyme, but wyl not knowe the lyght. For as soone as the daye breaketh, the shadowe of death cō- meth vpon them, and they go in horri- ble darcknesse. The vngodly is very swyfte: & that his porcion also vpon erth were swyfter then the runnyng water, whiche suffreth not the shipman to beholde the fayre and pleasaunt by- neyardes. & that they (for the wicked- nesse whiche they haue done) were dra- wen to the hell, soner then snowe mel-teth at the heate. & that all compassion vpon them were forgotten: that their daynties were wormes, that they were cleane put out of the remembraunce, & vt- terly hewen downe lyke an vfrutefull tre. For they mayntayne the baren, and make them that they can not beare, and vnto wyddowes they do no good. They plucke downe the myghtye wyth their power, and when they them selues are gotten vp, they are neuer without fea- re, as longe as they lyue. And though they myght be safe, yet they wyl not re- ceauie it, for their eyes loke vpon their owne wayes. They are exalted for a lyt- le, but shortly are they gone, brought to extreme pouerte, and taken out of the waye: yea, and vtterly plucke of, as the eares of corne. Is it not so? Who wyl the reprove me as a lyar, and saye that my wordes are nothyng worthe?

The .xxv. Chapter.

Baldad proueth that no mā is cleane: and withoute synne before God.

Ben answered Baldad the Suhite, and sayde: Power & feare is wyth him aboue, that maketh peace, lyttynge in hys highnesse, whose men of warre are innuenerable, & whose lyght aryseth ouer all. But how maye a man compared vnto God, * be iustified? Or, how can he be cleane, that is bozne of a womā? Behold, the Moone shyneth no- thing in cōparison to him, & the starres are vncleane in his sight. Howe muche more thē mā, þ is but corruption: & the sonne of man, which is but a worme.

The .xxvi. Chapter.

Job sheweth that man can not helpe God, and pro- ueth it by his miracles.

Job answered, and sayd: & how helpest thou þ weaker? what comforte geuest thou vnto him þ hath no strēgth? Where is the counsell that thou shouldest geue him, which hath no wysdome? ## The. xxvii. Chapter.

The constancie and perfectnes of Job, and the part of the vnfaythfull with God.

AD Job proceeded and went forth in his communicacion, sayinge: As truly as God ly- ueth (which hath taken away my power fro me) and the Almighty, that hath bereft my mynde: My lippes shall talke of no vanite, and my tonge shall speake no dysceate, whyle my brethe is in me, and as long as the wynde (that God hath geuen me) is in my nostrils.

God for bydde, that I should graunt your cause to be ryght. As for me, vntyll myne ende come wyl I neuer goo fro myne innocencye. My ryghtwise dealinge kepe I faste, which I wyl not forsake: my hert shall not reproue me of my daies. <sup>a</sup> Therefore myne enemy shall be founde as the vngodlye, and he that taketh parte agaynst me, as the vnygh- tuous. What hope hath the yppo- crite, though he haue greates good, and though God geue him ryches after hys herthes desyre? Doth God heare him the soner, when he crieth vnto him in his necessite? Hath he suche pleasure and delyte in the Almighty, that he darre alwaye call vpon God? I wyl teache you in the name of God, and the thyng that I haue of the Almighty, wyl I not kepe from you. Beholde, ye stande in your owne conceate, as though ye knewe all thynges. Wherefoze then do ye go aboute with such vayne wordes, sayinge: *This is the porcion that the wycked shall haue of God, and the he- ritage that Tyrantes shall receaue of the Almighty. If he get many chyl- dren, they shall perishe with the sword, and his posterite shall haue scarcenesse of breade. Loke whome he leaueth be- hynde hym, they shall dye and be buried, and no manne shall haue pite of hys wyddowes. Though he haue as muche money as the duste of the erth, and ray- ment as readye as y claye, he may well prepare it: but the godly shall put it vpon hym, and the innocent shall deale out the moneye. His house shall endure as the mothe, and as a boothe that the watch man maketh. *When the ryche man dyeth, he carieth nothyng with him: he is gone in the twyncklynge of an eye. Destruction taketh holde vpon hym as a water floude, and the tempest stealeth him awaye in the nyght season. A beheimente East wynde carryeth him hence, and departeth: a storme plucketh him oute of his place. It russeth in vpon hym, and spareth hym not, he may not escape from the power therof. Then clappe men theyr handes at him, yea, and seaste of him, when they loke vpon his place.

SHere are places where syluer is molten, and where gold is tryed: <sup>a</sup> *where yron is dygged oute of the grounde, and stones resolued to me- tall. The darcknes shall once come to an ende, he can seke out the grounde of all thynges thynges: the stones and the darcke, and the horrible shadowe, with the ryuer of water parteth he a sunder the straunge people, that knoweth no good neyghbourhead: suche as are rude, vnnaturall, and boysterous. He bringeth foode oute of the earth, and that whiche is vnder, consumeth he wyth fyre. There is founde a place, whose stones are cleane

There is a wape also that the byrdes knowe not, that no bulterg eye hath eene: wherein the proude and hye mynded walke not, and where no lyon cometh. There putteth he his hande vpon the stony rockes, and ouerthroweth the mountaines. Riuer flow oute of the rockes: and loke what is pleasaunt, hys eye seyth it. Out of dropes bringeth he great floudes together, and the thinge that is hyd bringeth he to lyghte. How cometh a manne then

C by wysedome: * Where is the place that men fynde vnderstandinge? Verely no man can tell howe worthy a thyng she is, neyther is she founde in the lande of the lyuinge. The depe sayeth: she is not in me. The sea sayeth: she is not w me. She can not be gotten for the most fine golde, neyther maye the pryce of her be boughte with any moneye. No wedges of gold of Ophir, no precious Onix stones, no Saphirs may be compared vnto her. No, neyther golde nor Christall, nether swete odours nor golden plate. There is nothyng so worthy, or so excellent, as once to bee named vnto her: for perfecte wysdome goeth far beyond them all. The Topas that cometh oute of Inde, maye in no wise be lykened vnto her: yea, no manner of apparell howe pleasaunt and fayre soeuer it be.

D From whence then cometh wysedome: and where is the place of vnderstandinge? She is hyd from the eyes of all men lyuinge: yea, and frome the foules of the ayre. Destruction & death saye: we haue hearde tel of her with our eares. But God seyth her wape, and knoweth her place. For he beholdeth the endes of the worlde, and loketh vpon all that is vnder heauen. When he weped the wyndes, and measured the waters: when he set the raine in ordre, and gaue

Job complayneth of the prosperitie of the tyme past, subtylle prouinge hys frendes of insurpe, because they sayde that Job suffered accordynge to hys deservynge.

Sob proceeded and went forth in hys communicacion, sayinge: O that I wer as I was in the monethes by paste, and in the dayes when God preserued me: when his lyght shyned vpon my heade: when I went after the same lyghte, and shynynge euen thorough the darcknesse. As it stode with me, when I was welthy and had ynoughe: when God prospered my house: when the Almighty was yet with me: when my housholde folkes stode aboute me: when my wayes ranne ouer with butter, and when the stony rockes gaue me ryuers of oyle: when I wente thorough the cytie vnto the gate, and when they set me a chayre in the strete: when the younge men (as soone as they sawe me, hyd them selues, and when the aged arose, and stode vp vnto me: when the Princes lefte of theyr talking, and layed theyr hande to theyr mouthe: when the myghty kepte still theyr voyce, and when theyr tonges cleued to the rose of theyr mouthes. Whē al they that heard me, called me happye: and when al they that sawe me, wysshed me good. For I deliuered the poore when he cryed, and the fatherlesse I wanted helpe. He that shoulde haue bene lost, gaue me a good worde, and the wyddowes herte praised me. And why? I put vpon me a ryghteousnes, whiche couered me as a garmente, and equyte was my crowne. I was an eye vnto the blynde, and a fote to the lame, I was a father vnto the poore: and when I knew not their cause I sought it oute diligently. I brake the chawes of the vnrightheous, & I plucked the spoyle out of their teth.

Vnto me men gaue eate, me they regatded, and with silence they taried for my counsell. If I had spoken, they would haue it none other wayes, my wordes were so well taken amonge them. They waited for me, as the earth doth for the rayne: & gaped vpon me, as the ground dothe to receaue the latter shower. When I laughed, they knewe well it was not earnest: and thys testymonye of my countenance pleased them nothing at al. When I agreed vnto theyr way, I was the chiefe, and sat as a king amonge hys seruantes: Or as one that comforteth suche as bee in heuyresse.

Now they that are myne inferiours and younger then I, haue me in derision: yea, euen they, whose fathers I woulde haue thoughte to haue set with the dogges of my cattell. The power and strengthe of theyr handes myghte do me no good, & as for theyr age, it is spent and past awaye with out any profit. For very misery and hunger, they wente aboute in the wyldernesse lyke wretches and beggers, plucking vp herbes from among the bushes, and the Junipers rote was theyr meate. And when they were dyscuen forthe, men cryed after them, as it had bene after a thefe.

When they dwellynge was besyde foule brokes: yea, in the caues and denues of the earthe. Vpon the drye heathe wente they aboute crynge, and in the brome hylles they gathered them together. They were the chyldren of fooles and byllaynes, whiche are dead away from the world. * Now am I theyr song, and am become theyr feastyng stocke: they abhorre me, they fle farre from me, and stayne my face with spetle. For y<sup>e</sup> Lorde hathe opened his quyet, he hathe hye me, and put a bydle in my mouth. Vpon my right hand they rose together as gaynst me, they haue hurte my fete, made a waye to destroye me, and my pathe haue they clene marred. It was so easye for them to do me harme, that they needed no man to helpe them. They fel vpon me, as it had bene the breaking in of waters, and came in by heapes to destroye me. Fearfulnesse is turned as gaynst me.

Myne honoure banyshe awaye more swyftly then wynde, and my prosperite departeth hence lyke as it were a cloude. Therefore is my mynde powdered full of heuyresse, and the dayes of my trouble haue taken holde vpon me. My bones are pearced thowowe in the nyghte season, and my synewes take no reste. With all theyr power haue they chaunged my garment, and gyrded me therewith, as it were with a coate. I am euen as it were claye, and am become lyke ashes and duste. When I cry vnto the, thou doest not heare me: and though I stand before the, yet thou regardest me not. Thou art become mine enemye, and with thy violent hand thou takest part agaynst me. In tymes past thou dyddest set me vp on hye, as it were aboue the wynde, but nowe haste thou geuen me a very soze fall. Sure I am, that thou wylt delyuer me vnto deathe: where as a lodginge is prepared for all men lyuinge. Nowe vse not men to do violence vnto them, that are destroyed all ready: but where hurte is done, there vse they to helpe. Wyldest thou wepe in the tyme of trouble? Had not my soule compassion vpon the pooer? Yet neuerthelesse, where as I looked for good, euell happened vnto me: & where as I wayted for lyghte, there came darcknesse. My bowels seeth with me, and take no reste, for the dayes of my trouble are come vpon me. Meekely and lowlye came I in: yea, and withoute any displeasure: I stode vp in the congregation, and communed with them. But nowe, I am a companyon of dragons, and a felowe of Estriches. My

I made a couenaunte with myne eyes. * that I woulde not loke vpon a damsel. for how great a porcion shal I haue of God frome aboue: and what enheritaunce from the almyghty on hys. As for the vngodly and he that ioyneth him selfe to the compaignie of wycked doers, shall not destruction & myserie come vpon hym: * Dothe not he se my wayes, and tel al my goynges. If I haue cleued vnto vauyte, or if my fete haue runne to dysceane: let me bee weyed in an euen balaunce, that God maye se my innocencye. * If so be that I haue withdrawen my fote out of the ryghte waye, yf my herte hath folowed myne eye syghte, yf I haue stayned or defyled my handes: then is it reason that I Lowe, and another eate: yea, that my generacion and posterite bee cleane rote oute. * If my herte hath lusted after my neighbours wif, or if I haue layed wayte at his doze. then let my wyfe be another mannes harlot, and let other lie with her. * For this is a wickednesse and sinne, that is worthy to be punysshed: yea, a tye that vtterly shoulde consume, and rote out al my substance.

Thus haue I quietly spent my lyfe, and not gone out at the doze. that I had one whiche woulde heare me. Lo, this is my cause. Let the almyghty geue me answer: and let hym that is my contrary partye sew me with a libel. Then shal I take it vpon my shoulder, and as a garlande aboute my heade. The. xxii. Chapter.

Eliu after the other had synghed theyr communica-cyon, reprooueth them of folyshnes. Age maketh not a man wyse, but the spirite of God.

These thre men would stryue no more w Job, because he helde hi selfe a ryghteous man. But Eliu the sonne of Barachell the Bussite of the kyned of Ram, was verye soze displeased at Job, that he called him selfe iuste before God. And with Jobs thre frendes he was angry also, because they hadde founde no reasonable answer to ouercome hym. Nowe taried Eliu tyll they had ended theyr communicacion with Job, for why, they were elder then he.

So when Eliu the sonne of Barachell the Bussite sawe, that these thre menne were not able to make Job answer, he was myscontente: so that he gaue answer to hym selfe, and sayd: * Considring, that I am young, and ye be men of age, I was astayde, and durste not shewe forthe my mynde, for I thoughte thus within my selfe: It becometh olde men to speake, * & the aged to teach wysdom.

Euerie man (no doute) hathe a mynde, * but it is the inspiracion of the almyghty that geueth vnderstandinge. All men are not wyse, neyther doth euerye aged man vnderstande the thyng that is lawfull. Therfore wyll I speake also (in so farre as I maye bee hearde) and wyll shewe you myne oppnyon. For when I had wayted tyl ye made an ende of your talkinge, and hearde your wysedome, what argumentes ye made in your communicacyon: yea, when I had diligently pondred what ye sayde, I founde not one of you that made anye good argumente agaynste Job, or that directlye coulde make answer vnto his wordes: lest ye shoulde praysse your selues, to haue founde oute wysdome: because it is God that hathe cast hym out, and no man. Neuerthelesse, seynge he hath not spoken vnto me, therfore wyl not I answer him as ye haue done (for they were so abashed, that they coulde not make answer, nor speake oile worde) but in so muche as ye wyll not speake, standynge styll lyke dome men, and makinge no answer: I haue a good hope for my parte to shape him an answer, and to shewe him my meaninge. For I am full of wordes, and the spirite that is within me, compelleth me.

Beholde, I am as the newe wyne, whiche hath no vente, and bursteth the newe vessels in sunder. Therfore wyll I speake, that I maye haue a vente: I wyll open my lyppes, and make answer. I wyll regarde no maner of personne, no manne wyll I spare. For yf I woulde go aboute to please menne, I knowe not howe sone my maker woulde take me awaye.

For when God dothe once commaunde a thyng there shoulde no manne be curyous, to search whether it be ryght. * In dreames and visions of the night season (when sloumyng commeth vpon men, that they fall a slepe in theyr beddes) he rowndeth them in the eares, he infourmeth them, and sheweth them playnly, that it is he, whiche withdraueth man from euyl, depyuereth hym frome pryde, kepeth hys soule from destruccion, and his lyfe fro the swearde. He chasteneth hym wyth sycknesse, & byngeth him to his bedde: he layeth sore punishmente vpon hys bones, so that hys lyfe may away with no breade, and hys soule abhorreth to eate anye dayntye meate: In so muche that his body is cleane consumed away, and hys bones appeare no more. Hys soule draweth on to distruccion, and his lyfe to death. Nowe yf there be a messenger (one amonge a thousande) sente for to speake vnto man, & to shew him the ryght waye: then the Lorde is mercyfull vnto him, and sayeth: He shalbee delyuered, that he fall not downe to destruccion, for I am sufficiently reconcyled. Than hys fleshe (whiche hath bene in mysery and trouble) shalbe as it was in his youth. but rightuous. Who ruleth the earth in his steade? Or, whome hath he set to gouerne the whole worlde? To whome hath he geuen his herte, for to draw his spirite and brythe vnto hym? All fleshe shall come together vnto naughte, and all men shall turne agayne vnto earth. If thou now haue vnderstanding, heare what I saye, and herken to the voyce of my wordes.

May he be made whole, that loueth no ryghte? If thou were a verie innocent man, shouldest thou then bee punished? For he is euen the same, that knoweth the rebellyous kynges, and sayeth to Princes: Ungodly menne are pe. * He hath no respecte vnto the personnes of the lordly, and regardeth not the ryche more the y poore. For they be all the worckes of hys handes. In the twinkling of an eye shall they be slaine: and at mydnyght, when the people and the tyrauntes rage, then shall they perish, and be taken away without handes. And why: hys eyes loke vpon the wayes of man, and he seeth all hys goynges. Ther is no darcknes nor thicke shadowe, that can hyde the wycked doers from him. For no man shall bee suffered to go into iudgemente with God.

Many one, yea innumerable dothe he punyssh, and setteth other in theyr steads. For he knoweth theyr euil and darcke worckes, therefore shall they bee destroyed. They that were in steade of Shears, dealt lyke vngodly men. Therefore turned they backe trayterously and vnfaythfully from hym, and wold not receaue hys wayes. In so muche that they haue caused the voyce of the poore to come vnto hym, and now he heareth the complaynte of suche as are in necessite. If he deliuer and graunte pardon, who wyll iudge or condemne? But if he hyde away his countenance, who wyll turne it aboute agayne, whether it be to the people or to anye man? For the wyckednesse and synne of the people, he maketh an ypoctyte to reigne ouer them. For so much then as I haue begonne to talke of God, I wyll not hyndre the. If I haue gone a myste, enfourme me: If I haue done wronge, I wyll leaue of. Wylte thou not geue a reasonable answer? Acce thou a frayd of anye thyng, seynge thou beganest fyrste to speake, and not I? For els the menne of vnderstanding and wisdoome, that haue herde me, myght saye: What canste thou speake? As for Job he hath neyther spoken to the purpose nor wiselye. O father, let Job be well tryed, because he hath turned hym selfe to the wycked: yea aboue hys synnes he hath blasphemed, which offence he hath done euen before vs, in y he stryuethe against God with his wordes.

The. xxxv. Chapter.

Whether doth godlynesse pioser, or vngodlynesse hurt to God but to man.

Lest thou spake moreouer, & sayde: Thynkest thou it ryghte that thou sayest: I am ryghtuous before God? Seinge thou sayest so, howe doest thou knowe it? What thinge hast thou more excellent the I, that am a sinner? Therefore wyl I geue answer vnto the and thy frendes: loke vnto the heauen, and beholde it: consydre the cloudes, howe they are hygher then thou. If thou synnest, what doest thou vnto hym? If thine offences bee manye, howe gettest thou his fauour? If thou be rightuous what geuest thou him? Or what receauest he of thy handes? Of suche an vngodly personne as thou, and of the son of man that is ryghtuous as thou pretendest to be: there is a greate crye and complaynte made by them that are oppressed with violence, yea euery manne complayneth vpon the cruell arme of tyrauntes. For suche one neuer sayeth: Where is God that made me: and that shyneth vpon vs, that we myght praise him in the nyghte? Whiche geueth vs more vnderstandinge then he dothe the beastes of the earthe, and teacheth vs more then the foules of heauen.

If anye suche complayne no manne geueth answer, and that because of the wyckednesse of proude tyrauntes. But yf a man call vpon God, dothe not he heare hym? Dothe not the almighty accepte his cry? When thou speakest then, should not he pardone the, yf thou open thy selfe before him, and put thy truste in him: then bleseth he no violence in his wrathe, nether hath he pleasure in curpous & depe inquisicions. ## The xxxvi. Chapter.

In proceeded forth in hys talking & sayd: holde the styl a litle, & I shal shew the, what I haue yet to speake on Gods behalfe. I wyll open vnto thee yet more of myne vnderstandynge, & proue my maker righteous. True are my wordes, & no lye: & y knowledg wher w all I argue against the, is perfect. Behold, god casteth not awaye y myght, for he him selfe is myghty i power & wisdom.

As for the vngodlye, he preserueth them not, but helpeth y poore to theyr righte. * He turneth not his eyes away from the righteous, * he setteth vp kyn- ges in theyr trone, and confirmeth the, so that they alwaye syt therein. But yf they be layed in prison and cheynes, or bounde with the bondes of pouertye: then sheweth he them their workes and dedes and the synes wherwith they haue vled cruell vyolence.

* He with punishing and nuryng of them, rowndeth them in the eares, warneth them to leaue of fro their wickednesse, and to amende. * If they now wyll take hede and bee obediente, they shall were oute theyr dayes in prosperite, and theyr yeares in pleasure and toye. But if they wyll not obeie, they shall go thorow the swearde, and perishe or euer they bee aware. As for suche as be sayned, dissemblers and ypocrites, they heape vp wrath for them selues: for they call not vpon him, though they be hys prisoners. Thus theyr soule perissheth in folysnesse, and theyr lyfe with the condemned. The poore deliuereth he out of hys straytenesse, and comforteth such as he in necessite and trouble. Euen so shall he kepe thee (yf thou wylte be contente) from the bottomlesse pytte that is benethe: and yf thou wylte holde the quyet, he shall fyll thy table with plenteousnesse.

pacified with malice gyftes. Hath god ordeyned then, that the glorious lyfe of the, and all such myghty men should not be put downe? Prolonge not thou the tyme, tyl there come a night for the, to set other people in thy steade. But be ware that thou turne not asyde to wickednesse and synne, which hitherto thou haste chosen more then mekenesse. Beholde, God is of a myghty hye power: where is there suche a gyde and lawe geuer as he? Who wyll reproue hym of his waye? who wyll say vnto hym: thou haste done wronge?

¶ Consydre how great and excellent hys workes be, whome all men loue & prayse: yea wondre at him, and yet they se hym but a farre of. Beholde, so greates is God, that he passeth our knowledg, nether are we able to come to the experience of hys yeares. * He turneth the water to smalle droppes, he dryueth his cloudes together for to rayne, so that they poute downe and drop vpon men. He can spede out the cloudes (a coueryng of his tabernacle) and cause hys lyghte to shyne vpon them, and to couer the botome of the sea. By these thynges governeth he his people, and geueth them aboundaunce of meat. In the turyng of a hande he hydeth the lyghte, and at hys commaundemente it cometh agayne. The risinge vp thereof sheweth he to hys frendes and to the cattell.

The notes.

a. With punishinge and nuryng to rounde them in the eares, is, to bryng them to the knowledg of their synnes, and to cause them to be persuaded in them selues, that they be punysshed for them.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

¶ Elia proueth that the wysdome of God is vndercheable.

A this, my hert is astounded, and moued oute of his place. Heare then y sounde of his voice, and the noise that goeth out of his mouth. He governeth euery thyng vnder the heauen, and his lyghte reacheth vnto the ende of the worlde. A roaringe voyce foloweth him: for his glorious maiestye geueth suche a thondre clap, that (though a manne heare it) yet maye he not perceauē it afterwarde. It geneth an horrible sounde, when God sendeth oute his voyce: greates thiges doth he, which we can not cōprehende. * Whē he commaundeth the snowe, it falleth vpon the erth: As soone as he geueth the rayne a charge, immediatly the showers haue their strength, and fall downe, he sendeth feare vpon euery man, that they might knowe their owne worckes. The beastes crepe into their dens, and take their rest. Out of the south cometh the tempest, and colde out of the north.

At the <sup>a</sup> bryth of God, the frost cometh, and the waters are shed abrode. The cloudes do their labour in geuing moystnesse, the cloudes poure downe their rayne. He dystributeth also on euery syde, accordig as it pleaseth him to deale out his worckes, & they maye do, whatsoeuer he commaundeth them thorow the whole worlde: whether it be to punyssh any land, or to doo good vnto them, that seke hym.

C Herken vnto this (O Job) stande still, and consydre the wondrous worckes of God. Art thou of counsell wyth God, when he doth these thinges? Whē he causeth y<sup>e</sup> lyght to come forth of his cloudes? Art thou of his counsell whē he spredeth out the cloudes? Hast thou the perfecte knowledge of his wōders? and howe thy clothes are warme, when the lande is styll thorow the South wynde? Hast thou helped hī to spreade out the heauen, which is to lōke vpon, as it were cast of cleare metall? Teache vs what we shall saye vnto him, for we are vnnmete because of darcknes. Shal it be tolde him what I saye? Should a man speake, or should he kepe it backe? For euery man seyth not the light, that he kepeth cleare in the cloudes, whiche he clenseth whan he maketh the wynde to blowe. Golde is brought out of the North, but the prayse and honoure of Gods feare cometh from God him selfe. It is not we that can fynde out the almyghtye: for in power, equite, & tryghtheousnesse, he is h̄yet thā can be exprefsed. Seynge then that euery body feareth him, why shoulde not all wyse men also stande in feare of him.

The notes.

a. The bryth of God here signifieth a strange and vehement wynde, as is the north wynde.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

The wondrous and maruelles that the Lord hath done from the begynnyng.

He spake the Lord vnto Job out of y<sup>e</sup> storme, and sayde: what is he that hideth his mynde wth folyshe wordes? * Gyde by thy loynes lyke a man, for Job. xl.

I will question the, se thou geue me a directe answer. Where wast thou, whē I layde the foundations of the earth? Tell planely yf y<sup>e</sup> hast vnderstandinge. Who hath measured it, knowest thou? Or, who hath spreade the lyne vpon it? Where vpon stande the pylers of it? Or, who layed y<sup>e</sup> corner stone? Where wast thou, when the morning starres prayled me together, and all the chyldren of God reioysed triumphatly? * Who shut the sea with doores, when it brake forth as a chylde out of his mothers wombe? Whē I made the cloudes to be a couertyng for it, & swadled it with y<sup>e</sup> darcher when I gaue it my commaundement, makinge doores & barres for it, sayinge: Hither to shalt thou come, but no further, and here shalt thou laye downe thy proud and hye waues. Hast thou geuen the mornynge his charge (as soone as thou wast borne) and shewed the daye spring his place, y<sup>e</sup> it might take holde of the corners of the earth, and that the vngodly might be shakē out? Their tokens and weapens hast thou turned lyke claye, & set the vpon agayne as the chaunginge of a garmēt. Yea, thou hast spoyled the vngodly of their lyght, and broken the arme of the proud. Camest thou euer into y<sup>e</sup> ground of y<sup>e</sup> sea: or hast thou walked in the lowe corners of the deepe? Haue the gates of death bene opened vnto the, or hast thou sene the doore of euerylastynge treasure? Hast thou also perceaued howe broade the earth is? psa. 47. b.

The notes.

a. Besayth not that heauen was made before the earth, but when his godly wysdome made them, he sayth he had a dwelling place and that he headed no earthly man: for then was he praysed of the angels, whiche here are called the childre of God. He meaneth also that there was no mā by or helped him, when he made the starres and created the intellectuall and spirituall natures.

The xxxix. Chapter.

God speaketh vnto Job, shewing hym by the examples of his workes, that his rightwisnes is vnsearchable.

Knowest thou the tyme when y<sup>e</sup> wilde goates byrige forth their yonge among the stony rockes? Or layest y<sup>e</sup> waye when the hyndes ble to fawne? rekenest thou the monethes after they engendre, that thou knowest the tyme of their bearinge? or when they lye downe, when they cast their younge ones, and when they are deliuered of their trauayle and payne? How their yonge ones growe vp and ware greate thorow good fedying? who letteth the wilde asse go fre, or who loseth the bondes of the mule? Vnto whom I haue geue the wyldernes to be their house, and the vntylled lande to be their dwelling place. That they may geue no force for the multitude of people in the cyties, nether regarde the cryenge of the cryer: but seke their pasture about the mountaynes, and folow y<sup>e</sup> grene grasse. Wyl the vnicorne be so tame as to do the seruice, or to abyde styll by thy crybe? Canste thou bynde the yock aboute him in thy forowes, to make him plowe after the in the valleis? Mayest thou trust him (because he is stronge) or commit thy labour vnto him? Mayest thou beleue him, that he wyl byringe home the corne, or to cary any thing vnto the barne? vnderstandylige. When his tyme is, he flyeth vp on hys, and cateth nether for horse nor man.

C Hast thou geue the horse his strength, or lerned hym to bowe downe his necke wyth feare: that he letteth hym selfe be dryuen forth lyke a greshopper, where as the stoute neyenge that he maketh, is fearfull: he breaketh the grounde wyth the hofes of his fete cheatfully in his strength, and runneth to mete the harness men. He layeth asyde all feare, his stomack is not abated, nether starteth he a backe for any swerde. Though the quyuers rattle vpon him, though the speare and shyld gylstre: yet russheth he in fearfully, and beateth vpon the grounde. He feareth not the noyse of the trompettes, but as soone as he heareth the shawmes blow, thus (sayeth he) for he smelleth the battell a farre of, the noyse, the Capitaynes and the shoutinge.

D Commeth it thorow thy wysdome, that the Goshauke flyeth towarde the South: Doth the Eagle moue by, and make his nest on hye at thy commaund: demet: He abyde in the stony rockes, and vpon the hye toppes of harde mountaynes, where no man can come. From thence maye he beholde his praye, and loke farre about wyth his eyes. His Mat. 24. c. pounge ones are fed wyth bloude, and where any deed body lyeth, there is he immediatly.

Moreouer, God spake vnto Job and sayde: Can he that stryuet wyth the Almyghtye, be at rest: Shoulde not he whiche disputeth wyth God, geue hym an answer: Job answered the Lorde, sayinge: Beholde, I am to vyle a personne, to answer the, therefore wyll I lay my hande vpon my mouth. Once or twyle haue I spokē, but I wyll saye no more.

C Job humbleth hym selfe vnto God, the description of an Elephant, Acupathan.

Then spake the lord vnto Job out of the storme, & sayd: Job. 28. a * Gyrd vp thy loynes lyke a mā, and tell me the thynges that I wil aske the. Wilt thou disanulle my iudgement: Or wilt thou cōdemne me, that thou thy selfe mayest be made ryghteous: Is thyne arme then lyke the arme of God: Maketh thy voyce suche a sounde as his doth: Then arme thy selfe wyth thyne owne power, by, decke the in the toly araye, poure out the indignaciō of thy wrath: se that thou cast downe all the proude, loke well, that thou makest all suche as be stubburne, to obeye: treade all the vngodly vnder thy feate, cast them downe into the myze, and couer theyr faces wyth darcknesse: Then wil I cōfesse also, that thyne owne ryght hande hath saued the.

Behold, Behemoth (whom I made with the) which eateth haye as an oxe: lo, how stronge he is in his loynes, and what power he hath in the nauell of his body. He spredeth out his tayle lyke a Cedre tre, all his baynes are styfe. His synnes are lyke pyppes of brasse, his rigge bones are like stauens of yron. First C when God made him, he ordered & wyl-dernesse for him, that the mountaynes shoulde geue him grasse, where all the beastes of the fylde take their pastyme. He lyeth among the reedes in the Molles, the kennes hyde hi with their shadowe, & the wylowes of the broke couer hym round aboute. Lo, without any labour might he drinke out of & whoale floud and suppe of Jordane without any trespauyle. compell him to do the continuall seruyce. Wylt thou take thy passyme wpyth him as wpyth a byrde, or geue hym vnto thy maydens, that thy companions may hew hym in peces, to be parted amonge the marchaunt men? Canst thou fyll the net wpyth his skynne, or the fysh panyer with his heade? Darrest thou laye hande vpon him? ## The notes.

- a. Arme for power, strength or myght: as in Psal. lxxi. a.
- b. The Hebrewes vnderstande by Behemoth the greatest beast in the erth that is an Elephant. Other vnderstande thereby any earthly beast that is great: but vnto an Elephant do all the properties here recyted ryght well agree, wherfore it seemeth most agreeable to the truerth, that by the worde be signyfyed an Elephant.
- c. Leuyathan as diuerse learned men expounde, signifieth the greatest fish that lyueth in the sea, which is a whale.

The .xli. Chapter.

Who is able to stonde before me? Or, who hath geue me any thyng afoze hande, that I am bounde to reward him agayne? All thynges vnder heauen are myne. I feare him not, whether he threaten or speake fayre. Who lyf- teth him vp, and stripeth him out of his clothes, or * who taketh him by the byt of his byddle? Who openeth the doze of his face? for he hath horrible tethe round aboute. His body is couered with scales as it were with shylde, lockte in, kepte, and well compacte together. One is so ioynded to another, that no ayze can come in: yea, one hangeth so vpon another, and stycketh so together, that they can not be sundered. His nestinge is lyke a glystering fyre, and his eyes lyke the moornyng shyne. Out of his mouth go torches and fyre brandes, out of his nostrils ther goeth a smoke, lyke as out of an hote lethig pot. His bryth maketh the coales burne, the flamme goeth out of his mouth. In his necke remaineth strength, and before his face sorowe is turned to gladnesse. The members of his body are ioynded so strapte one to another, and cleue so fast together, that he can not be moued.

His hert is as harde as a stone, and as fast as the stiche that the hammer man symtteth vpon. When he goeth: the myghtyest of all are afrayed, and the waues heuy. If he drawe out the swearde, there may nether speare, nor brest plate, abyde hym. He setteth as muche by a strawe as by yron, and as muche by a rotten stocke as by metall. He starteth not awaye for him that bendeth the bowe: and as for spynge stones, he careth as muche for stubble as for them. He counteth the hammer no better then a strawe, he laugheth hym to scozne that maketh the speare. He treadeth the golde in the myze lyke the sharpe pot sherdes. He maketh the depe to seethe and boyle lyke a pot, and steareth the sea together lyke an oyntment. The waye is lyght after him, the depe is his walkynge place. Vpon erth is there no power lyke vnto his, for he is so made that he feareth not. If a man will conspyde all hys thynges, this same is a king ouer all the chyldre of pryde.

The .xlii. Chapter.

The repentance of Job. He prayeth for his frendes, and his goodes are restored double vnto him.

Then Job answered the Lorde, & sayd: I knowe that thou hast power ouer all thynges, and that ther is no thought hyd vnto the. For who can kepe his owne counsell so secrete, but it shalbe knowen? Therfore haue I spoken vnywysely, seyng these thynges are so hye, and passe myne vnderstandyng. O herken thou vnto me also, & let me speake: answere vnto the thyng that I wyll aske the. For the Lorde aloweth the waye of the ryghteous, but the waye of the vngodlye shall perishe.

The Notes.

The way of sinners

a. The maners and ordinaunces of sinners where in they walke as it were in a waye are called the waye of synners. And in the scriptures, it is com- mune too take this waye for whatsoeuer we do or go aboute be it good or euil. As in the last verse of this psalme.

To sit in y seate of y scoorne- full.

b. He syteth in the seate of the scoornefull, that conspireth with them, and becommeth felowe of their myschiefe, as in the psalm. p. v. b.

To stande in iudge- ment.

c. He standeth in iudgement, that wyymeth the processe, and hath sentence pronounceth on, hys syde, as he that letteth the processe and hath sen- tence pronounced agaynst right and treuth, rob- beth iudgement. As in Esa. x. a. So then this terie meaneth no more here, but that the wicked so terrible a sentence geuen vpon theym, y they shall not be able to abyde when the Lorde shall come to the general iudgement. It meaneth not that the wycked shall not appeare in iudgement.

The. ii. psalme.

The Notes.

a. The whiche is here translated, to the chaunter is in Hebrue Lamnazah. Whiche worde after Ezra and David Kimhi (expolitours in hebrue) signifyeth to the chiefe of the syngers, whome we commonly call in englyshe, the father of the quyre, or chaunter. This interpretation also, doth the moste number and the best learned of the latinistes, best alowe; and therefore haue I folowed the same the whole psalter thowome expressyng it by this worde chaunter. Notwithstandynge dyuers authours do diuerslye interprete it. Some saye that it signifyeth, to the victorie or ouercommer, some to the victorie, whiche maye thus agre together, yf thou take a psalme to be a syngynge vp and exhortacion to put oure truste in God, beyng sure to obayne the victorie And where some enterpiete, vnto the ende vnderstande euery the same. For therefore do we put oure truste in God, that we maye come to the ende of the victorie. Some translate the tytyle thus. A vehement and often made exhortacion in instrumentes of musike, a psalm to David, that is, as they them selues expounde it. A psalm reuelate vnto David. For David is in Hebrue the darine case and not the generyue.

b. This worde signifieth the tune or note of the instrumentes. Where after the psalmes before which it is prefixed were songe, for the psalmes were song at certē instrumentes, but so p the swete tune & melody of p instrumentes, prepared p mynde more perfectly to receyue p word of p holy dictie.

David declareth verie euidentlye in this psalme that he was a figure of Christe. First he declareth Chyestes dejection and smal estimation, and then the exaltacion and dilatacion of his kyngdome, euen to the coastes of the earth and ende of the worlde, and all vnder the figure and shadowe of hym self.

To the chaunter vpon the vii. cleth of the dawning, a psalme of David.

M* God, my God: why haste thou forsaken me: the wordes of my complaint are farre fro my health.

O my God, I crye in the day tyme: but thou hearest not: and in the nyght season also I take no reste.

Yet dwellest thou in the sanctuary, O thou worshyppe of Israel,

Our fathers hoped in the, they trusted in the, & thou dydest deliuer them

They called vpon the, & were helped: they put theyr truste in the, & were not confounded.

But as for me, I am a worme & no man: a very scoone of men and the out caste of the people.

* All they se me, laughe me to scoone: they shutte out theyr lippes, and make theyr heades.

* He trusted in God, let hym deliuer hi: let him helpe hi, yf he wil haue him.

* But thou arte he that toke me out of my mothers wombe: thou waste my hope, when I hanged yet vpon my mothers brestes.

I haue bene lefte vnto thee euer sence I was bozne, thou art my God, euen fro my mothers wombe.

O go not fro me then, for trouble is harde at hande, and here is none to helpe me.

* Great bulles are come about me, fat oxen close me in on every syde.

They gaue vpon me wyth theyre mouthes as it were a rampyng and roaryng Lyon.

* I am poured oute lyke water, all my bones are out of ioynt: my heart in the myddest of my bodye is euen lyke meltynge ware.

My strength is dyled vp like a potsherde, my tonge cleueth to my goim, and I haue brought me in to the duste of deathe.

* For dogges are come aboute me, the counsell of the wycked hath layde seage agaynst me.

They pearced my handes and my fete, I mighte haue tolde al my bones: as for them, they stode staryng and looking vpon me.

* They haue parted my garmentes amonge them, and cast lottes vpon my besture.

But be not thou farre frome me, O Lorde: thou art my succoure, haste thee to helpe me.

Deliuer my soule from the swerde, my darlyng fro the power of the dogge.

Saue me from the Lyons mouth, & heate me frome amonge the hornes of the Unicorne.

he was, & howe he was mynded, when he and his were besette rounde aboute in the wilderness of Moab and sought a meane to escape. He prayeth the greates goodnes of God, towards all suche as feare him: And moueth men to the feare and loue of God, whiche can not forsake them that leane vnto hym.

To the chaunter, a Psalmc of David.

In the, O Lorde, is my trust:
let me neuer be put to confusion, but deliuer me in thy rightuousnesse.

Bow downe thyne care to me, make haste to deliuer me: be thou my stronge rocke & a house of defence, that thou mayest saue me.

For thou art my stronge holde & my castel: O be thou my guide, and lede me for thy names sake.

* Draw me out of the net that they haue layed priuely for me, for thou art my strength.

* Into thy handes I cominende my spete: thou hast deliuered me O Lord thou God of trueth.

I hate them that holde of vanities, and my trust is in the Lord.

I wyll be glad and reioyse in thy mercy: for thou hast cosydered my trouble, thou hast knowne my soule in aduersite.

Thou hast not deliuered me ouer in to the handes of the enemye, but hast set my fete in a large rowme.

Haue mercy vpon me, O Lorde, for I am in trouble myne eye is consumed for very heynesse, yea my soule and my body.

My lyfe is waxes olde with heynnesse, and my yeares with mournynge.

My strength fayleth me because of myne aduersyte, and my bones are corrupte.

I am become a very reprove amonge all myne enemyes, my neyghbours and they of myne owne acquaintance are astrayed of me: they see me in the strete, conueye them selues from me.

I am cleane forgotten and out of mynde, as a deed man: I am become lyke a broken vessel.

For I haue herde the blasphemy of the multitude: euery man abhorreth me: they haue gathered a coucell together agaynst me, and are purposed to take awaye my lyfe.

But my hope is in the Lorde, and I saye: thou art my God.

My tyme is in thy hande: deliuer me from the hande of myne enemyes, & from them that persecute me.

Shewe thy seruauant the lyghte of thy countenance, helpe me for thy mercies sake.

Let me not be confounded, O Lord, for I call vpon the: let the vngodly rather be put to confusyon, and brought vnto the hell.

Let the lyenge lypes be put to sy-lence, whiche cruelly, disdaynfully, despytefully, speake agaynst the rygh-tuous.

O how greates and manyfolde is thy good, whiche thou hast hyd for the that feare the.

O what thynges bringest thou to passe for the, that put their trust in the, euen before the sonnes of men.

Thou hydest them priuely by thyne owne presence fro the proude men, thou kepest them secretly in thy tabernacle, from the strife of tonges.

Thankes be to the Lord, for he hath shewed me maruelous greates kyndenesse in a stronge cytie.

For whē the todayne feare came vpon me, I sayd: I am cast oute of thy sight.

Nevertheless, thou herdest myne huble prayer, when I cryed vnto the.

O loue the Lorde (all ye his sayn-ctes) for the Lord preserveth the sayth-full, and plenteously rewardeth he the proude doer.

* Be stronge therfore & take a good herte vnto you, all ye that put youre trust in the Lorde.

E * The rightuous is euer mercifull, and lendeth gentylte, therefore shall hys seide be blessed.

Flee from euil, and do the thyng that is good, so shalt thou dwel for euer.

For the Lorde loueth the thyng that is right, he forsaketh not his sayntes, but they shall be preserued for euermore as for the seide of the vngodly, it shall be rote out.

Yea the rightuous shall possesse the lande, and dwell therein for euer.

Prover. 7. b

* The mouth of the rightuous is exercised in wisdom, and his tonge talketh of iudgement.

A The lawe of his God is in hys hert, therefore shall not his fote steppes slide.

The vngodly seyth the rightuous, and goeth aboute to slaye him.

But the Lorde wyl not leaue him in his handes, nor condemne him when he is iudged.

Hope thou in the Lorde, & kepe hys waye, and he shall so promote thee, that thou shalt haue the lād by enheritaunce, and se, when the vngodly shall perishe.

I my selfe haue sene the vngodly in great power, and flourishing like a greche baye tree: but when I wente by, lo, he was gone: I soughte him, but he coude no where be founde.

G Kepe innocency, and take hede vnto the thyng that is righte, for that shall bring a man peace at the laste.

As for the transgressours, they shall perishe together, and the vngodly shall be rote out at the laste.

The helpe of the rightuous cometh of the Lorde, he is theyr strength in the tyme of trouble.

The Lorde shall stande by them, and saue them: he shall deliuer them from vngodlye, and helpe them, because they put theyr truste in him.

The. li. psalme.

A prayer of David wherein he earnestly acknowledgeth his synnes, he despyeth the holy Golfe, and prayeth for the church, whiche is the true Jerusalem.

To the chaunter, a Psalm of David, when the Prophet Nathan came vnto him, after he was gone in to Bethsabe.

Hue mercye vpon me (O God) after thy goodnes, and according vnto thy great mercies, do awaye myne offences.

Wathe me well fro my wickednesse, and cleanse me fro my synne.

* For I knowlege my fautes, and my synne is euer before me.

Agaynst the onely, agaynst the haue
I synned, and done euell in thy syghte:
that thou myghtest be iustified in thy sayings, and shouldest ouer come when thou arte iudged.

Beholde, I was borne in wyckednesse, and in synne hath my mother conceaued me.

But lo, thou haste a pleasure in the trueth, and hast shewed me secrete wyldome.

O purge me with * Ioye, and I shall be cleane: wathe thou me, and I shall be whyter then snowe. Oh let me heare of ioye and gladnesse, that y bones whiche thou hast broken, maye reioyse.

Turne thy face from my synnes, and put out all my mysdedes.

* Make me a cleane herte, O god, and renue a ryghte spirite within me.

Cast me not away from thy presence, C and take not thy holy spirite from me.

O geue me the comfote of thy helpe agayne, and stablyshe me with thy fre spirite.

Then shall I teache thy wayes vnto the wycked, that synners maye be con-uerted vnto the.

Deliuert me from bloude gyltynesse O God, thou that arte the God of my health, that my tonge maye praise thy ryghteousnesse.

Open my lypyes, O Lorde, that my mouthe maye shewe thy praise.

For yf thou haddest pleasure in sacrifice, I woulde geue it the: * but thou delytest not in burnt offerynges.

The sacrifice of God is a troubled spirite, a * broken and a contrite hert, O God, shalte thou not despyse.

O be fauourable and gracious vnto Sion, that the walles of Ierusalem may be buylded.

For then shalt thou be pleased * with the sacrifice of ryghteousnesse, with the burnt offerynges and oblacions:
then shall they laye bullockes vpon thine auter.

To the chaunter.
Let hys chyldren be fatherlesse.

Fastyng
Be standeth, &c.

a. Take in the title of the. liii. psalme.
b. The wordes that in the prophetes are spoken after the maner of despayng wpyng or prayng: ought often to be vnderstande as prophecyes, that shall in dede come to passe. As let hys chyldren be bacaboundes, for his chyldren shal be vagaboundes, and so forth of the other that followe. As in psalm. xl. c. But let all those that seke the be ioyfull.
c. By fastyng is here ment all bodelye aspycion as it is sayde before in the. xxx. psalm. c.
d. It is sayde that God standeth at the ryghte hande of the poore, because he is prest and redy to helpe them, as before in the psalme. xvi. b.

Turne oure captiuite, O Lorde, as the ryuers in the southe.

They that sowe in teares, shall reape in ioye.

He that nowe goeth in his waye wepyng and beareth forth good seide, shall come agayne wyth ioye, and byngng hys theaues with hym.

* The. cxxvii. Psalme.

of this ps
haue before in the style of p
crr. psal.

By the on-lye lyberalte & gyfte of God, is þ house and houghelde geuen. the ctyte defended, meate myny- shed, chyldren & those towarde and thyrtye obtayned.

The songe of the steares.

Excepte the Lorde buylde the house, their labour is but lost that buylde it.

Except the Lorde kepe the ctyte, þ watchmā waketh but in vayne.

* It is but lost labour that ye cyle vp earlye, and take no rest, but eate the breade of carefulnes: for loke to whom it pleaseth hym, he geueth it in slepe.

Lo, chyldren and the fruite of the wombe are an herpytage and gyfte, that commeth of the Lorde.

Lyke as the arrowes in the hande of the Gyaunt, euen so are the yonge chyldren.

Happye is the man, that hath hys quiver full of them: they shall not be ashamed, when they speake wyth their enemyes in the gate.

The. cxxviii. Psalme.

He that feareth God shall doe wel and fortunatlye at al tyme.

The songe of the steares.

Blessed are al they that feare the Lorde, and walcke in hys wayes.

For thou shalt eate the laboures of thyne handes: wel is thee, happye arte thou.

Thy wyfe shall be as þ fruteful vyne vpon the walles of thy house.

Thy chyldren lyke the Oliue braunches rounde aboute thy table.

Lo, thus shall the man be a blessed, that feareth the Lorde.

* The Lorde shall so blesse the oute of Sion, that thou shalt see Ierusalem in prosperyte all thy lyfe longe.

Yea, that thou shalt see thy chyl- dres chyldren, and peace vpon Israell.

The Notes.

a. That is, fylled with welch and prosperite.

The. cxxix. Psalme.

Although the wycked do longe and greatlye persecute the godlye, yet shall they not preuaile ouer them: yea, they shall at þ length perishe when the godlye shall be in safetie.

The songe of the steares.

Manye a tyme haue they foughte against me fro my youth vp (maye Israell nowe saye.)

* Yea, manye a tyme haue they fought agaynst me fro my youth vp, but they haue not ouercome me.

The plowers plowed vpon my back, and made longe sorowes.

But þ righteous Lorde hath heuened the yoke of the vngodlye in peces.

Let them be confounded and turned backward, as many as haue euell wyll at a Sion.

* Let them be euen as the hawe vpon the house toppes, whyche wythereth before it be pluckte vp.

Whereof the mower filleth not his hande, neyther he that byndeth vp the theaues, hys bosome.

So that they which goe by, saye not so much as: the Lorde prospere you, we wythe you good lucke in the name of the Lorde.

The notes

a. In the scripture, Sion betokeneth the whole church and cōgregation of God, and euery faythful soule that hath his whole intente, affection and desire towarde God.

The. cxxx. Psalme.

An earnest prayer of hym that is oppressed wyth aduersitie for his synnes, and that suerly hopeth to obtayne of God bothe forgiveness of his synnes and deliuerance from hys aduersities.

The songe of the steares.

Out of the depe call I vnto the, O Lorde, Lorde heare my voyce.

Oh lette thyne eares consyders wel the voyce of my complaynte.

* Yf thou Lorde wylt be extreme to marcke what is done amysse, Oh Lord who may abyde it?

But

But there is mercy with thee, & thou mayest be feared.

I loke for the Lorde, my soule doeth wayt for him, & in his word is my trust.

My soule doth patiently abyde the Lorde, fro the one morning to the other.

Let Israel trust in the Lorde, for with the Lorde there is mercy & plenteous redemption. And he shall redeeme Israell from all his synnes.

The notes.

The depe a. By the depe is underst and the aduersitie wher in the people of Israel were when they were scattered among the Chaldees. Vnto vs christe, it signifyeth the aduersitie, trouble and misery, & hap- peneth to vs for our offences and synnes.

The. cxxxi. Psalme.

He sheweth & he was not proude, but meke and lowly.

The songe of the steares.

Lord, I am not hye minded, I haue no proude lokes.

* I do not exerceyse my selfe in great matters, which are to hie for me.

But I refrayne my soule and kepe it lowe, lyke as a childe that is wayned fro his mother: yea, my soule is euen as a weyned childe.

Let Israel trust in the Lorde, from this time forth for euermore.

The. cxxxi. Psalme.

He sheweth that the prosperite of Chyrtys kyngdom dureth euer, & that God is alway presēt with his church and congregation: Thys doeth he vnder the figure of David and of the arke abyding in Zion.

The songe of the steares.

1. Par. 23. b. * How he swore vnto & Lorde, and vowed a vow vnto the almighty one of Jacob: I will not come within the tabernacle of my house, nor clyme vp in my bedde.

I wyl not suffre mine eyes to slepe, nor myne eye lyddes to slomber.

Vntyl I fynde out a place for & Lorde, an habytacyon for the myghtye one of Jacob.

Lo, we hearde of the same at Ephrata, and founde it in the wod.

We wyl go in to his tabernacle, and fall downe before his fote stole.

2. par. vi. s. * Aryse, O Lorde, into thy restyng place, thou and & atcke of thy strength.

2. par. vi. s. * Let thy priestes be clothed with righ- tuousnesse, and let thy sayntes reioyse, for thy seruaunte Davids sake, turne not awaye the presence of thyne anoynted.

* The Lorde hathe made a faythfull oth vnto David, & he shall not shynke from it: Of the fruite of thy bodye shal I set vpon thy seate.

If thy children wyl kepe my couenāt, and my testymonye that I shall learne theym, their children also shal spt vpon thy seate for euermore.

For the Lorde hath chosen Zion, to be an habitacyon for him selfe hathe he chosen her.

This shal be my rest, here wyl I dwel, for I haue a delyte therein.

I wyl blesse her vitalles with encrease, and * wyl satisfye the pore with breade.

I wyl decke her priestes with health, and her saintes shal reioyse & be glad.

There shal I make the chorne of Dauid to flozyshe, I haue ordered a * lanterne for myne anoynted.

Euery day wyl I geue thanks vnto thee, and prayse thy name for euer and euer.

Great is the Lorde, and maruelous worthe to be praysed, there is no ende of his greatnes.

One generacyon shall prayse thy workes vnto another, and declare thy power.

As for me I wyl be talkynge of thy worshyppe, thy gloze, thy prayse, and wonderous workes.

So that men shal speake of þe might of thy meruelous actes, and tell of thy greatnesse.

The memoryall of thyne abundant kyndnes shalbe shewed, & men shal sing of thy ryghteousnes.

The commaundementes of God must be diligently regarded and obserued.

Put thy trust in the Lorde with all thyne hearte: and leane not vnto thyne owne vnderstandinge. In all thy wayes haue respect vnto hym, and he shall orde thy goynges. * Be not wyle in thyne owne conceate but feare the Lorde, and departe from euell: so shall a thy nauell be whole, and thy bones stronge.

* My sonne, despyse not the chastening of the Lorde, neyther saynte when thou arte rebuked of him. * For whome the Lord loueth, him he chasteneth: and yet delyteth in hym, euen as a father in his owne sonne. Wisdomme and her sentes and wayes ought to be searched.

Hearke, O ye chyldren, the fatherlye exhortacion, & take good hede, that ye may lerne wisdomme. Yea, I shall geue you a good reward, if ye wyl not forsake my law. For when I my selfe was my fathers deare sonne, and tenderly be loued of my mother, he taught me also, sayinge: * Let thynne hearte receaue my wordes, kepe my commaundementes, & thou shalt liue. Get the wisdomme, get the vnderstandinge: forget not the wordes of my mouth, and shrinke not from them. Forsake her not, and she shal pre serue the: loue her, & she shal kepe the.

Behold the chele poynte of wysdome is, that thou be wyllynge to opteyne wisdomme, and before all thy goodes to get the vnderstandinge. * Make much of her and she shal promote the: Yea, if thou embrace her, she shal bring the vnto honoure.

She shal make the a gracious head, and garnish the with a crowne of glorye. Heare my sonne, and receaue my wordes, that the yeares of thy lyfe may be many. I wil shew the, the way of wisdomme, and lead the in the right pathes.

So that if thou goest therein, there shall no straitnesse hynder the: & when thou runnest, thou shalt not fall. Take fast holde of doctrine, let her not goo: kepe her, for she is thy lyfe. * Come not in the path of the vngodly, and walke not in the waye of the wycked. Eschue it, and go not therein: departe asyde, and passe ouer by it. For they can not slepe excepte they haue first done some myschefe: nether take they any rest, excepte they haue fyrst done some harme. For they eate the breade of wickednesse, and drinke the wyne of robbery. The path of the rightuous shyneth as the lyghte, and is euer brighter and brighter vnto the perfecte daye. But the waye of the vngodly is as the darcknes, where in men fall, or they be aware. * My sonne, marcke my wordes, and encline thine eare vnto my sayinges: Let them not departe from thine eyes, but kepe them euen in the myddest of thynne herte.

For they are lyfe vnto all those that fynde them, and heale the vnto all theyr bodyes. Kepe thynne herte with al diligence, for there vpon hangeth life. Put away from the a froward mouthe, and let the lippes of sclaunder bee far from the. Let thynne eyes beholde the thinge that is ryghte, and let thynne eye liddes loke strait befoze the. Ponder the path of thy fete, so shall al thy wayes be sure. * Turne not asyde, nether to the right hande nor lefte, but withholde thy fete from euell.

Immedyately he folowed her, as it were an oxe lead to the slaughter (and lyke as it were to the stocks, where folles are punished) so longe tyll she had wounded his lyuer with her dart: lyke as yf a byrde hasted to the snare, not knowinge that the parrell of his lyfe lyeth there vpon. Heare me now therfore, O my sonne, and marcke the wordes of my mouthe. Let not thyne herte wandze in her wales, and be not thou disceaued in her pathes. An ydle had maketh pooze, but a quicke laborynge hand maketh ryche. Who so gathereth in Sommer, is wise: but he

B that is sluggyshe in haruest, byngeth him selfe to confusyon. Louynge and fauorable is the face of the rightuous, but the forehead of the vngodly is past shaine, and presumptuous. * The memoriall of the iust shall haue a good reposte, but the name of the vngodlye shall styncke. A wysse man wyl receaue warninge, but a folle wyl soner be smitten in the face. * He that leadeth an innocent lyfe, walketh surely: but who so goeth a wronge waye, shalbe knowne.

* He that wyneketh with his eye, wil do some harme: but he that hath a folythe mouthe, shalbe beaten. The mouth of a rightuous manne is a well of lyfe, but the mouthe of the vngodlye is past shaine, and presumptuous.

Cynll wyl stereth by stryfe, * but loue couereth the multitude of synnes. In the lyppeg of him that hath vnderstandynge a man shall fynde wysdome, but the rodde belongeth to the backe of the folyth. Wise men lay by knowledge, but the mouth of the folythe is nye destruction. The ryche mannes goodes are his stronge holde, but pouertye oppresseth the pooze. The rightuous laboreth to do good, but the vngodlye vseth his encrease vnto synne. To take hede vnto the chastenynge of nourtoure, is the waye of lyfe: but he that refuseth to be reformed, goeth wronge. * Byssenblynge lyppeg kepe hatred secretly, and he that speaketh anye sclander, is a foole. Wher much bablynge is, there muste nedes bee offence: he that refrayneth his lyppeg, is wisest of all. An innocente tonge is a noble treasure, but the herte of the vngodlye is nothyng worth. The lyppeg of the rightuous fede a whole multitude, but folles shall dye in their owne foly. * The blessing of the Lorde maketh riche men, as for carefull trauayle, it doth nothyng thereto. A folle doth wyckedly, and maketh but a spozte of it: neuerthelesse it is wysdome for a man to beware of suche.

The thyng that the vngodly are a frayed of, shall come vpon them, but the ryghtuous shall haue theyr desyre. The vngodly is like a tempest that passeth ouer, and is no moze sene, but the rightuous remayneth sure for euer.

As vineger is to the teth, and as smoke is vnto the eyes, euen so is a slouggyshe personne to them that sende hym forth.

The feare of the Lorde maketh a longe lyfe, but the peates of the vngodly shal be shortened. The paciente abydinge of the rightuous shalbe turned to gladnesse, but the hope of the vngodly shall peryshe. The way of the Lord geueth a corage vnto the godly, but it is a fear for wicked doers. * The rightuous shal neuer be ouerthrowen, but the vngodly shall not remayne in the lande. * The mouthe of the iuste wylbe talkynge of wysdome, but the tonge of the froward shall peryshe. ## The. xi. Chapter.

A false * balaunce is an abhominacyon vnto the Lorde:
but a true weyghte pleaseth him. Where pryde is, there is shame also and confusyon: but where as is lowlynnes, there is wysdome.

The innocente dealyng of the iust shal leade them, but the vnfaythfulnesse of the despisers shalbe their owne destruc-cion. * Riches helpe not in the daye of vengeance, but rightuousnesse de-liuereth from deathe. The ryghtuous-nesse of the innocente ordyeth his waye, but the vngodlye shal fall in his owne wyckednesse. The rightuousnesse of the iuste shal deliuer them, but the despisers shalbe taken in their owne vngodlynnesse.

* When an vngodly man dyeth, his hope is gone, the confydence of ryches shal perishe. The rightuous shalbe deliuered out of trouble, and the vngodly shal come in his steade. Thow the mouth of the dyssebler is his neighbour destroyed, but thow knowledg shal the iust be deliuered. * When it goeth wel wyth the rightuous, the citie is mery: and when the vngodly perishe, there is gladnesse. When the iust are in wealth, the cytie prospereth: but whe the vngodly haue the rule, it decayeth.
A foole bringeth bp a sclander of his neighbour, but a wyse manne wyl kepe it secreete. * A dyssemblynge personne wyl dyscouer preyng thynges, but he that is of a faythfull heart, wyl kepe counsell. * Where no good coun-cell is, there the people decay: but wher as many are that canne geue counsell, there is wealth. * He that is suerty for a straunger, hurteth hym selfe: but he that medleth not with suertyeshyp, is sure. A gracious woman mantey-neth honestye, as for the myghtye, they manteyne ryches. * He that hathe a getyl lyberal stomacke is merciful: but who so hurteth hys neighbour, is a tyraunte. The labour of the vngodlye prospereth not, but he that soweth ryghtuousnesse, shal receaue a sure rewarde. Like as ryghtuousnes bringeth lyfe: euen so to cleaue vnto euell, bringeth deathe. The Lorde abhorreth a fayned herte, but he hathe pleasure in them that are vndefiled. It shal not helpe the wycked, though they laye all theyr handes together, but the sede of the rightuous shalbe preserued.

A fayre woman withoute discrete ma-ners, is lyke a ringe of golde in a swy-nes snoute. The iust labour for peace and tranquilityte, but the vngodlye for dysquyetnesse.

* Some man getteth out hys good-des, and is the rycher, but the hygarde (haupnge ynough) wyl departe frome nothyng, and yet is euer in pouertye.

* He that is lyberall in geuynge, shal haue plenty: and he that watreth, shal be wattered also him selfe. Who so hoordeth bp his coyne, shalbe cursed amonge the people: but blessinge shal lyghte vpon his head that selleth it. He that laboureth for honestye, fyndeth hys desyre:
but who so seketh after myschefe, it shal happen vnto hym. He that trusteth in his riches, shal haue a fall: * but the ryghtuous shal floreye, as the grene lease.

Who so maketh dysquyetnes in his owne house, he shal haue wynde for his heritage, and the foole shalbe seruaunt to the wyse. The frute of the rygh-tuous is as the tree of lyfe, a wyse man also wynteth mennes soules. * If the ryghtuous bee recompensed vpon earth, how muche moze then the vngod-ly and the synner.

The. xii. Chapter.

Who so loueth wysdome, wil be content to be reformed: but he that hateth to be repproued, is a foole. * A good man is acceptable vnto the Lord, but the wicked wyl be condempne. A man can not endure in vngodlynnesse, but the rote of the ryghtuous shal not be moued. A sted-fast woman is a crowne vnto her husband: but she that behaueh her selfe vnhonestlye, is a corruption in hys bones. The thoughtes of the ryghtuous are ryghte, but the Imaginacion of the vngodlye are disceitfull.

The talkynge of the vngodly is, howe they maye laye wayte for bloude, but the mouthe of the ryghtuous wyl depsal. 37.

B wyll delyuer them. * Or ener thou caste turne the aboute, the vngodlye shal be ouerthrowe: but the house of y<sup>e</sup> righteous shal stande. A man shal be commended for his wysedome, but a foole shal be despyed. * A symple man which labourereth and worketh, is better the one that is gorgyous and wanteth breade. A righteous man regardeth the lyfe of his catell, but the vngodlye haue cruel hertes. * He that tyllith his lande, shal haue plenteousnesse of breade: but he that foloweth idelnes, is a very foole.

Eccle. x. d.

Eccle. xx. d

The desyre of the vngodlye hunteth after myschefe, but the rote of y<sup>e</sup> righteous byngeth for the frute. The wicked falleth into the snare, thowhe y<sup>e</sup> malice of hys owne mouthe, but the iuste shall escape oute of perill. Euery man shall enioye good, accordinge to the innocencie of his mouthe, & after the workes of his handes shall he be rewarded.

Loke what a foole taketh in hande, he thinketh it well done: but he y<sup>e</sup> is wyse, wyl be counceled. A foole vttereth hys wrath in al the haile, but a discrete man couereth wronge. A iust man wil tel the trueth, and shewe the thyng y<sup>e</sup> is right: but a falsse witnesse disceaueth. A slanderous personne pricketh lyke a swerd, but a wyse mans tonge is wholsome. A true mouthe is euer constante, but a dyssemblynge tonge is soone chaūged.

They that imagin euil in their mynde, wyll disceau: but the counsellors of peace shal haue ioye folowig the. There shal no mysfortune happē vnto y<sup>e</sup> iuste, but y<sup>e</sup> vngodly shal be fylled wth miserie.

Prov. ix. b

* The Lorde abhorreth dysceatfull lippes: but they that labour for trueth please him. He that hath vnderstāding, can hyde his wysedome: but an vndyscrete herte telleth out his folyshnesse. A diligent hande shall beare rule, but the ydle shal be vnder tribute. * Heuynesse discourageth the hearte of man, but a good worde maketh it glade agayne.

Eccle. xxx. c

The ryghteous is lyberall vnto hys neyghoure, but the waye of the vngodlye wyll dysceau them selues. * A dysceatful mā shal fynde no baūtage, but he that is content with that he hath, is more worthe then golde. In the waye of righteousnesse there is lyfe, as for any other waye it is the pathe vnto deathe.

The. xii. Chapter.

A wyse sonne wyll receaue hys fathers warnyng, but he that is a scoynfull, wyll not heare when he is reprovied. A good man shall enioye y<sup>e</sup> frute of his mouthe, but he that hath a frowarde minde, shal be spoyed. He that kepeth hys mouthe, kepeth his life: but who so speaketh vnadvised, syndeth harne. The flogarde, would fayne haue, & can not get his desyre: but the soule of the diligente shal haue plentye. A righteous man abhorreth lyes, but y<sup>e</sup> vngodly shameth both other and him selfe. Ryghteousnesse kepeth the innocent in the waye, but vngodlynnesse shal ouerthrowe the synner.

* Some men are riche, though they haue nothyng: agayne, some men are poore hauyng greate riches. With goodes euery man delyuereth hys lyfe, and the poore wil not be reprovied. The lyght of the righteous maketh ioyfull, but the candle of the vngodly shal be put out. Amonge the proude there is euer stryfe, but amonge those that do all thinges with aduiscment, there is wisdom. Hastely gotten goodes are soone spent, but they that be gathered together with the hande, shal increase. A gartarynge for a thyng that is dyffered, greueth the hearte: but when the desyre cometh, it is a tree of life. Who so despileth the word, destrōieth him selfe: but he that feareth y<sup>e</sup> commaundemēte, shal haue peace. The law is a wel of lyfe vnto the wyse, y<sup>e</sup> it may kepe him from the snares of death. Good vnderstandyng geueth fauoure, but harde is the waye of the despisers. A wyse man dothe all thynges with discreciō, but a foole wyl declare his foly. An vngodly messaunger bygeth myschefe, but a faithfull embassidour is wholsome. He y<sup>e</sup> thynketh scoyne to be reformed, cometh to pouertye and shame: but who so receaueth correccion, shal come to honoure.

The. xiiii. Chapter.

A Wyse womā vpholdeth her house, but a foolyshe wyse plucketh it downe. Who so feareth the Lord, walketh in the ryght pathe: and regardeth not him that abhorreth the wayes of the Lorde. In the mouthe of the foolyshe is the boostynge of lordshyp, but the lyppeg of the wyse wylbe ware of suchē. Where no oren are, there the crybbe is emptye: but where the oren laboure, there is muche frute. A faythfull wytnesse wyl not dyssemble, but a false recorde wyl make a lye. A scoornefull bodey seketh wysdome, and findeth it not: but * knowledge is easy to come by, vnto him that wil vnderstande. Se that thou medle not with a foole, and do as though thou haddest no knowledge. The wysdome of him that hath vnderstandige is, to take hede vnto his waye, but the foolyshe of the vnwyse dysceaueth. Fooles make but a sporte of sinne, but there is fauorable loue amōg the righteous. The herte of hym þe hath vnderstandynge wyl nether dyspare for any sorow, nor be to presumptuous for any loddayne ioye.

B The houses of the vngodlye shalbe ouerthrowne, but the tabernacles of the righteous shal floryshe. There is a waye which some men thynke to be ryght, but the ende therof leadeth vnto deathe. The herte is sorowfull euen in laughter, and the ende of mirth is heuynesse. An vnfaythful personne shalbe filled with his owne wayes, but a good man wyl beware of suchē. An ignorant bodey beleueth all thynges, but who so hath vnderstandynge, loketh well to hys goynges. A wyse man feareth, and departeth from euell, but a foole goeth on presumptuously. An vnpatient mā dealeth folyshly, but he that is well aduysed, dothe other wayes.

The ignorant haue foolyshe in possession, but the wyse are crowned with knowledge. The euell shal bowe them selues before þe good: & þe vngodly shal waite at þe doores of the righteous. The poore is hated euen of hys owne neighbours, but the riche hath many frēdes.

Who so despyleth hys neyghboure, dothe amysse: but * blessed is he that hathe pitye of the poore. They that ymagin wyckednes, shal be dysappoynted: but they that muse vpon good thynges, vnto suche shal happen mercye and faythfulnesse. Dylgente labour byngeth ryches, but where many bayne wordes are, trulye there is scarcenesse. Ryches are an ornamente vnto the wyse, but the ignorant of fooles is very folyshnesse. A faythfull witnesse delyuereth soules, but a lyar dysceaueth them. The feare of the Lord is a stronge holde, for vnto his he wyl be a sure defence.

The feare of the Lorde is a well of lyfe, to auoyde the snates of deathe. The increase and prosperite of the commons, is the kynges honoure, but the decaye of the people is þe confusio of the Prynce. Patience is a tokē of wisedōe, but wrath & hasty displeasure is a tokē of folyshnesse. A merke herte is þe lyfe of the bodey, but rancoure consumeth awaye the bones. * He that doth a poore man wronge, blasphemeth his maker: but who so hathe pytie of the poore, doth honoure vnto God. The vngodlye is afrayed of euery patel, but þe righteous hath a good hope euen in deathe.

Wysdome resteth in the heart of hym that hath vnderstandynge, and he wyl teache the that are vnlerned. * Righteousnesse setteth by the people, but wickednesse byngeth folke to destruction. A dyscrete seruante is a pleasure vnto the kyng, but one that is not honest prouoketh him vnto wrath.

where as men are that can geue good

A ryghteous man miseth in his mynde howe to do good, but the mynde of the vngodlye imagyneth, howe he maye do and a true balaunce are the Lordes, he maketh all weyghtes. It is a great ab-hominacion, when kynges are wycked, for a kynges seate shoulde be holden bp with righteousnesse. Righteous lyp-pes are pleasaunt vnto kynges, & they loue hym þe speaketh the trueth. The kinges displeasure is a messaunger of deathe, but a wyse man wyll pacifye hym. The chereful countenaunce of the kyng is lyfe, and his lounge fauoure is as the cuenynge dewe. * To haue wysdome in possession, is better then golde, & to get vnderstandynge, is more worthe the siluer. The path of þe righteous eschuech euil, and who so loketh well to his waies, kepeth his owne soule. Presumptu-ousnes goeth before destruccio, and after a proude stomacke there foloweth a fall. Better is it to be of humble mynde with the lowly, then to deuyde the spoils with the proude. He that handleth a matter wysely, opteyneth good: and * blessed is he, that putteth hys trust in the Lorde. Who so hathe a wise vnderstandynge, is called to counsell: but he that can speake saye getteth more ryches. Vnderstandynge is a well of lyfe vnto him that hath it, as for the chastenyng of fooles, it is but folyshenesse.

The herte of the wyse enfourmeth hys mouthe, and amendeth the doctrine in his lyp-
pes.

Saye wordes are an honye combe, are frethyng of the mynde, and healthe of the bones. * There is away that men thinke to be ryght, but the ende therof leadeth vnto deathe. A troublous soule dysquyeteth her selfe, for her owne mouthe hathe broughte her therto. An vngodly personne styrreth bp euil, and in hys lyp-
pes he is as an whote butnyng fyre.

A frowarde bodye causeth strife, and he that is a blabbe of his tōge, maketh deuysion amoung princes. A wycked man begyleth his neighoure, and lea-deth hym the waye that is not good. He * that wycketh with his eyes, ymagineth myschefe: & he that byteth his lyp-pes, wyll do some harme. Age is a crowne of worthyppe, yf it be founde in the waye of righteousnes. A patiente man is better then one stronge: and he that can rule him selfe, is more worthe then he that wynneth a cytye. The lottes are caste in to the lappe, but they fall standeth in the Lorde.

The xvii. Chapter.

Better is a drye morsel wth qui-dyscrete seruaunte shall haue more rule then the sonnes that haue no wysdome, and shall haue lyke herytage with the brethren. * Lyke as syluer is tryed in the fyre, and golde in þe fornace, euen so dothe the Lorde proue the her-tes. A wicked bodye holdeth muche of falle lyp-

geueth eare to a dysceatful tong. * Who so laugheth þe pooze to scozne, blasphemeth hys maker: and he that is glad of another mans hurte, shall not be vnpunyshed.

* Chyl-dets chyl-
dren are a worthyp
vnto the elders, and the fathers are the honoure of the chyldren. An eloquente speache becometh not a foole, a dissem-blynge mouthe also besemeth not a prynce. Lyberalyte is a precious stone vnto hym that hathe it, for where soeuer he becommeth, he prospereth. Who so couereth another mans offence, seketh loue: but he that dyscloseth the faute, setteth frendes at variaunce. One res-proue onely doth more good to him that hathe vnderstandynge, then an. C. stry-pes vnto a foole. * A sedicious personne seketh myschefe, but a cruel messaunger shal be sent against him. It were better to come agaynst a she Beare robbed of her whelpes, then agaynst a foole euil for good, the plage shal not departe fro his house. He that soweth dyscorde and stryfe, is like one that diggeth bp a water broke: but an open enemy is lyke the water that breaketh out and reneth abroade. The Lorde hateth as wel him that iustifieth the vngodlye, as hym that condemneth the innocente.

What helpeth it to geue a foole mo-

Geue eare vnto good counsell, and be contente to be reformed, that thou mayest be wise here after. * There are manye deuyces in a mans herte: neuertheles, that counsel of the Lorde shall stande. It is a mas worshepp to do good, and better it is to be a poore man, then a dyssembler. The. xxi. Chapter.

The * kynges hearte is in the hande of the Lord, like as are the ryuers of water: he maye turne it whyther so euer he wyll. Every man thynketh hys owne waye to be ryght, but the Lord iudgeth the hertes. * To do ryghteousnesse and iudgemēt, is more acceptable to y lord then sacrifice. A presumptuous loke, a proude stomacke, and the lanterne of the vngodlye is synne. The deuyces of one that is dyligente, bynge plenteousnes: but he that is vnaudyfled, commeth vnto pouertye. Who so hoordeth vp ry ches with the dysceatfulness of his tōg, he is a foole, and lyke vnto them y seke their owne death. The robberies of the vngodly shalbe their owne destruc tion, for they woulde not do the thyng that was ryght. The wayes of the fro warde are straunge, but * the worckes of hym that is cleane, are ryght. * It is better to dwell in a corner vnder the house toppe, the with a brawlynge wo man in a wyde house.

The soule of the vngodlye wytheth euell, and hath no pytie vpon his neigh boure. * When the scozefull is puny shed, the ignoraunte take y better hede: and when a wyse man is warned, he wyl receaue the more vnderstandynge. The righteous enfourmeth the house of the vngodlye, but the vngodlye goe on syl after their owne wyckednesse. * Who so stoppeth his eare at the crying of the poore, he shal crye him selfe and not be hearde. A preuie rewarde pacifieth dis pleasure, and a giste in the bosome stils leth furiousnesse.

The iust delyteth in doyng y thing that is right, but the workers of wyckednesse abhorre the same. The man that wandzeth oute of the waye of wis dome, shal remayne in the congregati on of the dead. * He that hath pleasure in banckettes, shal be a poore mā: Who so delyteth in wyne and delycates, shal not be ryche. The vngodlye shal be ge uen for the ryghteous, and the wycked for the iuste.

* It is better to dwell in a wylder nesse, then with a chydynge and an an grye woman. In a wyse mans house there is great treasure and plentous nes, but a foolyshe bodye spendeth vp all. Who so foloweth ryghteousnesse and mercye, fyndeth bothe lyfe, ryghte ousnesse and honoure. A wyse man winneth the cytye of the mightye, and as for the strength that they truste in, he byngeth it downe. * Who so kepeth his mouth and his tonge, the same ke peth his soule fro troubles. He that is proude and presumptuous, is called a scozefull man, whiche in wrathe darre worcke malyciouslye. The voluptu ousnesse of the flouthfull is his owne deathe, for his handes wyll not la boure. He coueteth & desireth a al y daie longe, but the righteous is alwaye ge uynge, & kepeth nothyng backe. * The sacrifice of the vngodlye is abhominati on, for they offre the thyng y is got ten with wyckednes. * A false wytnesse shal peryshe, but he that wilbe content to heare, shal alwaye haue power to speake him selfe. Take the drosse from the syluer, and there shalbe a cleane vessel thereof.

The booke of the Preacher, otherwyse called

Ecclesiastes. E. R.

The fyrst Chapter,

All that is in this worlde is vayne.

These are the woordes of the Preacher, the sonne of David, kynge of Jerusalem. * All is but vanye (sayeth the Preacher) all is but playne vanye. For what els hathe a man, of all the labour & he taketh vnder the sunne: One generacion passeth awaye, and another cometh: but the earth abyedeth styl. The Sunne aryseth, the Sunne goeth downe, and retourneth to hys place, that he may there ryse vp agayne. The wind goeth towarde the southe, and fetcheth hys compasse aboute vnto the North, and so turneth in to hym selfe agayne.

Thus haue I considred all the thynges that come to passe vnder the sunne: and lo, they are all but vanye, & vexacion of mynde. The etoked can not be made streyght, & the faultes can not be nombred. I comuned with myne owne heart, sayinge: lo, I am come to a great estate, & haue gotten moore wysedome, then al they that haue bene before me in Jerusalem. Yea, my hearte had greates experience of wysdome and knowledge, for there vnto I applied my mynde: That I myghte knowe what were wysedome and vnderstandynge, what were errout and folyshenes. And I perceaued, that this also was but a veracyon of minde: for where muche wysdome is, there is also great trauaile & disquietnesse: and the more knowledg a man hath, the more is his care.

The. ii. Chapter.

A boundance of rychesse, of pleasure & of buydyns are vayne thynges.

hen sayde I thus in my hert: Now go to, I wyll take myne ease, & haue good daies. But lo, that was vanitie also: in so muche that I sayd vnto the man geuen to laughter: þu art mad, and to myrth: what doest thou?

So I thoughte in my herte, to withdraue my fleshe fro wine, to applye my mynde vnto wysdome, and to cōprehēde folyshnes, vntyll the tyme that (among all þe thynges whiche are vnder þe sūne) I myght se what were best for me to do, so longe as they lyue vnder heauen.

I made gorgeous fayre workes. I buylded me houses, & planted vyneyardes. I made me orchardes & gardenes of pleasure, & plated trees in them of all maner frutes. * I made poles of water, to water the grene & fruteful trees with all. I bought seruauntes & maidens, & had a great housholde. As for catell and shepe, I had more substaunce of the, then all they þe were before me in Ierusalē. I gathered syluer and golde together, euen a treasure of kynges and landes.

I prouyded me syngers, and women, whiche could playe of instrumentes, to make men myrth & pastyme. I gatte me dryckyng cupps also & glasses. (Shortly) I was greater & in more worshyppe, then all my predecessours in Ierusalē. For wysedō remayned w me: and loke whatsoeuer mine eyes desyred, I let the haue it: & wherin soeuer my herte desyred, or had any pleasure, I withhelde it not from it. Thus my heart reioysed in all that I dyd, and thys I toke for the porcyon of al my trauaile. But when I consydered all the workes that my handes had wrought, & al the labours that I had take therein: lo, al was but vanite & veracyon of mynde, and nothyng of any value vnder the Sunne. Then turned I me to consyder wysdom, erreure and folyshnesse (for what is he amonge men, that myght be compared to me the kyng in suche workes?) & I sawe, that wysdome excelleth foolishnesse, as farre as light doth darknesse. * For a wise mā beareth his eyes aboute his head, but þe foole goeth in the darcknesse. I perceaued also that they both had one ende.

Then thought I in my minde: If it happen vnto the foole as it doeth vnto me, what nedeth me the to labour any more for wysedome? So I confessed within my hert, that this also was but vanitie. For the wyse are euer as lytle in remembrance as the folysh, and al the daies for to come shall be forgotten: yea, the wyse man dyeth as well as the foole.

Thus began I to be weery of my lyfe, in so muche that I could away with nothyng that is vnder the Sunne, for all was but vanite & veracyon of mynde: Yea, I was weerye of all my labour, whiche I had taken vnder the Sunne, because I shuld be fayne to leaue them vnto another man, that cometh after me: for who knoweth, whether he shalbe a wyse man or a foole? And yet shall he be lord of al my labours, whiche I with suche wysedome haue taken vnder the Sunne. Is not this a vayne thyng?

So I turned me to restrayne my mind from al such trauaile, as I toke vnder the sūne: for so much as a man shuld weerye him selfe with wysdome, with vnderstandyng and opportunitie, & yet be fayne to leaue his labours vnto another that neuer swette for them. This is also a vaine thing & a great mysery. For what getteth a mā of al þe labour & trauaile of his mynde, þe he taketh vnder þe Sunne, but heuines, sorow, & disquietnes al þe dayes of his lyfe. In so muche, that his hert can not rest in þe night. Is not this also a vayne thing? * Is it not better the for a mā to eat & drinke, & his soule to be meri i his labour: yea, I saw þe this also was a gift of God: for who may eat, drinke, or buy any thig to passe with without him. And why he geueth vnto man, what it pleaseth hym: whether it be wysdome, vnderstanding, or gladnes. But vnto the synner he geueth weerynes and sorow, that he may gather and heape together the thyng, that afterwarde shalbe geuen vnto him whom it pleaseth God. This is now a bayne thing: yea, a very disquietnes and vexacion of mynde.

The.iii. Chapter.

All thynges come in their tyme and passe awaye in their tyme.

Job. 14. a.

Very thing hath a tyme: yea, all that is vnder the heauen, hath his conuenient season. * There is a tyme to be borne, and a tyme to dye.

There is a tyme to plante, and a tyme to plucke vp the thyng, that is planted: A tyme to slaye, & a tyme to make whole. A tyme to breake downe, and a tyme to buylde vp:

A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laugh: A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to daunce: A tyme to cast away stones, and a tyme to gather stones together.

A tyme to embrace, & a tyme to refrayne from embracynge:

A tyme to wyne, and a tyme to lese:

A tyme to spare, and a tyme to spende:

A tyme to cut in peces, & a tyme to sowe together:

* A tyme to kepe sylence, and a tyme to speake:

A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate:

A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peace:

What hath a mā els (y doth any thig) but weerynes and labour: for as touchyng the trauayle & carefulnes which God hath geuen vnto men, I se that he hath geuen it them, to be exercised in it. All thys hathe he ordered meruelous goodlye, to euery thyng hys due tyme. He hath planted ignoraunce also in the hertes of men, y they shoulde not fynde out the grounde of his workes, whiche he doth from the begynnyng to y ende.

So I perceaued, that in these thynges there is nothyng better for a mā, thē to be mery, & to do wel so lōg as he liueth. For al that a man eateth and drinketh: yea, whatsoeuer a mā enioyeth of al his labour, that same is a gyfte of God. I consydred also y whatsoeuer God doth, it continueth for euer, & that no thyng can be put vnto it, nor take fro it: & that God doth it to the intēt, y men shoulde feare him. * The thyng y hath bene, is now: & the thyng y is for to come, hath bene afore tyme, for god restozeth again the thyng that was past. Moreouer, I saw vnder the Sunne vngodlynesse in the steade of iudgemēt, and iniquite, in steade of ryghtuousnes. Then thought I in my mynde: God shall separate the ryghtuous from the vngodly, and then shalbe the tyme and iudgemēt of al counsels & workes. I comened w myne owir hert also, cōcernyng the children of mē: how God hath chosen thē, & yet letteth thē appeare: as though they were bestes: for it happeneth vnto mē as it doth vnto bestes, & as the one dyeth, so dieth the other: yea, they haue both one maner of byrth, so that (in this) a man hath no preemynence aboue a beaste, but all are subdued vnto vanitie. They go all vnto one place, for as they be all of dust, so shall they all turne vnto duste agayne.

* Who knoweth & the sprete of mā that goeth bpwarde, & the byrth of the beaste that goeth downe into y earth? Wherfore I perceaued, y there is nothyng better for a man, then to be ioyfull in hys labour, for that is his porcyon. But who wyl bynge him to see the thyng that shall come after him?

The.iiii. Chapter.

The myseryes of the innocent The superfluous labours of men. The childe that is pore & wyse. &c.

I turned me, & * consydred all the violent wrong that is done vnder the Sunne: & beholde, the teares of suche as were oppressed, and there was no man to cōfort them, or that wold deliuer and defend thē fro y vtolēce of their oppresours. Wherefore I iudged those that are dead, to be more happye thē such as be aliue: yea, him that is yet vnborne to be better at ease thē they bothe, because he seyth not the miserable workes that are done vnder the Sunne.

Agayne, I sawe that all trauayle and dyligence of labour was hated of euery man. This is also a vaine thing, and a vexacyon of mynde. The foole foldeth his hādes together, and eateth by his owne fleshe. One hande full (sayeth he) is better with rest, then both the handes full with labour and trauayle of mynde. Morouer, I turned me, and beholde yet another vanite vnder the Sunne.

There is one man, no mo but hym selfe alone, hauynge neyther childe nor brother: yet is there no ende of his careful trauayle: his eyes can not be satysfied wyth ryches, (yet doeth he not remembre hym selfe, and saye:) for whom do I take such trauayle? for whose pleasure do I thus consume awaye my lyfe? This is also a vayne and myserable thyng. Therefore two are better then one, for they maye well enioye the profyte of theyr labour. If one of theym fall, his companion helpeth him by agayne: But wo is hym that is alone, for yf he fall, he hath not another to helpe hym by. Agayne, when two slepe together, they are warme: but howe can a bodie be warme alone? One maye be ouercome, but two maye make resistance: A threfold cable is not lyghtlye broken. A poore chyld being wyse, is better then an olde king that doteth, and can not beware in time to come. * Some one cometh oute of pylson, and is made a king: and another * whiche is borne in the kyngdom, cometh vnto pouerte. And I perceaued, that all men lyuynge vnder the Sunne, go with the seconde childe, that cometh by in the steade of the other.

As for the people that haue bene before him, and that come after hym, they are innumerable: yet is not their ioye the greater thowme him. This is also a vayne thyng and a vexacion of mynde. When thou comest in to the house of god, kepe thy fote, <sup>a</sup> and draw nyc, <sup>b</sup> that God whiche is at hand may heare: * that is better then the offerynge of fooles, for they knowe not what euyll they do.

The Notes.

a. Some reader: for he is readier to heare (vnderstande thy word) then to receyue sacryfices that fooles geue.

b. Some reader: rather to heare, then to geue, as fooles offering sacryfice.

The. v. Chapter.

A monition to beware of rathe commynycacion.

We ought not to maruyle at the oppressyon of the poore. The couetous is not satysfied wth hys ryches.

Not hastye wth thy mouth and let not thine hert speak any thyng rashly before God. for God is in heuen, and thou vpon earth, therefore let thy wordes be fewe. for where muche carefulnesse is, there are manye dreames: and where manye wordes are, there men may heare fooles. * If thou make a vowe vnto God, be not slacke to performe it. As for folish vowes, he hath no pleasure in them. If thou promyse any thyng, paye it: for better it is that thou make no vowe, then that thou shouldest promise, and not paye. Use not thy mouth to cause thy fleshe for to synne, that thou saye not before the angell: my foolyshnesse is in the faute. for then God wyll be angrie at thy voyce, and destroye al the workes of thyne handes. And why: where as are manye dreames and manye wordes, there are also dyuerse vanities: but loke y<sup>e</sup> thou feare God. * If thou seyst the poore to be oppressed, and wrongeously deale wythall, so that equyte and the ryghte of the law is wasted in the lande: maruell not thou at suche iudgemente, for one greate man kepeth touche with another, and the myghtie helpe them selues together. The whole lande also wyth the fyeldes and all that is therein, is in subiection and bondage vnto the kyng. He that loueth money, wyll neuer be satysfied wyth money: and who so delyteth in ryches, shall haue no profyte thereof. Is not this also a vayne thyng? Where as muche ryches is, there are manye also that spende theym awaye. And what pleasure more hath he that possesseth them, sayynge that he maye loke vpon them wyth his eyes? A labourynge man slepeth sweetely, whether it be lytle or muche that he eateth: but the abundance of the ryche wyll not suffre him to slepe.

Yet is there a sore plage, whyche I haue sene vnder the Sunne (namely) riches kept to the hurt of him that hath them in possession.

greate myserie and trouble: and yf he haue a child, it getteth nothyng. * Like as he came naked oute of his mothers wōbe, so goth he thither againe, & carteth nothyng away w him of al his labour. Thys is a myserable plage, that he shall go away euen as he came. What helpeth it him then, that he hath laboured in the wynde? All the daies of hys lyfe also must he eate in y dark, wth greate carefulnesse, sycknesse and

D sorowe. Therefore me thynke it a better and a sayrer thyng, a man to eate and dryncke, and to be refreshed of all hys labour, that he taketh vnder the Sunne all the dayes of hys lyfe whiche GOD geueth hym, for this is his porcyon. For vnto whom soeuer GOD geueth ryches, goodes and power, he geueth it him to enioye it, to take it for his porcyon, and to be refreshed of hys labour: this is now the gyfte of GOD. For he thyncketh not much howe longe he shall lyue, for so muche as GOD fylleth his hert with gladnes.

The. vi. Chapter.

The myserie of the ryche and covetous. The dyscreuice of a foole and a wyse man.

I Here is yet a plage vnder the Sunne, & it is a generall thyng among men: when GOD geueth a man ryches, goodes and honoure, so that he wanteth nothyng of all that hys herte can desyre: and yet GOD geueth him not leue to enioye the same, but another mā spendeth thē. This is a bayne thyng & a miserable plage. If a mā beget an hundred children, and lyue many yeares, so that his daies are many in nombre, and yet can not enioye hys good, neyther be buried: as for him I saye, that an vntimely byrthe is better then he. For he cometh to naught, and goeth his way in to darckenesse, and his name is forgotten. Moreover, he seyth not the Sunne, and knoweth of no rest neyther here nor there: Yea though he lyued two thousand yeares, yet hath he no good lyfe. Come not all to one place: All the labour that a manne taketh, is for him selfe, and yet hys desyre is neuer fylled after hys mynde. For what hath the wyse more then the foole? What helpeth it the poore, that he knoweth to walcke before the lyuyng? The syght of the eyes is better, then that the soule shoulde so departe away. Howbeit this is also a bayne thyng and a dysquyetnes of mynde. What is more excellent then man? Yet can he not in the lawe gette the byctorye of hym that is myghtier then he: A bayne thyng is it to cast out many wordes, but what hath a man elles?

The. vii. Chapter.

That which passeth our strengthes & wyttes oughe we not to seke after.

Who knoweth what is good for man liuyng, in y dayes of hys bayne lyfe, which is but a shadowe? Or, who wyl tel a man, what shall happē after him vnder the Sunne.

* A good name is more worthe, then a precious oyntemente, and the daye of death is better then the day of byrthe. Prou. 22. 9
Eant. i. a

It is better to go into an house of mournyng, then into a hantkettyng house. For there is the ende of all men, and he that is lyuyng, taketh it to heart. It is better to be sorowe then to laughe, for when the countenaunce is heuy, the hert is ioyfull. The herte of the wyse is in the mournyng house, but the heart of the folysh is in the house of myrthe.

* It is better to geue eate to the chaste, Prou. 31. 6 lyuyng of a wyse manne, then to heare the songe of foolles. For the laughyng of foolles is lyke the crackyng of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a bayne thyng.

Who so doth wzonge, maketh a wise man to go oute of his wyt, & destroyeth a gētle hert. The ende of a thing is better then the begynnyng. The pacyent of sprete is better thē the hye mynded. Be not hastily angrye in thy mynde, for wzath resteth in y bosome of afole. Say not thou: What is the cause, that the dayes of the olde tyme were better, then they that be nowe? for that were no wise question. Wylsedō is better then ryches, yea much more worth thē the eye sight. For wylsedom defendeth as well as money, & the excellent knowledge & wylsedō geueth life vnto hi y hath it i possessiō.

Cons

Of the Preacher. Chapter. viii. Fo. lix

Consyder the worke of God, howe that no man can make the thyng straight, whiche he maketh croked. Use well the tyme of prosperite, and remembre the tyme of mylfortune: for God maketh the one by the other, so that a man can fynde nothyng els.

C These two thynges also haue I consysydered in tyme of vanyte: that the iust man peryssheth for hys rightuoulnesse sake, and the vngodly liueth in his wickednesse. Therfore * be thou nether to rightuous nor ouer wylse, that thou perish not: be nether to vnrighuous also nor to foolyshe, lest thou dye before thy tyme. It is good for the to take hold of this, and not to lette that go oute of thy hande. For that he feareth God shal escape them all.

Wylsdomme geueth more corrage vnto the wylse, then ten mightie men of the cylie: * for there is not one iuste vpon earth, y doth good, & synneth not. Take not hede vnto euery worde that is spoken, lest thou heare thy seruante curse the: for thyne owne hert knoweth, that thou thy selfe also haste ofte times spoken euill by other men. All these thynges haue I proued becaus: of wylsdomme:

Job. 28. c. for I thoughte to be wylse, * but she went farther fro me then she was before,

D vnto her. I applyed my mynde also vnto knowledge, and to seke oute science, wylsdomme and vnderstandyng: to know the folysheynesse of the vngodly, and the errour of dotyng foolles. And I founde, that * a woman is bytterer then death:
for she is a verye angle, her hearte is a net, and her handes are cheynes. Who so pleaseeth God, shall escape from her, but the synner wyl be taken wyth her.

Pro. viii. d. Beholde (sayeth the Preacher) this haue I diligently searched oute & proued, that I myght come by knowledge: whiche as yet I seke, and fynde it not. Amonge a thousande men I haue founde one, but not one woman among al. Lo, this onely haue I founde, that * God made man iust and ryght, but they seke byuerse sotelties, where as no mā hath wylsdomme and vnderstandyng, to geue answere therunto.

The kynges commaundement oughte to be obeyed
Gladnes is one of the chiefe thynges vnder the Sunne.

Wylsdomme * maketh a mans face to shine, but malice put-teth it out of fauoure. Kepe the kynges commaundement (I warne the) and sothe that thou hast made vnto * God. Be not hastye to go out of his syghte, and se thou contynue in no euill thyng: for what so euer it pleaseh hym, that doeth he. Lyke as when a kyng geueth a charge, his commaundement is myghty: Euen so * who maye save vnto hym: what doest thou: * Who so kepeth the commaundement, shall fele no harme: but a wylse mannes heart discerneth tyme and maner: for euery thyng wyl haue oportunitie and iudgement, and this is the thyng that maketh men full of carefulnesse and so-rowe. And why: a manne knoweth not what is for to come, for who wyl tell hym: Neyther is there any man that hath power ouer the sprete, to kepe styll the sprete, nor to haue anye power in the tyme of death: is it not he also that can make an ende of the battayle, neyther may vngodlynes deliuer him that medleth with all.

All these thynges haue I consydered, and applyed my mynde vnto euery worke that is vnder the Sunne: howe one man hath lordshyppe vpon another, to his own harme. * For I haue oft sene
the vngodly brought to their graues, and fallen downe from the hye and glo-ryous place: in so muche that they were forgotten in the cylie, where they were had in so hye and great reputacyon.

This is also a bayne thyng. Because nowe that euell workes are not haste-ly punished, the hearte of man geueth hym selfe ouer vnto wyckednesse. But though an euill person offende an hundred tymes, and God deferre, geuyng hym longe lyfe: yet am I sure, that it shall go well with them that feare god, because they haue him before their eyes. Agayne, as for the vngodlye, it shall not be wel with him, nether shal he prolonge his dayes: but euen as a shadow, so shal he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vanyte vpon earth:
There be iust men, vnto whom it happeneth

peneth, as though they had the workes of the vngodly: Agayne, there be vngodlye, with whom it goeth as though they had the workes of the ryghteous. This me thynke also a hayne thyng. Therefore, I comynende gladnesse, because a man hath no better thyng vnder the Sunne, then to eate and drinke, and to be mery: for that shal he haue of hys labour all the dayes of hys lyfe, whiche God geueth hym vnder the Sunne. When I applyed my mynde to learne wysedome, and to knowe the trauayle that is in the worlde (and that of such a fashyon, that I suffred not mine eyes to slepe, nether daye nor nyght) I vnderstode of all the workes of God, that it is not possible for a manne, to attayne vnto the workes that are done vnder the Sunne: and though he bestow his labour to seke them out, yet can he not reache vnto the: yea, though a wise man woulde vndertake to know them, yet myght he not fynde them.

The ix. Chapter.

A man worketh not, by the ryghtwysenes of his own workes, whether he be worthy of loue or hate. A man ought to lyue merely with hys wyfe, & prayse of wyfdom.

For all these thynges purposed I in my mind to seke out. The ryghteous & wise, yea, & their workes also are in the hande of God: and there is no man that knoweth eyther the loue or hate of the thyng that he hath before hym. It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: It goeth wyth the ryghteous as wyth the vngodly: with good and cleane as wyth the vncleane: wyth hym that offereth, as with him that offereth not: lyke as it goeth wyth the vertuous, so goeth it also with the synner: As it happeneth vnto the periured, so happeneth it also vnto hym that is afrayed to be forsworne. Amonge all thynges that come to passe vnder the Sunne, this is a myserye, that it happeneth vnto all a lyke. This is the cause also that the hertes of men are full of wyckednesse, and mad folyshnesse is in their hertes, as long as they lyue, vntill they dye.

And why? As long as a man lyueth, he is carelesse: for a quicke dogge (saye they) is better then a dead Lyon: for they that be liuing, know that they shal dye: but they that be dead, knowe nothyng, neyther deserue they any more. For their memory is forgotten, so that they be neyther loued, hated, nor enuyed: neyther haue they anye more parte in the worlde, in all that is done vnder the Sunne. So thou thy way the, eate thy bread with ioye, and drinke thy wyne with gladnesse, for thy workes please God. Let thy garmentes be allwaye whyte, and lette thy heade wante none oyntment. Use thy selfe to lyue ioyfullie wth thy wyfe wh<sup>o</sup> thou lovest, all the dayes of thy life which is but hayne, that God hath geuen the vnder the Sunne, all the dayes of thy banite: for that is thy porcyon in this lyfe, of all thy labour and trauayle that thou takest vnder the Sunne. What so euer thou takest in hande to do, that do with all thy power: for amonge the dead, where as thou goest vnto, there is neyther worke, counsell, knowledge nor wysedome.

So I turned me vnto other thynges vnder the Sunne, and I sawe, that in runnyng, it helpeth not to be swyft: in battayl, it helpeth not to be stronge: to fedynge, it helpeth not to be wyser: to ryches, it helpeth not to be subtell: to be had in fauoure, it helpeth not to be connyng: but that all lyeth in tyme and fortune. For a man knoweth not hys tyme, but lyke as the fylshe are taken wyth the angle, and as byrdes are caught with the snare: Euen so are men taken in the perillous tyme, when it cometh so sodenly vpon them.

This wysedome haue I sene also vnder the Sunne, and me thoughte it a great thyng. There was a lytle cytie, and a fewe men within it: so there came a great kyng and beseged it, and made great bulwarckes agaynste it. And in the cytie there was founde a poore man (but he was wise) which wyth his wysedome deliuered the cytie: yet was there no body, that had any respect vnto suche a symple man. Then sayde I: wysedome is better then strength. Nevertheless, a symple mannes wysdom is despyled, and hys wordes are not heard. A wise mannes counsell that is folowed in sepleace, is farre aboue the cryng prynce.

Dead flies þ corrupte swete oymntment & make it to stinck, ate some thyng more worthy then the wysedome and ho-noure of a foole. A wise mannes herte is a vpon the ryght hande, but a fooles herte is vpon the lefte. A dootyng foole thynketh, that euery man doth as folyschely as him selfe. * If a pryncypal spyete be geuen the to beate rule, be not neglygente then in thyne offyce: for so shall greate wyckednesse be put downe, as it were with a medicyne. Another plage is there, whiche I haue sene vnder the sunne: namely, the ygnorauuncye that is comenly amonge prynces: in that a foole sytteth in greate dygnitye, and the riche are sette downe beneth: I

 A foole is so full of wordes, that a man

¶ From our youth oughte we to consyder and regarde the goodnes of God.

AU at awaye dyspleasure out of thynne hert, and remouie euell from thy body: for childheod, and youth is but vanite. Remembre thy maker in thy youth, or euer the dayes of aduersitie come, and or the yeaeres drawe nye, when thou shalt say: I haue no pleasure in them: before the Sunne, the lighte, the Moone and starres be darckened, and or the cloudes turne agayne after the rayne: whē þ keepers of the house shall tremble, & when the stronge men shall bowe theym selues: when the myllers stande styll, because they be so fewe, and when þ sighte of the wyndowes shall waxe dymme: when the doores in the stretes shall be shut, and when the voyce of the myller shall be layed downe: when menne shall crye bp at the voyce of the byrde, and when al the doughters of musike shalbe brought lowe: when men shall feare in hye places, and be afrayed in the stretes: when the Almonde tree shall be dyspyssed, the greshopper bozne oute, and whē great pouerty shal breake in: when man goeth to his longe home, and the mounchers go aboute the stretes. Or euer the syluer lace be taken awaye, and or the golden bande be broken: Or the pot be broken at the well, and the whele vpon the cysterne: Or duste be turned agayne vnto earth fro whence it came, and or the sprete retorne vnto God, whiche gaue it. * All is but vanytye (sayeth the Preacher) all is but playne vanitie.

The same Preacher was not wyse alone, but taught þ people knowledge also: he gaue good hede, sought out the grounde and let forth many parables. His diligence was to fynde out acceptable wordes, ryght scripture, and the wordes of trueth. For * the wordes of the wyse are lyke pyckes and nayles, that go thorow, wherwyth men are kept together: for they are gyue of one shepheard only. Therfore bewate (my soune) that aboute these thou make thenot manye and innumerable bokes, nor take dyuerse doctrynes in hande, to wery thy body wythall.

¶ Let vs heare the conclusyon of all thynges: feare God, and kepe his commaundementes, for that toucheth all men: For God, shal iudge all worckes and secrete thinges, whether they be good or euell.

Libanus, O my spouse, come to me fro Libanus: come soone the nexte waye from the toppe of Amana, from the top Sanir and Hermon, frome the Lyons dennes and frome the mountaynes of the leopardes. Thou hast wounded my herte, O my syster, my spouse, thou hast wounded my heart, with one of thyne eyes & w one cheine of thy necke. O how fayre and louelye are thy brestes, my syster

Syster, my spouse Thy brestes are more pleasaunt then wyne, and the smell of thine ointmentes passeth al spices. Thy lippes, O my spouse, drop as the honye combe, yea, mylcke and honye is vnder thy tonge, & the smell of thy garmentes is lyke the smell of frankinsence. Thou art a wel kepte garden, O my sister, my spouse, thou art a wel kept watersprig, a sealed wel. The frutes that sprout in the, are lyke a very Paradyse of pomegranates with swete frutes: as Cipres, Cardus, Saffron, Calmus, and al the trees of Libanus: Myrr, Aloes and al the best spices. Thou arte a wel of gardens a well of lypynge waters, whiche renne downe from Libanus.

Christe calleth the Heathen.

Up thou northe wynde, come thou southwynd, and blow vpon my garden, that the smell thereof maye be carried on euery syde: yea, & my beloued may come into my garden, and eate of the frutes and apples that growe therein.

Christe to the Church.

Open to me (sayde he) O my syster, my loue, my doue, my derlyng: for my heade is full of dewe, and the lockes of my heere are ful of the myghte dropes.

The voyce of the spouse.

I haue put of my coate, howe can I do it on againe: I haue washed my fete, how shall I kyle them agayne?

The voyce of the church speakinge of Christe.

But when my loue put in his hande at the hole, my hert was moued toward him: so that I stode vp to open vnto my beloued. My handes dropped with Myrr, and the Myrr ranne downe my fyngers vpon the locke. Neuerthelesse when I had opened vnto my beloued, he was departed and gone hys waye.

Nowe lyke as afore tyme when he spake, my hearte coulde not longer re- frayne: Euen so nowe I soughte hym, but I coulde not fynde him: I cryed vpon hym, neuerthelesse he gaue me no aunswere.

The Church complayneth of her persecuters.

So the watchemen that wente aboute the cytie found me, smote me, and wounded me: Yea they that kept & walses, toke awaye my garment fro me.

The Spouse speaketh to her companions.

The Church, aunswerynge of Christe.

As for my loue, he is white and red coloured, a synngular personne amonge manye thousandes: his head is the most fine golde, the lockes of his heere are bushed, browne as the euenynge: Hys eyes are as the eyes of doves by the water brokes, washen with mylke, and remainynge in a plenteous place: Hys chekes are lyke a garden hedde, where in the Apotecaries plante all maner of swete thynges: Hys lippes droppe as the floures of that moste pryncypall Myrr, his handes are ful of golde ringes and precious stones. Hys body is as the pure puery, dectre ouer with Saphires: His legges are as the pylles of Harbel, sette vpon sokettes of gold: His face is as Libanus, and as the bewtye of the Cedre trees: Hys throte is swete, yea he is altogether louelye. Such one is my loue, O ye doughters of Ierusalem, suche one is my loue.

The Churche speakinge to Christe.

O set me as a seale vpon thyn hert, and as a seale vpon thine arme: for loue is myghtye as the deathe, and gelousye as the hell. Her coales are of fyre, and a very flamine of the Lord: so that many waters are not able to quench loue, neyther maye the streames droune it. Yea yf a man woulde geue all the good of his house for loue, he shoulde counte it nothyng.

Christe speakinge of the church to the Synagoge.

When oure loue is tolde our young sister, whose brestes are not yet growne what shall we do vnto her?

Yf she be a wall, we shall buylde a syluer bolwercke ther vpon: yf she be a maisters shall, but Israell knoweth nothing, my people hath no vnderstanding.

* Alas for this sinful people, which are expert e in blasphemyes: a frowarde ge-neracyon, vnnaturall chyldren. They haue forsaken the Lord, they haue prouoked the* holy one of Israell vnto anger, and are gone backward. Wherfore shoulde ye be plaged anye more: for ye are euer fallinge awaye. The whole head is sycke, and the herte is very he-
uie. <sup>d</sup>* Frome the sole of the fote vnto the heade, there is no whole parte in all youre bodye: but all are woundes, botches, sores and strypes, whiche can neither be helped, bounde vp, molified, nor eased with any oyntmente.

* Your launde lyeth waste, your cyties are bzrent vp, your enemyes deuour your launde, and ye muste bee fayne to stande, and loke vpon it: and it is desolate, as it were with enemyes in a battell. Moreover, the daughter of Sion is lefte alone lyke a cotage in a vyneyard, lyke a watchhouse in tyme of war, lyke a beseged cytie.* And excepte the Lord of Hostes had left vs a few a liue we should haue bene as Sodoma, and lyke vnto Gomorra.

Heare the worde of the Lorde, ye tyrauntes of Sodomia: and herken vnto the law of our God, thou people of Gomorrah. * Why offere ye so many sacrifices vnto me? I am discontente for the brentoffringe of wethers, and with the fatnesse of fedbeastes. I haue no pleasure in the bloude of bullockes, lambes and gootes. When ye appeare before me, who requyrezeth you to treade within my porches. * Offre me no mo oblacions, for it is but losse labour. I abhorre youre incense. I maye not awaye with youre newe moones, youre Sabothes and solempne dayes. * Your fastinges are also in bayne. I hate your new holydayes and fastynge, euen fro my be-re hearte. They make me wepe, I can not abyde them. Though ye holde out your handes, yet turne I myne eyes frome you. And though ye make many prayers, yet heare I nothyng at all. * for your handes are ful of blood.

* Wash you, make you cleane, put a waue your euell thoughtes oute of my syghte, cease from doinge of euell and by violence. Lerne to do right, apply your selues to equyte, deliuer the oppressed, helpe the fatherlesse to his ryght, let the wydowes complainte come before you.

Nowe go to (sayeth the LORD) we will talke together. Is it not so? Though poure synnes be as reade as scarlet, shal they not bee whyter then snowe? And thoughe they were lyke purple, shal they not be lyke whyte wolle? Is it not so? * If ye be louyng and obediēte, ye shall enioye the beste thyng that groweth in the lande. * But if ye be obdynate and rebellious, ye shalbee deu-oured with the swerde: for thus the Lorde hath promysed with hys owne mouth.

Howe happeneth it then that the ryghtuous cytye ( whiche was full of equyte ) is become vnfaithfull as an whore: ryghtuousnes dwelte in it , but nowe nurther. & Thy Splyet is turned to drosse , and thy wyne myxt with water. Thy pynces are traytours and companions of theues. * They loue gyftes altogether, and solow rewardes As for the fatherles, they helpe him not to his righte, neyther wyl they let the wydowes causes come before them.
Therfore speaketh the Lord God of Israell : Ah I
muste ease me of myne enemyes , and auenge me vpon them. And therfore shal I laye my hande vpon thee , and burne out thy drosse fro the finest and purest, and put oute all the leade, and sette thy iudges agayne as they were somtyme, and thy Senatours as they were from the begynnyng. * Then shalt thou bee called the ryghtuous cytye, the faythful cytie. But Sion shalbee redemed with equyte, and her captiuite with ryghtu-ousnesse. For the transgressours and vngodlye, and such as are become vnfaithfull vnto the Lorde, must altogether be veterly destroyed.

And except ye bee ashamed of y<sup>e</sup> oke trees wherin ye haue so delyted, and of the gardens that ye haue chosen: ye shal be as an oke whose leaues are fallen a waye, and as a garden that hath no moystnesse. * And as for the glorye of these thynges, it shalbe turned to drye strawe, and he that made them to a spatke. And they shal bothe burne to-

For the lawe shall come out of Sion, and the word of God from Jerusalem, and shal geue sentence amonge the Heathen, and shall refozme the multitude of people: * So that they shal breake theyr swerdes and speares, to make sythes, spyles and sawes thereof. * From that tyme forth shall not one people lyft vp weapoun against another, neyther shall they learne to fight fro thens forth. It is to the that I cry (O house of Jacob) by, let vs walcke in the lighte of the Lorde. But thou art scatred abroad w thy people (O house of Jacob) for ye go far beyonde youre fathers, whether it bee in Sorceters (whom ye haue as the phylistines had) or in calkers of mens byrthes, whereof ye haue to manye. * As soone as your land was full of syluer & gold, & no end of your treasure: so soone as your land was full of strong horses & no ende of your charettes: Immediatlye was it ful of * Idolles also, euen workes of your owne handes, which ye your selues haue factoned, and your syngers haue made. For the * d dave of the Lord of Hostes shall go ouer all pryde and presumption, vpon all them that exalte them selues, & shal bring them al downe: vpon al high and stout Cedre trees of Libanus, and vpon al the okes of Basa vpon al high hylles, and vpon al stoute mountaynes, vpon all costlye towres, & vpon all strong walles, vpon al shippes of the sea, and vpon euerye thinge that is glorious and pleasaunt to loke vpo.

* And it shal bringe downe the pryde of man, and laye mans presumptuousnesse ful lowe, and the Lorde shal onelye haue the vycetory in that daye. But the Idols shall utterly be coted out. * When shall crepe in to holes of stone, and into caues of the earth, from the syght of the fearfull iudge, and frome the glorie of his maiesty: what time as he shal wake him by to shake the earthe: Then shall man cast awaye his goddes of syluer & golde (whiche he neuertheles had made to honoure the) vnto Dolles and Bakes: þ he may the better crepe into the caues and rockes, and into the cliffes of harde stones, from the syght of the fearful iudge & from þ glory of his maiesty.

The prophecieth that at the comynge of Christe all strength and power shall be put forth of Iery.

Nerue man can elchue a perſone moued i anger, for what doth he wylſelue. Euen ſo ſhall the Lorde of Hoſtes take away from Ieruſalem and Iuda, al poſſeſſions & power, all meat and drinke, the captayue and the ſoudyare, the iudge and the prophete, the wyſe and the aged man, the worſhipfull of fyftie yeare olde, and the honorable: the Senatours and men of vnderſtanding: the maſters of craftes and oratours. * And I ſhall geue you children to bee youre princes (ſayth the Lorde) and babes ſhall haue the rule of you. The people alſo ſhalbee pylled and polled, and one ſhall euer be doynge violence and wrong to another. The bove ſhall preſume againſte the elder, and the vyle perſonne againſte the honorable. Yea, one ſhall take a frende of his owne kinned by the boſome, & ſay: a thou haſt clothinge, thou ſhalt be oure head, for thou maielt kepe vs from this fall and parell.

B Then ſhall he ſweare and ſay: I can not helpe you. Moreouer, there is neyther meate nor clothynge in my houſe, make me no ruler of the people. For Ieruſalem & Iuda muſt decay, becauſe þ bothe their wordes & coucelſ are agaĩſt the Lorde, they prouoke the preſence of his mageſtie vnto anger. The chaunginge of their countenaunce bewrayeth the yea, they declare their owne ſinnes them ſelues, as the Sodomites, & hyde them not. Wo be vnto their ſoules, for they ſhalbe heuely rewarded. Then ſhall they ſay: O happie are þ godly, for they maye enioy the frutes of their ſtudies. But wo be to the vngodly & vnrigh-

* O my people, thy leaders deceyue the, and treade oute the waye of thy fote ſteppes. * The Lord is here to comen of the matter, and ſtandeth to geue iudgemente with the people. The Lorde ſhall come forth to reaſon with the Senatours and princes of hys people, and ſhal ſay thus vnto them: * It is ye that haue burnt by my vyneyarde, the robbery of the poore is in youre houſe.

Wherefore do ye oppreſſe my people, and marre the faces of the innocentes: thus ſhall the God of Hoſtes reuile them.

Moreouer, thus ſayeth the Lorde: Sepnge the daughters of Sion are become ſo proude, and come in with ſtretched oute neckes, and with bayne wanton eyes: ſepnge they come in tryppinge ſo nyceſſe with their fete: Therefore ſhall the LORDE Hauē the heades of the daughters of Syon, and make theyr bewtye bare in that daye. In that daye ſhall the Lorde take awaye the gorgyousnes of theyr apparell and ſpanges, chaynes, partlettes, and colares, braces, lettes and hooues, the goodlye ſoured wede and broderd raymente, bruches & heade bandes, rynges and garlandes, holyedaye clothes and bales, kerchues and pinnes, glaſſes and ſmockes, bonettes and taches.

a. That is, thou art better apparelled and richer then we, helpe vs with fode and other thynges necessarie. All the curses whiche the prophete here receyterh, were fulfilled in the destruction of Jerusalem.

b. Some readeres factours or extortioners. He noteth the couetousnes of priestes and prelates. God here calleth the poore wydowes, the fatherlesse, and all that are desyrful of the comforte of this world his people, whome the pharisees then oppressed: nowe priestes, and suche as falsly boaste them selues to be spirituall: Justly called extortioners, in as muche as they requyre the right (as they call it) more by mennes tradicions, then by the word of God: & do not so seke soules to God, as monney for them selues. Oppresse, þ is, spoylle, pylle, and euen shawe, so that they shalte leaue oughte. What house, fylde, or marchaundys is there, that rendereth them not somewhat: Whether there be children christened, or marriages made, or men come to the table of the Lorde: whether the syncke be visyted or þe deade buryed, there is euer somewhat requyred: Furthermore they are not onely accused to be couetouse, but also to be women, that is, effeminate and womanly: because they moost synchelye and ydely spende and waste that, whiche they haue scraped with iugelynge, violence, and most naughtye fashyons.

c. To shawe the heades of women is to make them confounded and ashamed, for it is a shame to a woman to be shauen. i. Cor. xi. a. So that the prophete herby signifieth, by a borrowed speache, that the Lorde shal make the daughters of Syon (by whiche vnderstande, the women of Iurpe) confounded and ashamed, and byynge them to extreme aduersitie and pouertie, & euen to nought. Josephus maketh mencion that Ierusalem, which was the chiefe cytie therof, was ones so famished that a certen woman of the cytie ate her owne chylde. A be it, some vnderstande euen here also by the daughters of Syon, the townes, byllages, and castelles of Syon: as it dothe in dede often signyfy in the scriptures.

awaye the desolacion of the daughters of Syon, and pource the bloude out fro Ierusalem with þe wynde of his smoke and fyre. Moreover vpon all the dwellinges of the hyl of Syon, & vpon their whole cōgregation, shal the Lorde proude a cloude and smoke by daye, and the shynynge of a flammynge fyre by nyght: for all theyr glozve shalbe preserued. And Ierusalem shal be a tabernacle for a shadowe, because of hete in the daye tyme, a place and refuge where a mā may kepe him for wether & rayne.

Now well then, I wyll synge my beloued frende a songe of his bynnyarde. * My beloued frende hath a bynnyarde in a verpe fruteful plenteous grounde. This he hedged, this he walled rounde aboute, and planted it with goodly grapes. In the myddest of it buylded he a towre, and made a wyne presse therein. And afterwarde when he loked that it shoulde byynge him grapes, it brought forth the thornes. I shewe you nowe my cause (O ye Citezens of Ierusalem and whole Iuda :) Iudge I praye you be twixte me, & my bynnyard. What more could haue bene dōe for it, & I haue not done. * Wherefore the hath it geue thornes, where I loked to haue had grapes of it?

Wel, I shall tel you howe I wil do w my bynnyarde: I wil take þe hedge fro it, & it may perishe, & breake down þe wal, & it may be trode vnder fote. I wil laye it waste, & it shal nether be twysted nor cut, but beare thornes and breares. I wyll also forbyd the cloudes, that they

The .vi. Chapter.

Esay ſawe the gloype of the Lorde, and was ſent to prophre the deſolation of Iurpe.

In the ſame yeaere* that kyng Oziah dyed, I ſawe<sup>a</sup> the Lord ſyttynge vpon an hygh and glorious* ſeate, and hys trayne fylled p palace.

From aboue ſakred the Seraphins, wherof euery one had ſyre wynges.

With twayne eche couered hys<sup>b</sup> face, with twayne his fete, and with twayne did he flye. They cryed alſo eche one to other on this maner:*holy, holy, holye, is p Lorde of Hoſtes. The whole worlde is full of his gloype. Yea, the gaeſtes & dozechekes moued at their crynge, and the houſe was full of ſmoke. Then I ſayde: Who is me. For I was aſtonyſhed: that I (whiche am a man of vncleane lyppes, and dwell amonge people that hathe vncleane lyppes alſo) ſhoulde ſe the kyng and Lorde of Hoſtes with wyne eyes.

Then ſawe one of the Seraphins vnto me, hauynge a hote cole in hys hande, whiche he had taken from p aulter with the tonges, and touched my mouthe, and ſayde: lo, this hathe touched thy mouthe, and thyne vntyghteouſnes is taken awaye, and thy ſynne forgeuen. After this I hearde the voyce of the Lorde, takynge aduſement on this maner: Whome ſhall I ſende, and who wyl be oure meſſaunger? Then I ſayde: here am I, ſende me. And ſo he ſayde: go, and tel this people:*ye ſhall heare in dede, but ye ſhall not vnder-ſtande, ye ſhall planely ſe, and not perceau. Harden the hearte of this people, ſtoppe their eares, and ſhut their eyes, that they ſe not with their eyes, heare not with their eares, and vnderſtande not with theyr hertes, and conuerte and be healed.

Then ſpake I: Lorde, howe longe he answered: vntyl the cytyes be bitterly waſted without inhabitours, and the houſes withoute men, tyll the lande be alſo deſolate, and lye vnbuylded. For the Lord ſhal take the men farre away, ſo that the lande ſhal lye waſte a longe ceaſon. Neuertheleſſe, the tenth parte ſhall remayne therein, for it ſhal conuerte and be frutefull. And lyke wyſe as the Cerebyntes and Oketrees byng forth their frutes, ſo ſhal the holy* ſede haue frute.

The Syrians moue battell agaynſte Jeruſalem. & virgin ſhall beare a chyld.

It happened in the tyme of Ahaz the ſonne of Joatham, whiche was the ſonne of Oziah kyng of Iuda: that* Ra-zin the kyng of Siria, and Phakeh the ſonne of Romeliah, kyng of Iſrael: wēt federate together: hys hearte quaked (yea, and the heartes alſo of his people) lyke as a tre in the felde, that is moued with the wynde.

Then ſayd God vnto Esay: go mete Ahaz (thou and thy ſonne ſear Iaſub) at the heade of the ouer pole, in the ſote pathe by the fullers grounde, and ſaye vnto hym: take hede to thy ſelfe, and be

At the same tyme shall a man lyue with a cowe, and two shepe. Then because of the aboundaunce of mylcke, he shall make butter and eate it. So that euery one which remayneth in the lande, shall eate butter and honye. At þ same tyme al vyneyardes (though there be a thousande bynes in one, and were solde for a thousande siluerlynges) shall be turned to bzeats and thornes. Lyke as they shall come in to the lande with arrowes and howes, so shall all the lande become bzeats and thornes. And as for all hylls that nowe are bewen

The deluyraunce of the lande by Emanuel. The bone of offence, at which manye shall stumble.

Moreover, the Lord sayd A vnto me: * Take the a greate lease, and wyte in it, as men do with a penne, that he spede him to robbe, and haste him to spoyle. And immediatly I called vnto me faithfull witnessses Uriah þ priest, and zachariah the sonne of Barachiah. After that wet I vnto the Prophetisse, that nowe had conceaued and borne a sonne. Then sayd the Lord to me: geue hym this name: Maher schalal hash bas (that is: a spedye robber: an hastye spoyler). for why, or euer the childe shall haue knowledge to saye: Abi and Im, (that is father, and mother:) shall the riches of * Damascus and the substance of Samaria be taken awaye, thozowe the kyng of the Assirians.

get him by the throte. He shall fyll also the wydenesse of thy lande <sup>b</sup> with hys brode wynges, O Emanuell. Go toges ther ye people, and gather you, herken to all ye of farre countrees. Muster you, and gather you: take youre counsell together, * yet must youre counsell come to noughte: go in hande withal, yet shal it not prospeere. Excepte Emanuel: (that is God) be with vs. For the Lorde chastised me, and toke me by the hande, and warned me, saying vnto me: <sup>p</sup> I should not walcke in the waye of this people. He sayd mozeouer: rounde with none of them, whosoener say: yonder people are bounde together. * Neuertheles feare them not, neither be afraide of them, but sanctifye ye the Lorde of Hostes, * let him be youre feare and dreade. * For he is the sanctifyinge, and stone to stamble at: the rocke to fall vpon, a snare and net to bothe the houses: to Israel, and the inhabitours of Ierusalem. And manye shall stamble, fall, and be broken vpon hym: yea, they shal be snared and taken.

And therfore yf they saye vnto you: aske counsell at <sup>p</sup> sothelayers, witches, charmers and confurers, then make them this answer: Is there a people any where, that asketh not counsell at hys God: whether it be concernynge the deade, or the lyuynge. If any man want lyghte, let hym loke vpon the lawe, and the testimonye, whether they speake not after this meanyng. If he do not this, he stambleth and suffreth hunger. And yf he suffre hunger, he is oute of pacience, and blasphemeth hys kynge and his God. Then loketh he vwarde, and downe warde to the earthe, and behold, there is trouble and darcknesse, heracion is rounde aboute him, and the cloude of erreure. And oute of such aduersite, shall he not escape.

a. He calleth the kyngdome of Dauid, which figureth the kyngdome of Christe, the tyll runnyng water of Silo: whiche thyng agreeth very well vnto Christ, that was meake and lowlye of herte. Math. xi. d. And zacha. ix. Beholde thy kynge cometh vnto the poore and lowlye: &c. He raggneth in tyll and peasable consciences. Silo is a springe at the fore of the hyll of Sion: whiche hath not continuallye water, but spryngeth certayne houres and dayes, and cometh with a great sounde by the bothem of <sup>p</sup> grounde, and ryfies and holes of an harde stonye rocke: The maner of speakynge is borrowed, of the dyspyssed tyrlines of the water, whiche signifyeth the smal estimation and pouertie of the christen. b. Some reade, and as the rocke to fall vpon, to the ii. houses of Israel: a snare and net to the inhabitours of Ierusalem. And they expounde the sentence thus. The Lorde wyll be vnto the ii. houses of Israel, that is, to the house of Iuda, and to the house of the ten trybes: partly a sanctifyinge (by whiche vnderstande healte and felicitye) and partly a stone to stamble at. So that some of bothe the houses shall be sanctified, and some shall stamble, but that cheselye they of Ierusalem shal be snared. Who shal be sanctified, and who shal stamble and fall, doth S. Peter clerely expounde. i. Peter. ii. b. saying: vnto you therfore which beleue, he is precious: but vnto them, whiche beleue not, the stone whiche the builders refused, &c.

Upon his shoulder shall the kyngdome lye, and he shalbe called with his owne name: The wonderous geuer of counceyl, * the mightie God, the euerlastyng father, & prince of peace: he * shall make no ende to encrease the kyngdome and peace, and shal sit vpon the seate of Dauid, and in hys kyngdome, to set vp the same, to stablyshe it with equyte and ryghteousnesse, from thence forth for euermore. This shall the gelousy of the lord of hostes bring to passe.

C The Lorde sente a worde in to Iacob, the same is come in to Israel. And the people also of Ephraim, and they that dwel in Samaria, can save with pryde and hys stomackes, on this manner: The tyle worcke is fallen downe, but we wyll buylde it with harder stones. The Holbery tymber is broken, but we shall set it vp agayne with Cedar. Neuertheles, the Lorde shall prepare Razin the enemye agaynst them, and so order their aduersaries, that the Sirians shal laye holde vpon them before, and the Philistines behynde, and so deuoure Israel with open mouthe.

* After all this, the wrathe of the Lorde shall not cease, but yet his hande shall be stretched oute styll. For the people turneth not vnto hym, that chastyseth them, nether do they seke the Lord of hostes. Therefore the Lorde shal rote oute of Israel bothe heade and tayle, braunche and twigge in one daye.

Ier. xlii. c

By the heade, is vnderstande the Senatoure and honourable man, and by the tayle, the Prophete that preacheth lyes. * For all they whiche enfourme the people & they be in a righte case, suche be dysceauers. Suche as men thyncke also to be perfecte among these, are but caste away.

Therefore shall the Lorde haue no pleasure in their yonge men, nether fauoure their fatherlesse and wydowes. For they are all together ypocrites and wycked, and all their mouthes speake foly. After all this, shall not the Lordes wrathe cease, but yet hys hande shalbe stretched oute styll. For the vngodlye burne, as a fyre in the byers and thornes: And as it were oute of a fyre in a wod or a redde buthe, so ascendeth the smoke of theyr pryde.

For this cause shall the wrathe of the Lorde of hostes fall vpon the lade, and the people shalbe consumed, as it were with fyre, no man shall spare hys brother. If a man do turne hym to the ryghte hande, he shall sampe the, or to the lefte hande to eate, he shall not haue yonghe. Every man shall eate of hys owne arme: Manasses shall eate Ephraim, & Ephraim Manasses, and they bothe shall eate Iuda. After all this shall not the Lordes wrathe cease, but yet shall his hande be stretched out styll.

The Notes.

a. This yocke fygureth the yocke and burthen of the lawe, whiche so oppressed the people, that S. Peter coulde saye to the Apostles that neyther they nor theyr fathers were able to kepe it. Act. iiii. v. b. This yocke hath Christe broken, accordinge to this prophecie of Esai, and utterlye dyscharged the burthen therof. For we knowe nowe that God is satisfied and contented in the bloude of hys sonne Christe, and that the manye thousande folde punysshementes whiche are due to oure synnes, are cleane pardoned and forgiven for the merites of y same Christ. i. Iohannis. ii. a. The Hebrewes expounde this of the destruction of the hoste of Sennacherib, which was done by the Angel of which ye haue after in y, xxxviii. g. And call the hoste of the Assirians, the yocke of the peoples burthen, the staffe of the shoulder and rodde of the oppressoure, but it is a more greuous bondage, wherewith the spirituall Sennacherib of whome that Assirian was a certayne fygure and shadowe bounde vs, and from whiche Christ hath deliuered vs.

b. By the daye at Madian is meante y daye when in Bedeon with thre hundred men slue an innumerable multitude of the Madianites, as ye recade, Iudic. vii. There foughte y Lord for hym, and deliuered the people from bondage. Euen so hath he nowe deliuered vs from the captiuite of the deuyll, deathe, and hel by Christe.

c. He eateth the fleshe of his owne arme, that taketh awaye the goodes of his nye frende: & robbeth his kynfeman. The meanynge is that one shal robbe and polle another.

be their restinge place, Ramah shall be astrayde, Gibeah Saul shall flee away.
The voyce of y nople of thy horyles (O doughter Gallim) shall be hearde vnto Lais and to Anathoth, which also shall be in trouble. Madmena shall tremble for feare, but the cyrelings of Gabin are maly, yet shall he remayne at Nob that daye. After that, shall he lyfte vp hys hande agaynst the mounte Sion, and against the hil of Ierusalem. But se, the Lorde God of Hostes shall take a waye the proude from thence, w feare.
He shall hew downe the proude, and fell the hye mynded. The thornes of y wod shall be roted out with yron, and Libanus shall haue a myghtie fall.

The Notes.

- a. Robbed. ec. loke in the fyrste psalm. b.
b. Calno and Charchanus are cities, which stode by the ryuer Euphrates.
c. To byseth doth often signifie for to take vengeaunce, as in Erod. xxxii. g.
d. Or passage: Understande of Iordan.

The. xi. Chapter.

He prophesyeth of the natiuite of Christe, & of hys people, of the remnaunte of Israel, and of the saythe of the heathen or Gentiles.

After this there shall come a rodde forth of the kynrede of Jesse, and a blossome out of hys roote. * The spirite of the Lorde shall lyghte vpon it: the spirit of wysedome, and vnderstandynge: the spirite of counceyl, and strenght: y spirite of knowledge, and of the feare of God:
and shall make him seruente in the feare of God.

For he shall not geue sentence, after the thyng that shall be brought befoze his eyes, nether reprove a matter at the fyrste hearynge: but with righteousnes shall he iudge the pooze, and with holy-nes shall he refoirme the synple of the worlde.

* He shall smyte the <sup>a</sup> worlde <sup>b</sup> wyth the staffe of his mouth, and w y breath of his mouthe shall he slaye the wycked.
* Righteousnesse shall be the gyrdle of his loynes, trueth and faithfulnessse, the gyrdynge vp of his raynes. * Then shall the wolfe dwell with the lambe, and the Leopard shall lye downe by the gote. Bullockes, Lyons and catell shall kepe compagne together, so that a lytle chyld shall dyue them forth.

The cowe and the Bere shall fede together, and their yonge ones shall lye together. The Lyon shall eate strawe like the oxe, or the cowe. The childe while he sucketh, shall haue a desyre to the serpentes nest, and when he is weaned, he shall put his hande in to the Cockatrice denne. No man shall do euil to another, no man shall destrope another, in al the hyll of my Sanctuarie. * For y earth shall be full of the knowledge of y Lorde.
euen as thoughe the water of the sea flowed ouer the earth.

* Then shall the gentiles enquite after the rote of Jesse (which shall be set vp for a token vnto the Gentyles) for hys dwellynge shall be glorious. * At y same tyme shall the Lorde take in hande a gaine, to conquere the remnaunte of his people (whiche are leste alyue.) fro the Assirians, Egipcians, Arabians, Morians, Elamites, Caldeyes, Antiochias and Ylandes of the sea. And he shall set vp a token amonge the Gentyles, and gather together y dispersed of Israel, yea, and y oute castes of Iuda from the foure corners of the worlde. The hatred of Ephraim and the emmyte of Iuda shall be cleane roted oute. Ephraim shall beare no euil wyl to Iuda, and Iuda shall not hate Ephraim: but they bothe together shall lye vpon the shoulders of the Philistines towarde the west, and spoyl the together that dwell towarde the East. The Idumites and the Moabites shall let their handes fal, and the Ammonytes shall be obedyente vnto them.

The Lorde also shall cleue the tunges of the Egypcians sea, and with a myghtye wynde shall he lyfte vp hys hande ouer Nilus, and shall smyte his seuen streames and make men go ouer dye thode. And thus shall he make a waye for his people, that remayneth from the Assirians, * lyke as it happened to the Israelites, what tyme they departed oute of the lande of Egypte.

of the whole armye. As they had come not onelye oute of sacre countreyes, but also from the endes of the heauens: E uen the Lorde hym selfe with the my nistres of hys wra<sup>t</sup>he, to destroye the whole lande. Mourne therefore, for the daye of the Lorde is at hand, and com meth as a destroyer from the Almygh tye. Then shall al the handes be letten downe, and all mennes heartes shall melte awaye, they shall stande in feare, carefulnes and sorowe shall come vpon them, and they shall haue payne, as a woman that traunyleth wyth chyld.

* One shall euer be abashed of ano ther, and their faces shall burne lyke the flame.

For lo, the daye of the Lorde shall come, terrible, full of indignacion and wra<sup>t</sup>he: to make the lande waste, and to roote oute the sinne theteof. For the sterres and planettes of heauen shall not geue their lyghte, * the sunne shall be quenched in the tynge, and the moone shall not shyne with hys lyghte.

And I wyll punyssh the wyckednesse of the s worlde, and the synnes of the vngodlye, sayeth the Lorde. The hys stomackes of the proude, wyll I take awaye, and wyll laye downe the boar dyng of tyrauntes. I wyll make a ma derer then fyne golde, and a man to be moore worthe, then a golden wedge of Ophir. Moreover, I wyll so shake the heauen, that the earthe shall remoue out of her place.

Thus shall it goe wyth Babilon in the wra<sup>t</sup>he of the Lorde of hostes in the daye of hys fearfull indignacion. And Babilon shall be as an hunted or chased Doo, and as a flocke withoute a shepe owne people, and flee echone in to hys owne lande. Who so is founde alone, shall be shotte thorowe: And who so ga ther together, shall be destroyed with the swerde. * Their chyldren shall be slayne before their eyes, their houses spoyled, and their wyues rauyned. For lo, I shall brynge vp the Medes agaynst them, whiche shall not regarde syluer, nor be desyrous of golde. Then shall younge mennes bowes be knapped a sonder. The Medes shall haue no pytie

Gene xix. res shall not spare the chyldren. * And Babilon (that glorie of kyngdomes & beutye of the Caldees honour) shall be destroyed, euen as God destroyed Sodom and Gomorra. It shall neuer be moze inhabited, neither shall there be anye moze dwellynge there, from generation to generation.

The Arabians shall make no moontentes there, neither shall the Shephardes make their foldes there anye moze. But wyld beasts shall lye there, and the houses shall be full of great Oules. Estriches shall dwell there, and Apes shall daunce there: the lytle Oules shall crye in the palaces, one after another, and Dragons shall be in the pleasaunte parlours. And as for Babilons tyme it is at hande, and her dayes maye not be longe absente.

The Notes.

a. That is, greuous prophecie, combrance mischefe, and heuie fortune.

b. Some reade: lift vp the banner or standart.

c. Some reade: hyl, and vnderstande thereby Babilon whiche (saye they) is called an hyl because of the hyghre and excedynge sumptuous buyldynge thereof.

d. He calleth the people of Persia and of Medea his debities, and hys Byautes, because he was disposed by them to ouerthrowe the Babilonyans.

e. Some reade: Euerie man shall be abashed toward his neighbours. That is, they shall be so astounded and amased and so destitute of counceyl, that one shall loke vpon another and be confounded, maruelynge howe they came in suche trouble.

f. That is, they shall be so sore ashamed that their faces shall be as redde as fyre.

g. By the worlde here is signified Babilon because of the greatnesse thereof.

h. By the dwellynge of these beasts in Babilon doeth the prophete meane, that it shall be utterly destroyed, and become desolate as a wilderness: As after in the xxxvii. c. Bellicanes, Norches, &c. shall dwell therein.

The xiiii. Chapter.

The retourne of the people from captiuitie, The prosperite of the people of God, and aduision of their enemies, The pye of Babilon.

But the Lorde will be merciful vnto Jacob, and will take vp Israell agayne, and sette them in their owne lande. Strangers shall cleaue vnto them, and gette them to the house of Jacob. They shall take the people, and carpe them home with them. And the house of Israell shall haue them in possession for seruauntes and maydens in the lande of the Lord. * They shall take those prisoners, whose captiues they had bene before: and rule those that had oppressed them. When the Lorde now shall bring thee to reste, from trauaile, feare, and harde bondage that thou wast laden with all: Then shalt thou vse thys mockage vpon the kynge of Babilon, and saye: Howe happeneth it that the oppressoure leaueth of? Is the golden tribute come to an ende? Doubtes the Lorde hath broken the staffe of the bygodye, and the scepter of the Lordelye. Whiche when he is wrothe smitteth the people with durable strokes, and in his wonders he persecuteth them, and taketh them continuallye. And therefore the whole worlde is now at rest & quietnesse, and men singe for ioye.

Yea, euen the fyre trees and Cedres of Libanus reioyse at thy fall, sayinge: Howe that thou arte layd downe, there come no moore vnto destroye vs. Hell also trembleth at thy commynge, all myghtye men and Prynces of the earth, steppe forth before thee. All Kynges of the earth stande vnto their seates, that they maye all (one after another) synge and speake vnto thee. Art thou wounded also as we? Arte thou become lyke vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pryde is gone downe to hell: Mothes shall be layde vnder the, & wormes shall be thy couerynge.

* Howe arte thou fallen from heauen Luc x. c Isa. xli. d (O Lucifer) thou sayre mozynge chylder: Hast thou gotten a fall euen to the grounde, thou that (not withstandinge) dyddest subdue the people? And yet thou thoughtest in thine heart: I will clymbe vp into heauen, and make my seate aboue the starres of God, I will sytte vpon the glorious mounte towarde the Northe. I will clymbe vp aboue the cloudes, and will be lyke the hyghest of all. Yet dare I laye, that thou shalt be brought downe to the depe of hell. They that see the, shall narrowlye looke vpon thee, and thynke in them selues, sayinge: Is this the man, that broughte all landes in feare, and made the kyngdomes afrayed: Is thys he that made the worlde in a maner waste, and layde the cytyes to the grounde, whiche let not hys prisoners goe home.

Howe happeneth it, that the kynges of all people lye, euerye one at home in hys owne palace, wyth wurchyppe, and thou arte caste oute of thy graue lyke a wyldre braunche: lyke as dead mennes rayment that are rotte thowowe wyth the swerde: as they that goe downe to the stones of the depe: as a dead corse that is troden vnder fete: and arte not buryed with them: Euen bycause that thou haste wasted thy lande, and destroyed thy people. For the generacyon of the wycked shalbe without honoure, for euer. There shal a way be sought to destroy their chyldren, for their fathers wyckednesse: They shal not come vp agayne to possesse the lande, and fyll the worlde full of castels and townes.

I wyl stande vp agaynst them (sayeth the Lorde of Hostes) and roote oute the name and generacion of Babilon (sayeth the Lorde) and wyl geue it to the Otters, and wyl make water podels of it. And I wyl swepe them out wyth the besome of destruccion, sayeth the Lorde of Hostes. The Lorde of Hostes hath the sworne an othe, sayinge: It shal come to passe as I haue determined: and shalbe fulfilled as I haue deuysed. * The Assyrians shal be destroyed in my lande, and vpon my mountaynes wyl I treade them vnder fote. Where thowowe his pocke shal come from you, and hys burthen shalbe take from youre shoulders. Thys deuyce hath the God taken thowowe the whole worlde, and thus is hys hand stretched out ouer all people. For yf the Lorde of Hostes determen a thyng, who wyl dilaunle it? And yf he stretche forth hys hand, who wyl holde it in agayne?

The same yere that kyng Azbayed, God threathened by Claye on this maner. * Reioyse not (thou whole Palestina) as thoughe the rodde of hym that beateth the were broken, * for out of the serpent's rote, there shal waxe a kockatrice, and the fruyte shal be a scorpion. But the poze that fede of the best thynges, and the simple shal dwell in safetie. * Thy rootes wyl I destroy wyth hunger, and it shal claye thy remnaunte. ## The Notes.

- By the staffe is vnderstand tyrannye, and by the scepter, dominion.
- Whyle Nabuchodonozor and his chyldren lyued, the people were not onely oppressed, but also kynges and princes: But when they were oner rydde out of the way, then was miserie and waylinge ended. By the worlde he signifieth the common: and by fyggetrees and Cedres, the heades and rylars, as before in the. ii. c.
- That is, euen they that be in hell, wyl tremble when Nabuchodonozor cometh thither. It is figuratly spoken to the forther setting out of the mischefe of Nabuchodonozor.
- He compareth the deathe of Nabuchodonozor to the fallunge of Lucifer the morninge starre, whiche he calleth the childe of the morninge because it appeareth onely in the morninge. The meaninge is: No suche thyng ought to haue happened vnto the, that in earthe wast lyke the morninge starre, whiche no man can take out of heauen: And thou that wast so myghty, that thou destroyedest what people thou wouldest, and vnto whom it was a pastime to ouerthrowe nations, hast receyued such measure as thou broughdest. Suche a lyke thyng is there in Ezechie. xxviii. Agaynst the kyng Tyrius.

In their stretes were they gyrded aboute wyth sacke clothe. In all the toppes of their houses and stretes was there nothyng, but mournynge and wepyng. Helbon and Eleale cryed, that their voyce was hearde vnto Jahaz. The worthyes also of Moab bleared and cryed for bereppe sorowe of their myndes: Wo is my hearte for Moabs sake. They fledde vnto the cytye of Zoar, whiche is lyke a fayre fruitefull bulloke, they went vp to Luhith, wepyng. The waye toward Horonaim was full of lamentacion for the hurte. ## The. xvi. Chapter.

The destruction of Moab.

Athen sente the Lordes of the lande a man of warre, frome the rocke that lyeth towarde the deserte, a vnto the hyll of the doughter Sion (for as for the daughters of Moab, they were as it had bene a tremblyng byrde, that is putte out of her neste, by the fery of Arnon) whyche messaunger sayde: gather youte councell, come together, couer vs wyth youre shadowe in the myddaye, as the nyghte doeth: hyde the chafed, and bewraie not them that are fledde, lette the persecuted Moabites dwell amonge you, be oure open refuge agaynste the destroyer: for the aduersarye oppresseth vs, the robber vndoeth vs, and the tyrant dryueth vs out of oure lande. But the trone of youre kyngdome is full of grace, therefore he that sytterh vpon it with saythfulnesse and trueth in the house of Dauid, know the thyng, and doe hys diligence to helpe shortlye, accordyng to equite and ryghteousnes. * As for Moabs pryde (shall they answere) it is well known. And although they be excellent, proud, arrogant, and hve minded: Yet is their strengthe nothyng lyke. And therefore Moab complayneth vnto Moab, where thowowe they come al to mourne: and nowe that they be smytten, they take their deuyce benethe by the bycke wall, and make their complaynte.

The suburbs also of Hesebon were made waste, and the Prynces of the Gentyles hewed downe the vyneyardes of Sibma, whiche were planted wyth noble grapes, and spred vnto Jazer, and wente vnto the ende of the deserte whose braunches stretched their selues forth beyonde the sea. Therefore I mourned for Jazer, and for the vineyardes of Sibma with great sorowe I poured my teares vpon Hesebon and Eleale, for all their songes were layde downe, in their haruest and gatherynge of their grapes: Myrth and chere was gone oute of the felde and vineyardes, in so muche, that no man was glad nor songe. There went no treader into the wynepresse, their mery chere was layde downe. Wherefore my bely roimbled (as it hadde bene a lute) for Moabs sake, and myne inwarde membres, for the brickwalles sake. for it happened thus also: when Moab sawe that she was turned bpsyde downe: She went by an hye into her Sanctuarie, to make her prayer there, * but she myghte not be helped. Thys is the deuyce, whiche the Lorde tooke in hande at that tyme agaynste Moab. But nowe the Lorde sayeth thus: In thre yere shall the power of Moab with their pompe (whyche is greate) be minished, lyke as the burthen of an hyred seruaunte. And as for the remnaunte of them, they shall be lesse then a fewe, and not reckened muche worthe.

the glorie of the children of Israel, sayeth the Lorde of Hostes. At that tyme also shall the glorie of Jacob be verpe in haruest, whiche cutteth hys hand ful with the sickle, and whē one gathereth the sheaves together in the valleie, of a Raphaim, there remayneth yet some eares ouer. * Or as when one maketh an olyue tree, whiche syndeth but two or thre olyue berpes aboue in the top, and foure or fyue in þe braunches. Thus the Lorde God of Israell hath spoken.

Then shall man conuerte agayne vnto hys maker, and turne his eyes to the holye one of Israel. And shall not turne to the aulters that are the woorkes of hys owne handes, neyther shall he loke feare of the chyldren of Israel.

So shalt thou (O Damascus) be desolate bycause thou hast forgotten God thy sauoure, and hast not cal-

Wo be to the myltitude of muche

they flee farre of, and banysh away lyke

Then shal Israel with honoure be the thyrde to Egypte and Assur. And the Lorde of Hostes shal blesse them, sayinge: Blessed is my people of the Egyptians, Assur is þ worke of my handes, but Israel is myne ens herytaunce.

The Notes.

a. To ryde vpon a swyfte cloude is, to biset and punish quickelye with expedition: as the cloudes go swyfly in the ayre from region to region.

b. The water of the sea shalbe drawen out. <sup>ec. Egypte</sup> (as stories shewe) receaueth no rayne forthe of the ayre, but is ouerflowed with the water Nilus at certayne tymes. <sup>xlvi. xv. oz. xvi. cubites</sup> highe from the grounde. For yf it increaseth to any lesse highth, þ countre escapeth not a darrth, sayeth Plinius. And therefore by the scarcenesse & wante of water is the desolacion of the lande described. Nilus is here called by diuers names, some time the sea, some tyme ryuers, some tyme welles, some tyme poundes, &c. For that floude runneth. <sup>bit. sondrye wayes</sup>, and it is called the sea, not onely because the Hebrewes cal al congregacions of waters the sea, generallpe: but also bycause it was of old time a constant opinion after stories, that it hath his original beginninge from the Ocean sea. Ye may also vnderstand by the drines of Nilus, that it not ouerflowed the lande contrary to the olde accustomed maner thereof. Some had leue haue this to be figurately applyed. As there be certayne waters of the gospel, whiche the holy gost geueth, so are there also y<sup>e</sup> troublous waters of Egypt, that is, of worldly doctrine. Therefore when the worde of God is ones hearde, those waters drie vp. For the holy ghost reprehendeth the world of sinne, and openeth and declareth the workes of darckenes. In these waters do rede & ruth growe, that is, bayne and trydunge woorkes such as are the workes of hypocrites, which after the outwarde shewe and appareance seeme grene and freshe, but are within bayne and nought worthe.

And so he dyd, goynge naked and barefote. Then sayde the Lorde: where as my seruauant Elay goeth naked and barefote, it is a token and signyfyenge of the thing, that after thre yere shal come vpon Egypte & Ethiopia. For euen thus shal the kyng of the Assyrians dyue bothe younge & olde, as prisoners naked and barefote, out of Egypt, and Ethiopia. And shal discouer the shame of Egypte. They shalbe also at their wyltes ende, & ashamed one of another: the Egyptians of the Mozyans, and y<sup>e</sup> Mozyans of the Egyptians, at y<sup>e</sup> syghte of their glorie. Moreover they y<sup>e</sup> dwell in the Isles shal see euen the same daye: Beholde, thys is our hope, to whome we fledde to seke helpe, that we myghte be delyuered from the kyng of the Assyrians. Howe wyll we escape?

Who so maye disceane (sayde the voyce) let hym disceane: Who so maye destroye, lette hym destroye. Up Elam, besege it O Madaia, for I wyll styll all their gronnynges. Wyth thys the reynes of my backe were full of payne: Panges came vpon me, as vpon a woman in her trauayle: When I herde it, I was abashed: And when I looked vp, I was a frayde: myne hearte panted, I trembled for feare. The darckenesse made me fearfull in my mynde.

Yea, soone make redy the table (sayde this voyce) kepe the watche, cate and dyncke: Up ye Captaynes, take you to youre wynde, for thus the Lorde hath charged me: goe thy waye, & set a watchman, y<sup>e</sup> he maye tel what he seyth. And when he had wayted diligently, he sawe two horse men: the one rydyinge vpon an Asse, the other vpon a Camel. And the Lyon cryed: Lorde, I haue stande waytyng all the whole daye, & haue kepte my watche all the nyghte. Wyth that came there one rydinge vpon a charret, whiche answered, & sayde: *Babilon is fallen, she is tourned vpon syde downe, and all the ymages of her Goddes are smytten to the grounde. A propheeye agaynst Ierusalem.

In the heuie burthen vpon the a valley of visions. What hast thou there to doe, that thou clymmeest vp in to the house toppe, O thou cytpe of miracles, sedicious and wyllfull? Seynge, thy slayne men are neither kylled wyth swerde, nor dead in batel: for al thy captaynes gat them to their horses from the ordinaunce, yea they are al together tydden awaye, and fledde farre of. When I perceived that, I sayde: * awaye fro me, þe I may wepe bytterlye. Take no labour for to comfort me, as touchynge the destruction of my people. For this is the daye of the Lord of hostes, wherin he wyl plage, treade downe, & wede out the valley of visions, & breake downe the walles, with suche a cracke, that it shall geue a lownde in the mountaynes.

I sawe the Elamites take the quyuers to carre & to horse, & þe walles were bare from harnesse. Thy goodlye valleyes were full of charettes, þe horsemen made them soone to besege the gates. Then was the couerynge of Iuda put from thence, and then was sene the siege of the tymbre house. There shall ye see the ryftes in the walles of the cytpe of Dauid, whereof there shalbe manye. Ye shall gather together the waters of the lower pole, and tel the houses of Ierusalem, and breake of some of them to kepe the walles. And ye shall make a pit betwyxte the two walles of the water of the olde pole, & nothyng regarde him, þe tooke it in hande, & made it. And at the same tyme shal the Lord of hostes call men to wepinge, mourninge, to baldnes & putting on of sack cloth. But they to fulfyl their lust & wyllfulnes, laugh ter oren: they kill shepe, they eate costlye meate, and drincke wine, * lette vs eate and drincke, to morow we shal dye. Nevertheless when the Lord of hostes hearde of it, he sayde: Yea, yf this wickednes of youres shall be remitted, ye muste dye for it. This hathe the Lord God of hostes spoken.

Thus sayeth the Lord God of hostes: Goe in to the treasure of * Sobna the gouernoure, and saye vnto hym: What haste thou here to doe? and from whence comest thou: that thou hast made the a graue here? for he had caused a costly tombe of stone to be made for him selfe, and a place to lye in to be hewen out of a rocke. Beholde, the Lord shall cast the out by violence, he wyl decke the of another fashon, and putte vpon the a straunge clothe. He shall carpe the into a fatte countreye, lyke a ball with his handes. There shalt thou dye, there shall the pompe of thy charettes haue an ende: Thou villeyne of the house of the Lord: I wyl shutte the out of thyne office, and put the from thyne estate.

After this wyl I call my seruante Eliakim, the sonne of Helkiah, and arape him with thy cote, and gyrd him with thy girdle, and I wil geue thy power into his hande. He shall be a father of the citezens of Ierusalem, and of the kyntede of Iuda: * I wyl also laye the kepe of Dauids house vpon his shoulders, & yf he open, no man shal shut: and yf he doe shut, no man shal open. * I wil fasten him to a nayle in the place of the moste hyghe faythfulnesse, and he shall be vpon the glorious trone of hys fathers house. They shall hange vpon him all the glory of hys fathers house, of the children and childrens children, all apperell small and great, al instrumentes of measure, & musike. This shal come to passe (sayeth the Lord of hostes) when the nayle that is fastened to the place of the hygheest faythfulnesse, shalbe pluckt of. And when the weyght that hangeth vpon it, shall fall, be broken, and hewen and. 27. 28.

A heuy burthen vpon * Tyus. Mourn ye shyppes of Charlis, for she is throwen downe to the ground, and conquered of them that are come from Cethim. The indwellers of the Ylandes, the marchautes of Sidon, and they that occupied the sea (of whom thou wast full somtyme) are at a poynte. For by sea were their frutes brought vnto the, and all maner of corne by water. Thou wast the comen market of al people. Sidon is sorre for it, yea and the power of the sea complayneth, and sayeth: O that I had neuer traueled with chyldre, that I had neuer borne any, that I had neuer noursched bove, nor broughte vnto my daughter. As soone as Egypte perceaueth it, she will be as sorre as Tyus it selfe. So ouer the sea, mourn ye that dwell in the Isles. Is not that the glorious cytie, which hath bene of longe antiquite: whose natives dwelling far of, commende her so greatlye? Who hath deuised suche thynges vpon Tyus the crowne of all cyties, whose marchautes & Captaynes were the hyghest and principal of the world: Euen the Lorde of Hostes hath deuised it, that he maye put downe al pompe, & minishe al glorye of the world. So thow we thy laude (O thou daughter of the sea) as men go ouer the water, * and there is not a gyrdell more.

Job. xii. b.

Dani. ii. c.

Thus the Lorde * that remoueth the kyngdomes, and hath taken in hande agaynst that myghtie Canaan to rote it out: hath stretched out his hande ouer the sea, and sayde: from hence forth shalt thou make no more myrth (O thou daughter of Sydon:) for thou shalt be put downe of the Cethens. Stande by therefore, and go where the enemye will carpe thee, wherethou shalt also haue no rest.

Beholde (for thyne ensample). The Chaldees were suche a people, that no manne was lyke them, Assur buylded them: he set by his castels and palaces, and broke them downe agayne. And therfore mourn (ye shippes of the sea, for your power shalbe throwen downe.

After that, shal the lxx. yeares of Tyus (euen as longe as their kynges life was) be forgottē. And after lxx. yerres, it shal happen to Tyus as wyth an harlot that playeth vpon a lute. Take thy lute (saye men to her) and go aboute the cytye, thou arte yet an vknownen wenche, make pastyme wyth dyuerse balettes, wherby thou mayest come into acquaintaunce. Thus shal it happen after lxx. yeares. The Lorde shal byset the cytye of Tyus, and it shal come agayne to her marchaundysse, and shal occupie wyth all the kyngedomes that be in the worlde. * But all her occupynge and wyngynge shal be hallowed vnto the LORDE. For then shal they laye by nothyng, behynde them nor by heapes: but the marchaundysse of Tyus shal belonge vnto the cytezynes of the Lorde, to the feadyng and susteynyng of the hungry, and to the clothyng of the aged.

The Notes.

a. Some reade: into Tharus. He speaketh vnto the marchautes of Egypt and to the marchautes of the Isles that they shoulde get them to Tharus, because Tyus is destroyed.

b. He meaneth Tyus, which standeth in the sea.

The. xxiii. Chapter.

A prophesie vpon the tribulacion that shal fall vpon the world, because of synne

Beholde, the Lorde shal wast and plage the world, he shal make the face of the earth desolate, and scatce abroad the inhabytants therof. * Then shal the priest be as the people, the master as the seruaunt, the dame like the mayde the seller lyke the buyer, he shal lend vnto bysury, lyke vnto him that borroweth vpon bysury, the creditoure, as the detter. Yea, miserably shal the world be wasted and cleane destroyed. For the Lorde hath so determed in him selfe. tonaught. For the earth is corrupte of her indwellers.

B For why they haue offended þ lawe, chaunged the ordynaunces, and made the euerlastyng testament of none effect. And therfore shal the curse deuoure the earth: for they that dwell thereon haue spined, wherfore they shalbe bzent also, and those that remaine, shalbe very fewe. The swete wyne shall mourne, the grapes shalbe weake, and all that haue bene merry in hert, shal sygh. * The myrth of tabyettes shalbe layde downe, the chere of the toyfull shal cease, and þ pleasure of lutes shal haue an ende: there shal no more wyne be droncke w myrthe, the beere shal be bytter to them that dryncke it, the wycked cyties shalbe broken downe, al houses shalbe shut, that no man maye come in.

In the stretes shal there be lyft bp a crye because of wyne, all mennes chere shal vanishe awaye, and all ioye of the earth shal passe. Desolacyon shal remaine in the cyties, and the gates shalbe smytten with wastnesse. For it shal happen vnto all landes and vnto al peo-

C ple, lyke as when a man synneth downe the * oliues, that are left vpon the tree: or seketh after grapes, when the wyne gatheryng is out. And those same (that remaine) shal lyft bp their voyce, and be gladd, & shal magnifie the glozve of the Lorde, euen from the sea, & prayse the name of þ Lord God of Israell, in the valers and floudes. We heare songes songe to the prayse of the ryghtuous, from all the endes of the worlde. Therfore I must speake: O myne vnfutefulnesse, O my pouerte. Wo is me all is full of synners, whiche offende of purpose and malice. And therfore (O thou that dwellest vpon the earth) there is at hande for the, feare, pyt and snare.

Iere. 48 f. * Who so escapeth the terrible crye, shal fall into the pyt. And yf he come oute of the pyt, he shalbe taken with the snare. For the wyndowes aboue shal be opened, and the foundacyon of the earth shal moue.

D The earth shal geue a greate cracke, it shal haue a soore ruyne, and take an horrible fall. The earth shal stacker lyke a droncken man, and be taken awaye lyke a tente. Her mysdoedes shal lye so heuy vpon her, that she must fall, and neuer ryse bp agayne. At the same tyme shal the Lorde mustre together the hye hooste aboue, and the kyniges of the worlde vpon the earth. These shal be coupled together as prysoners be, and shalbe shut in one ward and punished innumerable dayes. * The Moone and the Sunne shal be alhamed, when the Lord of Hostes shal rule theym at Ierusalem vpon the mounte Sion, before and wyth hys excellent councell.

The xxv. Chapter.

A thankesguyng to God for his workes.

Lord, thou art my God, I wyl prayse the, & magnifie thy name: for thou bringest maruelous thynges to passe, accordyng to thyne olde counceils, truly and iteaciully. * Thou makest of townes, heapes of stone: and of head cyties, broken walles: The places of the wicked destroyest thou out of the cite, that they shal neuer be builded againe. Therefore the very rude people must magnifye the cities of the cruel hethen must feare the. For þ art þ poore mans helpe, a strength for þ neadfull in his necessitye. Thou art a defence agaynste euil wether, a shadow agaynste the hete. But vnto the presumptuous, thou arte lyke a stronge whyrle wynde, that casteth downe the boastying of the vngodly: thou kepest men from heate, with the shadowe of the clowdes, thou cuttest off the braunches of tyrauntes.

Howeouer the Lord of Hostes shal once prepare * a feast for all people vpon the hyll: A plenteous, costlye, pleasaunt feast, of fat and well fedde bestes, of swete and moiste pure thynges. vpon the hyll shal he take awaye the side vale that hangeth befoze the face of all the people, and the couerynge wherewith all Gentyles are couered. * As for death, he shall viterly consume it. * The Lorde God shall wype awaye the teares from all faces, and take awaye the confusyon of hys people thozowe the whole worlde. For the Lorde hym selfe hath sayde it.

D At the same tyme shall it be sayde lo, this is oure God in whom we put oure trust, and he * hath healed vs. Thys is the Lorde that we haue wayted for: Let vs reioyce and delite in his health. For the hande of the Lorde ceaseth vpon this hyl. But Moab shall be thershen down vnder him, like as y straw is troden vnder fete in a dong hyl. For he shall stretche out his handes vpon him, like as a swimmer doth to swimme. And with the power of hys handes shall he cast downe hys hie pompe. As for hys stronge holdes and hie walles: he shall bowe them, caste them downe, and sell them to the grounde in to dust.

The Notes

a. By the feast of fat and well fedde beastes, and of swete and most pure thynges, is betokened the anger and indignacyon of God, as the scripture doth often sygnifie the same, vnder the name of a cuppe. zach. xii. a. Beholde I wyl make Ierusalem a cuppe of swete vnto all the people that are rounde aboute her.

b. By the hyl is meant the hyl of Syon, by which is figured the churche. There wyl the Lorde iudge, and deliuer vs from all our enemies. By the vale and coueryng, vnderstande, synne, wher in all men are founde gyltye. Romano. iii. Al me haue synned. &c. steth them to the ground, yea, euen into the myze, that they maye be troden vnder the fete of the symple, & with the stepes of the poze. * Thou (LORD) considrest the path of the rightuous, whether it be tyght, whether y way of the rightuous be tyght. Therefore (LORD) we haue a respect vnto y way of thy iudgemetes, thy name & thy remembraunce reioyse the soule. * My soule lusteth after the al the nyght longe, and my mynde hasteth freely to the. For as soone as thy iudgemēt is knowne to the worlde, then the inhabitants of the earth letne tyghtuousnes. But the vngodly, though he haue receaued grace, yet letneth he not rightuousnesse, but in that place where he is punished, he offendeth, and feareth not the glozy of the Lorde.

Lorde, they wyl not se thyne hie hande, but they shall se it, and be confounded: when thou shalt deuoure them with the wrathe of the people, and wyth the fyze of thyne enemies. But vnto vs, O Lorde, prouyde for peace; * for thou workest in vs all our workes. O Lorde oure God, though he suche Lordes haue domynacyon vpon vs as know not the: yet graunte, that we maye hope onelye in the, and kepe thy name in remembrance.

* The malycyous tyrantes when they dye, are nether in lyfe, nor in the resurrection, for thou bysytest them, and rotest them out, and destroyest all the memorial of them. Agayne, thou increasest the people, thou shalt be praysed and magnified in all y endes of the worlde. * The people that seke vnto the in trouble, that same aduersite which they complayne of, is vnto them a chastening befoze the. Lyke as * a wyfe with chyld (when her trauaile commeth vpon her) is ashamed, creteth, and suffreth y paine. Euen so are we, O LORDE, in thy syght. We are wyth chyld, * we trauayle, and beare, and with the spyte we byynge forth health, wher thozowe the earth is vnderstroyed, and the inhabitants of the worlde perishe not.

* But as for thy dead men and outes, that be departed, they are in lyfe and resurrection. They lye in the earth, they wake, and haue soye: for thy dewe is a dewe of lyfe and lyghte. But the place of the malicious tyrantes is fallen a-

I greatly forgettyng all faythfulnesse, should burne it vp at once with thornes and bushes? Or who wyl enforce me to kepe or make peace: * It wyl come to this poynte, that Jacob shalbe rote dgayne, and Israel shalbe grene, & beare with their frute. Smyteth he not hys smyter, as euell as he is smytten hymself: Destroyeth he not the murtherers, as he is murdered? Euery man recompenseth with the measure that he receaueth: He miseth vpon his soze wynd, as vpon the dayes of extream heate. And therfore shall the inquite of Jacob be thus reconcyled. And so shall he take away al the frute of his synnes.

As for aulter stones, he shall make them al as stones beaten to poulder: the groues and Idols shal not stand. The stronge cyties shal be desolate, and the layze cyties shal be leste lyke a wyldernes. The catell shal fede & lye there, and the shepe shal eate it vp. * Their haruest shalbe bzent, they wyues whiche were their bewty when they came forth: shall be despled. * For it is a people woute vnderstandynge, and therfore he,
that created them, shal not fauour the:
and he that made them shal not be mercyfull to them. In that tyme shall the Lorde shutte from the swyfte water of Euphrates, vnto the ryuer of Egypte.
And there shal the chylzen be chose out one by one. Then shall the great trom-pet be blowen, so that those which haue bene destroyed in the Assyrians lande, come well in a mans hande.

And then shall the Lorde of hostes be a b ioyfull crowne, and a gloriuous garland vnto the remnant of hys people. Vnto the lowly, he shall be a spryte of iudgemente, and vnto theym that dyue awaye the enemyes frome the gates, he shall be a spryte of strength. But they go wronge by the reason of wyne, they fall & staker because of stronge drinke.

Elay. 31. c. * Yea euen the Priestes and Prophetes them selues go amysse, they are dronken wyth wyne, and weake brayned thowse stronge dryncke. They erre in seynge, and in iudgement they fayle.

For all tables are so ful of vompte and fylthynesse, that no place is cleane.

Elay. 2. a Math. 23. a What is he amonge them, that canne teache, instructe or enfourme the chyl- dzen, whiche are weened from sucke or taken frome the brestes: of anye other fashyon then? * Commaunde that may be commaunded, byd that maye be bid- den, forbydde that maye be forbydden, kepe backe that maye be kepte backe,

Therfore sayeth the LORD

Isal. 28. f. Rom vi. d. 1. Pet. ii. a Luck. 2. b GOD: Scholde, * I wyll laye a stone in Syon, a greate stone, a costly & cor- ner stone for a sure foundacyon: h who so putteth his truste in hym, shall not be confounded. Ryghtuousnes wyll I set vp agayne in the balaunce, and iud- gement in the weightes. * The tempest (2. Cor. 13. a) of hayle shall take awaye youre refuge, that ye haue to dysceane wythall: and the ouerflowynge waters shall breake down your strong holdes of dissimula- cion. Thus the appoyntment that ye haue made wyth death, shall be done awaye: and the condycyon that ye made wyth hell, shall not stande. When the great destruction goeth thorow, it shall all to treade you. It shall take you quit awaye before it. For it shall go forth early in the mornynge, and continue on- lye that daye and that nyghte. And the very feare onely shall teache you, when ye heare it. For the bed shall be so narrow that a man can not lye vpon it: And the couerynge to smal, that a man may not wynde him selfe therin. * For the Lorde shall steppe forth as he dyd vpon the mount * Berazim, and shall take on as (2. Cor. 36. f) he dyd vpon the dale of Gibeō: that he maye brynge forth the hys deuycce, * hys straunge deuycce: and fulfyll his worke, his wonderfull worcke. And therfore make no mockes at it, that your capti- uite increase not: for I haue hearde the Lorde of hostes saye, that there shall come a soden destructio and plage vp- on the whole earth. Take hede, and heare my voyce, pondre and mercke my wordes well. Goeth not the husbande man euer in due season earnestly to his lande: he moweth and ploweth hys grounde to sowe. And when he hath made it playne, he soweth it wyth set- ches or comyn. He soweth the wheate and Barly in theyr place, Milium and Rye also in theyr place. And that he maye do it ryght, his God teacheth him and sheweth hym. For he treadeth not the fytches out with a wayne, ne- ther bryngeth he the cart here and there ouer the comyn, but he thresteth the fit- ches oute with a flayle, and the comyn with a rod. As for the wheate, he gryn- deth it to make breade therof. In as muche as he can not brynge it to passe with treading out, for nether the bro- synge that the carte wheles make, nor his beastes can grynde it. This & suche lyke thynges come of the Lorde of ho- stes whiche is maruelous in counsell, and great in rightuousnes.

The xxxix. Chapter.

The destruction of Ierusalem. Agaynst the commaundementes of men.

Woe be vnto the O Ariel, thou cite that * David wan. Take yet some yeares, and let some feastes yet passe ouer: then shall Ariel be beseged, so that he shall be heuy and sorowful, & shall be vnto me euen as a lyon. For I wyl laye sege to thee rounde aboute, & kepe thee in with towers, & graue by dikes agaynst the. And thou shalt be brought low, and speake out of the earth, and thy wordes shall go humbly out of the ground. Thy voyce shall come out of the earthe, lyke the voyce of a wytych, and thy talkynge shall groane out of the myre. For the multitud of thyne<sup>a</sup> enemyes shall be like mealdust. <sup>b</sup> And the nobre of Tyrantes shall be as the * dust that the winde taketh awaye sodenlye. Thou shalt be bysyt of the Lorde of hostes wyth thondre, earthquake, and wyth a great cracke, with the whyrle winde, tempest, and with the flambe of a consumynge fyre. But nowe the myltitude of all the people, that wente oute agaynst Ariel: the whole hoste, the stronge holdes, and sege: is lyke a * dreame which appeareth in y<sup>e</sup> nyght. It is lyke as when Can hungry man dreameth that he is eatynge, and when he awaketh, he hath nothinge: lyke as when a thyrstye man dreameth that he is drynckynge, and when he awaketh, he is saynte, and hys soule vnpacient.

So is the multitude of all people that mustre them selues agaynst the hill of Sion. But ye shall be at youre wyttes ende, ye shall be abashed: ye shall stackre, and rele to and fro. <sup>c</sup> Ye shall be droncken, but not of wyne. Ye shall fall, but not thowowe dronckenes: For the Lord shall geue you an harde slepyng sprete, and holde downe youre eyes: namelye youre Prophetes and heades whych shoulde se, them shall he couer. * And all visions shall be vnto you, as the wordes that stande in a sealed lettre, when one offreth it to a man that is learned, and sayeth: reade vs this lettre. Then he answereth: I can not reade it, for it is shut. But if it be geuen to one that is not learned, or sayd vnto him: reade this lettre: Then sayeth he: I can not reade.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: For * so muche as this people draweth nye me with their mouth, and prayseth me hyghly wth their lyppes (where as they hert neuertheles is farre frome, and the feare whiche they owe vnto me, y<sup>e</sup> turne they to mennes lawes and doctrynes) therefore wyl I also shewe vnto this people a maruelous, terrible, and great thing. (Namely this:)* I wyl destroy the wysedome of their wise, and the vnderstandynge of their learned men shall perishe. <sup>d</sup> Woe be vnto them that seke so depe, to hyde theyr ymagynacion before the Lorde, which reherse their counsels in the darknes, and say: * who seyth vs, or who knoweth vs: Which ymagynacyon of yours is euen as when the potters clay taketh aduysenēt, as though the worke myght saye to the worckmaster: make me not, or as when an erthen vessell sayeth of the pottre: he vnderstandeth not. <sup>e</sup> Se ye not that it is harde by, that Libanus shall be turned into Charnel, and that Charnel shall be taken as a wodde: Then shall deafe men vnderstand the wordes of the booke, and the eyes of the blynde shall see without any cloude or darcknesse. The oppressed shall hold a mery feast in the Lord, & the poze people shall reioyse in the holy one of Israel.

Then shall the furiuous people cease, and the mockers shall be putte away, and all they that do wronge shall be plucked

Ye shalbe feble, & fall as ye go, ye shalbe remagates for the confusyon, feare, harte and persecucion of al men: not for drunkennes or stronge dryncke, which ye shall want. ## The xxx. Chapter.

A curse agaynst them that forsake the counsell of God, and speke vnto the counsell of men. He threatneth the rest of the people, which after the destruc-cion of Ierusalem went into Egypt.

W be to those synning children (saith the Lord) * which seke counsell, but not at me: which take a webbe in hand, but not after my wyl: that they maye heape one synne vpon another. They go downe into Egypt, and aske me no counsell, to seke helpe at the power of Pharaō, and comforte in the shadowe of the Egypciens. But Pharaos helpe shalbe your confusyon, and the comforte in the Egypciens shadowe shall be your owne shame. Your rulers haue bene at Ioan, & your messengers came vnto Hanes. * But ye shall all be ashamed of the people that maye not helpe you, whiche shall not bynge you strengthe or comfort, but shame and confusyon.

Therfore I tolde you also that your pryde shoulde haue an ende. * Wherefore go hence and wryte theym this in theyr tables, and note it in a booke: that it maye remayne by their posterite, & be styll kept. ¶ He curseth them that forsake God, and seake for the helpe of men.

cause they bee lustye and stronge. But they regarded not the holy one of Israel, and they aske no question at the Lorde. Where as he neuertheles plaggeth the wicked, and yet goeth not from his worde, when he steppeth forth, and taketh y victory against the house hold of the froward, & agaynst the helpe of euell doers. Powe the Egyptians are men, and not God, and their horses flesh and not spirite. And as soone as the Lorde stretcheth oute his hande, then shall the helper fall, and he that shoulde haue bene helped, and shall altogether be destroyed. For thus hath the Lorde spoken vnto me: * Lyke as the lyon or tygrys whelpes roareth vpon the praye that he hath gotten, and is not afrayed thowge the multitude of the shepards cry oute vpon hym, neyther abashed for all the heape of them: So shall the Lorde of Hostes come downe from the mount of Syon, and defende hys hyll. Lyke as byrdes flote aboute theyr nestes * so shall the Lorde of Hostes kepe, saue, defende and deliuer Jerusalem. There fore, O ye chyldren of Israel, turne agayne, lyke as ye haue exceded in your goinge backe. * For in that daye euerye man shall caste oute his Idols of siluer and golde, whiche ye haue made with youre synfull handes. * * Assur also shall bee slayne with the swerde, not with a mans swerd. A swerd shall deuoure him, but not a mans swerd. And he shall sle the slaughter, and his seruantes shall be taken prysoners. He shall go for feare to his strong holdes, and his Princes shall sle frome hys badger. This hath the Lorde spoken, whose lyght burneth in Syon, and his fyre in Jerusalem.

The. xxxii. Chapter.

Holde, the kynge shall gouerne after the rule of rightuousnes, and the princes shall rule according to the balaunce of equite. He shall be vnto meene, as a defence for the wynde, and as a refuge for the tempest, like as a riuer of water in a thursty place, and the shadowe of a greates rocke in a drye lande. The eyes of the seing shall not be dymme, and the eares of them that heare, shall take diligent hede. The heart of the vnwise, shall attayne to knowledge, and the vnpartite tounge shall speake playnely and distinctly. Then shall the nygarde be no more called gentle, nor the churle lyberall. But the churle shall be churlesly mynded, & his hert shall worke euyl, and playe the hypocrite, and imagyn abhominacions agaynst God, to make the hungry leane, and to wythholde drynke from y thursty: These are the perelous weapens of the couetous, these be his shamefull counsels: that he maye begyle the poore with disceatfull workes, yea euen there as he shoulde geue sentence wyth the poore. * But the lyberall person ymagineth honest thynges, and commeth vp with honesty.

Up (ye ryche & ydle cyties,) harken vnto my voyce. Ye carelesse cyties, marke my wordes. After yeares and daies shall ye be brought in feare, O ye carelesse cyties. For earnest shall be out, & y grape gathering shall not come. O ye rich & dell cyties, ye that feare no perill, ye shall be abashed and remoued: when ye se the barennesse, the nakednesse and preparation to warre. Ye shall knocke vpon youre brestes, because of the pleasaunt felde, and because of the frutefull vyneyard. My peoples felde shall byynge thornes and thystels, for in euery house is voluptuousnes: & in the cyties: wylfulness. The palaces also shall be broke, and the greatie occupied cyties desolate. The towers and bulwarkes shall become dennes for euermore, the pleasure of Pules shall be turned to pasture for shepe: vnto the tyme that the spere be powred vpon vs from aboue.

Then shall the wyldernes be a fruteful felde, and the plenteous felde shall be reckened for a wodde. Then shall equite dwell in the deserte, & ryghtuousnes in a frutefull lande. * And the rewarde of ryghtuousnesse shall be peace, and his frute rest and quietnesse for euer. * And my people shall dwell in the pynes of peace, in my tabernacle and pleasure where there is ynough in them all. And when the hayle falleth, it shall fall in the wodde and in the cytie. O howe happye shal ye be, when ye shal safely soue your fode besyde all waters and dryue thy-ther the fete of your oxen and asses.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Ther is agaynst the Assyrians A descreypon of them that shall be the Lorde.

Herfore wo be vnto the (O robber) shalte not thou be robbed also: and vnto the that latest wait, as who saye there shoulde no wayte be layed for the: wo vnto the which doest hurte, * euen so shalt thou be hurt also.
And as thou layest wayte, so shal waite be layed for the also.

Lorde be merciful vnto vs, we wait for the. Thyne atime is at a poynt to bi-set vs, * but be thou our health in tyme of trouble. Graunt that the people may ste at the anger of thy voyce, and that at thyne vpslandyng the Genyis may be scattered abroad, and that a theyr spoyle maye be gathered, as the greshoppers are comenlye gathered together in to the pyt. Stande vp Lorde, thou that dwellest on hye: Let Sion be filled with equite & ryghtuousnesse. Let truth and faithfulnes be i hir time: power, health, wysdō, knowledge & p feare of God are hir treasure. Behold, their aunghels cry without, the messangers of peace wepe bitterlye. The stretes are waste, there walketh no man therein, the appoyntement is broken, the cities are dyspyled, they are not regarded, p desolate earth is in heupnes. Libanus taketh it but for a spoyle, that it is hewen downe: Sa-ron is lyke a wyldernes: Basan & Chamil are turned vpsyde downe. And therfore sayeth the Lorde. I wyll vp, nowe wil I get vp, now wil I arise. * Ye shal conceque stubble, & beare straw, & pour spirete shal be the fyre, & it may consume you: and the people shal bee burnt lyke lyme, & as thornes burne that are hewen of, and caste in the fyre.

Nowe herken to, ye that are farre of howe I do with them, and consyde my gloype, ye that be at hande. The synners at Sion are afrayd a sodane fear:
fulnesse is come vpon the ypocrites.
What is he amonge vs (saye they) that will dwell by that consumyng fyre: whiche of vs maye abyde that euerla-lyfe (saye I) and speaketh the truth:

He that abhorreth to do violence and dysceate: he that kepeth his hande that he touche no rewarde: whiche stoppeth his eares, that he heare no counsell a-gainste the innocente: whiche holdeth downe his eyes, that he se no euell. He it is, that shall dwel on hye whose saue-garde shal be in the true rocke, to hym shal be geuen the righte true meate and drynke. Hys eyes shall see the kinge in his gloype: and in the wide worlde, and his herte shal delpt in the feare of God.

* What shall then become of the scribe of the Senatour: what of him that tra-cheth chylozen? There shalte thou not se a people of a straunge tynge to haue so diffused a language, that it maye not be vnderstande: neyther so straunge a speache but it shal be preceaued.

There shal Sion be sene, the heade cittie of our solempne feastes. Ther shal thyne eyes se Jerusalem that glorious habitacon: the * tabernacle that neuer shal remoue, whose nayles shall neuer be taken out wold without ende, whose coardes enerychone shall neuer corrupte: for the glorious Maste of the Lorde shall there be presente amonge vs. In that place, where sayre broade ryuers and streames are, shall neyther Galey row, nor great shyp satle. For the Lorde shal be oure capteyne, the * Lorde shal be oure lawe gener. The Lorde shal be oure kynge, and he hym selfe shal be oure Sauoure. There are the coardes so layde abroade, that they can not be better: The masse set vp of suche a fa-shyon, that no banner nor layle hangeth therō: but there is dealed great spoyle,

The laste destruction of the Synagoge, in which the kyngdome and patriarche of that people was translated to the churche and congregation of Chyrlie.

Come ye Heathen and heare, take hede ye people. Herken ye earthe and al that is therein: thou rounde compasse and all that groweth there vpon, for the Lorde is angrie with all people, and his displeasure is kindled against all the multitude of them, to curse them, and to slepe them. So that their flaine shalbe cast oute, and their bodyes styncke: that euen the very hilles shalbe wet with the bloude of them. * All the starres of heauen shalbe consumed, & the heauen shall folde together like a rol, and al the starres therof shal fall, lyke as the leaues fall from the bynes and sygetrees. For my swerde (saith he) shalbee bathed in heauen, & shal immediatly come downe vpo Idumea, & vpon y people which I haue cursed for my vengeance.

And the Lordes swerde shalbee full of bloude, and be rusty with the farnesse and bloude of lambes and gootes. with the farnesse of the kydneyes of wethers. For the Lorde shal kyll a greate offering in Bosra, and in the lande of Idumea. There shall the Unicornes falle with the Bulles, (that is with the grauntes) & their land shalbe washed with blood, and their grounde corrupte with farnesse. * Unto the also (O Syon) shall come the daye of the vengeance of God, and the yeaere when thyne owne Iudgementes shalbee recompensed. Thy floundes shalbee turned to pytche, and thyne earth to bymstone, and there with shall the lande be kyndled, so that it shall not be quenched daye nor night: But smoke euermore, and so forth to lie wast. And nomā shal go thorow thy land for euer: * But Pellicanes, Storke, great Dules, and Rauens shal haue it in possession, and dwell therein.

For God shall sprede oute the lyne of desolacyon vpon it, and wepe it with the stones of emptynes. When kinges are called vpon, there shalbe none, and all princes shalbe awaye. Thornes shal growe in theyr palaces, nettelles and thystles in their strong holdes, that the dragons may haue theyr pleasure therein, and y they may be a court for Estriches. Ther shal straunge visures & monstrous beastes mete one another, & the wilde kepe company together. * There shal y Lamialye, & haue her lodginge. There shal the hedghoge builde, digge, be there at home, and byrnyngge forthe his young ones. There shal the kytes come together, eche one to his lyke.

* Seke thorow the scripture of the Lorde and rede it. * There shall none of these thynges be lefte oute, there shall not one (nor suche lyke) fayle. Jerusalem is assaged by Sennaherib, in the tyme of kyng Hezekiah.

4. reg. xli. c.

In the. xliii. yeaere of kyng Hezekiah, came Sennaherib kyng of the Assyrians downe, to laye sege vnto al the stronge citties of Iuda. * And the kyng of the Assyrians sent Rabshakeh, from Lachis towarde Jerusalem, agaynst kyng Hezekiah, wyth a greuous hoste, whiche set him by the condyte of the ouer pole, in the way that goeth thorow the fullers land. And so there came forth vnto him Eliakim Helkiah's sonne the Presydēt, * Sobna the Scrybe, and Joah Ma-phs sonne the Secretary.

And Rabshakeh sayde vnto them:
Tell Hezekiah, that the greate kyng of Assyria sayeth thus vnto hym: What presumpcion is this, that thou trustest vnto: Thou thynckest (peradventure) that thou hast counsell & power ynough to mayntene thys warre: or elles wher to trustest thou, that thou castest thy self of fro me, * lo, thou puttest thy trust in a broken stafe of reede (I meane Egypte) whiche he that leaneeth vpon, it goeth in to his hand and shutteth hym thorowe. Euen so is Pharaos the kyng of Egypte, vnto all them that truste in him. But yf thou wouldest saye to me: we truste in the Lord our God: A good alters Hezekiah toke downe, and comaunded Iuda and Jerusalem, to wor-shyppe onely befoze the altar. Abysse the, thou hast made a condicion w my lorde the kyng of the Assyrians, that he shoulde geue the two thousand hoxles: art thou able to set men ther vpon? Seynge now that thou canst not resist the power of the smallest pryncce, y my Lord hath, howe darrest thou truste in the charrettes & horse men of Egypt? Moreover, thinkest thou y I am come downe hither, to destrope this land without the Lordes wil: The Lord sayd vnto me, goo downe into the land, that thou mayest destroy it.

Then sayde Eliakim, Sobna and Joah vnto Rabshakeh: Speake to vs syrans language, for we vnderstande it wel: And speake not to vs in the Jewes me to speake this only vnto you: Hath he not sente me to them also, that lye vpon the wall: that they be not compelled to eate theyr owne donge, and dryncke and sayde: Nowe take hede, howe the great king of the Assyrians geueth you warnynge. Thus sayeth the kinge: Let not Hezekiah disceaue you, for he shall not be able to deliuer you. Moreouer lette not Hezekiah comforte you in the Lorde, when he sayeth: The Lorde with out doute shall defende vs, and shal not geue ouer this cytpe into the handes of the kynge of the Assyrians, beleue hym not. But thus sayeth the kynge of Assyria: opteyne my fauoure, enclyne to me: so maye euery man enioye his bynepardes and sygetrees, and drinke the water of his sesterne: vnto the tyme that I come my selfe, and bynuge you into a lande that is lyke youte owne: wherco is wheate and wyne, which is both sowne with seede, & planted in bynepardes.

Let not Hezekiah disceaue you, whē he sayeth vnto you: the Lorde shall deliuer vs.

*Wight the Goddess of the Gentiles kepe euery mannes lande, frome the power of the kynge of the Assyrians: Where is the God of Hemath and Arphad: Where is the God of Sepharuaim: And who was able to defend Samaria out of my hande: Or which of all the Goddesses of the landes, hath deliuered their countre out of my power, so that the Lorde shoulde deliuer Ierusalem fro my hand: Vnto thys Hezekiahs messengers helde theyr tonges, and answered not one worde: for the king had charged them, that they shoulde geue him none answer. So came Eliakim Hezekiahs sonne the presidente, Sobna the scribe, and Ioah Alaphs sonne the Secretary, vnto Hezekiah with rent clothes, & told him the wordes of Rabshakeh.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

Hezekiah humbleth him selfe before the Lorde. The armye of Sennaherib is slayne of the Angel of the Lorde: and he him selfe is kyled of his owne sonnes.

When Hezekiah hearde that, he rent his clothes, & put on a sacke clothe, and wente into the temple of the Lorde. But he sent Eliakim the presidente, Sobna the scribe, with the eldest prestes clothed in sacke, vnto the Prophet Elay the sonne of Amoz, and they sayde vnto hym: Thus sayeth Hezekiah: Thys is the day of trouble, of plage & of wrathe:

lyke as when a chylde cometh to the byrthe, but the woman hath no power to bynuge it forth. The Lorde thy God (no doute) hath well consydered the wordes of Rabshakeh, whome hys lorde the kynge of the Assyrians hath sente, to despye and blaspheme the lyuinge God: with such wordes as the Lorde thy God hath hearde right well. And therfore lyfte vp thy prayer for the remenaunte that yet are left. So the seruantes of kinge Hezekiah came to Elay.

And Elay gaue them this answer: Saye thus vnto your lord: thus sayeth the Lorde: Be not afrayed of the wordes that thou haste hearde, wherewith the kynge of the Assyrians seruantes haue blasphemied me. Beholde, I will cause a wynde go ouer him, as soone as he heareth it he shal go agayne into his countre, there wyl I destroye him with the swerde. Now when Rabshakeh returned, he founde the kynge of Assyria layinge sege to Lobnah, for he had vnderstande, that he was departed frome Lachis. For there came a rumoure, that Tharhakah kynge of Ethiopia was come forth to warre agaynst him.

And when the kyng of Assyria heard that, he sente other messengers to king Hezekiah with this commaundement: Saye thus to Hezekiah kynge of Iuda: Let not thy God disceaue the, in whome thou hopest, and sayest: Ierusalem shall not be geuen into the handes of the kynge of Assyria. For thou knowest well how the kynges of Assyria haue handled all the landes that they haue subuerted, and hopest thou to escape? Were the people of the Gentylles (whom my progenytours conquered) deliuered at anye tyme thorow the goddesses: As namelye, *Gozan, Haran, Rezeph, and the chylzen of Eden, which dwell at Challasar. Where is the kynge of Hemah, & the kynge of Arphad, and the kynge of the cytie Sepharuaim, Ena and Auar: Nowe when Hezekiah had receaued the letter of the messengers, and read it, he went vp into the house of the Lorde, and opened the lettre before the Lorde. And Hezekiah prayed before the Lorde on this manner: O Lorde of Hostes, thou God of Israell, whiche dwellest vpon Cheru:

And there E will I cut downe the hye Cedre trees & the fayrest fyre trees. I will by into the height of it, and into the chefest of his tymbre woddes. If there bee no water, I will graue and drinke. And as for waters of defence, I shall dreyne them by with the fete of myne host. Yea (saist thou) haste thou not hearde, what I haue taken in hande, and broughte to passe of olde tyme? That same will I do nowe also: waste, destroye, and bring stronge cyties vnto heapes of stones. For their inhabitours shalbe lyke lame men, brought in feare and confounded. They shalbe lyke the grasse and grene herbes in the felde, lyke the haye upon house toppes, that withereth afore it be growen by.

I know thy wayes, thy going forth and thy commynge home, yea, and thy madnesse against me. Therefore thy furiousnesse agaynst me, and thy pryde is come before me. I will put a ringe in thy nose, and a bydle byt in the chawes of the, and turne the aboute, euen the same waye thou camest. I will geue the also this token (O Hezekiah) thys yere shalte thou eate that is kepte in stoates, and the next yere such as groweth of him selfe, and in the thyrde yere ye shall sowe & reape, yea, ye shal plante vyncyardes, & enioye the frutes therof.

And such of the house of Juda as are escaped, shall come together, and the remnaunte shall take roote beneth, and bringe forth the fruite aboue. For the escaped shal go out of Jerusalem, and the remnaunt from the mount Sion.

And this shall the gelously of y Lord of hostes bynge to passe. And Mathadon his sonne reigned after hym.

Not longe afoze thys, was Hezekiah sicke vnto y death: and the Prophete Elay the sonne of Amoz came vnto hi, and sayd: Thus comaundeth the Lorde: Set thine house in ordre: for thou must dye, and shalt not escape. Then Hezekiah turned his face toward the wall, and prayed vnto the Lorde, and sayde: Remembre (O Lorde) that I haue walcked before the in a treuth & a stedfast herte, and haue done the thyng that is pleasaunte to the. And Hezekiah wepte sore. Then sayde God vnto Elay: Go and speake vnto Hezekiah: the Lorde God of Dauid thy father sendeth thee thys worde: I haue herde thy prayer, and consydred thy teares: * beholde, I wyll put fyftene yeares mo vnto thy life, and delyuer the and the ctyte also, from the hande of the kyng of Assyria, for I wyll defende the ctyte. And take the thys token of the Lorde, that he wyll do it, as he hath spoken: * Beholde, I wyll reuerne the shadowe of Ahaz diall, that now is layed out with the Sunne and bring it ten degres backward. * So y Sunne turned ten degres backward, y which he was descended afoze.

What shall I speake or saye, that he maye thys dor that I may lyue out all my yeares, yea, in the bytternesse of my lyfe.

Verelye (Lorde) men muste lyue in bytternesse, and al my lyfe must I passe ouer theret: for thou raydest me vp, and wakest me. But lo, I wylbee well content with this bytternes.

Neuertheles my conuersacyon hath so pleased thee, that thou wouldest not make an ende of my lyfe: so that thou hast caste all my synnes behynde thy backe.

Then sayde Hezekiah: O what a great thinge is this, that I shal go vp into the house of the Lorde.

The xxxix. Chapter.

¶ The same tyme Mesodach, Baladani, Baladani sonne kyng of Babilon, sent lettres & presentes to Hezekiah. For he vnderstode how that he had bene sicke, and was recouered agayne. And * Hezekiah was glad therof, & shewed them the commodities of his treasure, of siluer, of golde, of spices and rootes, of precyous oyles, all that was in his cubbozdes and treasure houses. There was not one thinge in Hezekiahs house, and so thorow out all his kingdome, but he let them se it.

¶ Then came Elay the Prophete to kyng Hezekiah, & said vnto hym: What haue the men sayde, from whence came they vnto the? Hezekiah answered: they came oute of a farre countre vnto me, oute of Babilon. Elay sayde: what haue they loked vpon in thyne house?

¶ Hezekiah answered: All that is in myne house haue they sene: and there is nothing in my treasure, but I shewed it them.

Then sayde Elay vnto Hezekiah: Understande the worde of the Lorde of Hostes: * Beholde, the tyme wyl come, that euerye thinge whiche is in thyne house, and al that thy progenytours haue layd by in stoare vnto this daye, shalbe caried to Babilon, and nothinge lefte behynde. Beholde, all people are in comparisoun of hym, as a droppe to a boket full, and are counted as the lesse thyng that the balaunce weyeth. Beholde, the fles are in comparisoun of hym, as the shadowe of the sunne beame. Lybanus is not suffyciente to mynistrer fyre for his offring, and all the bestes therof are not ynough to one sacrifice. All people in comparisoun of hym are rekened as nothyng, * yea, bayne banyte and emptynesse.

E To whome then wyll ye lyken God? or what symilitude wyll ye set vp vnto hym? Shall the caruer make hym a carued ymage? and shall the golde smyth couer hym with golde, or cast him in to a fourme of syluer plates? More ouer shall the ymage maker (that the poore mā whiche is dysposed, may haue some thyng to set vp also) seke out and chose a tree, that is not rottē, and carue there oute an ymage, that moueth not. Knowe ye not this? Hearde ye neuer of it? Hath it not bene preached vnto you sence I begynnynge? Haue ye not bene enfourmed of thys, sence the foundacion of the earthe was layde: That he sytteth vpon the circle of the worlde, and that all the inhabitours of I world are in comparisoun of hym, but as grefhoppers: * That he spredeth out I heauen as a couerynge, that he stretcheth them oute, as a tente to dwell in: That he byngeth bynches to nothyng, and the iudges of the earthe to dust: so that they be not planted nor sowne agayne, nether their stocke roted agayne in the earthe: For as soone as he bloweth vpon them, they wither and fade awaye, lyke the strawe in the whyrle wynde.

To whome nowe wyll ye lyken me, and whome shall I be lyke, sayeth the holy one? Lyfte vp youre eyes on hys, and consydre. * Who hath made those thynges, whiche come oute by so greate heapes: and he can call them all by theyr names. For there is nothyng hyd vnto the greatnesse of hys power, strength, and myghte. Howe maye then Iacob thyncke, or howe maye I Israel saye: My wayes are hyd from the Lorde, and my God knoweth not of my iudgements. Knowest thou not, or haste thou not hearde, that the euerylastyng God, the Lorde whiche made all the corners of the earthe, is nether weery nor faynte: and that hys wysedome can not be comprehended: but that he geueth strength vnto the weery and power vnto the faynte: Chylozen are weery and faynte, and the strongest men fall: * But vnto them that haue the Lorde before their eyes, shal strength be encreased, Agles wynges shal grow vpon them: When they runne, they shal not fall: and when they go, they shal not be weery.

Of the goodnes & mercy of God towards his people.

BE still (ye Ilandes) and herken vnto me. Be stronge ye people, come hyther, and shew youre cause, we wyll go to the lawe together. ## The Notes.

a. I brynge forth the foudes in the hylls. &c. In hygge places that be casye to se, wherunto the thyrstie maye soone come, wyl I prepare, not lytel wellles, but great foudes of holy doctrine: and in playne felde and lowe places, sprynges and fountaynes: that the lame or slouthfull shall haue no excuse, but that all the thyrstie may come to the worde of lyfe.

b. I turne the wyldernes in to ryuers. &c. That is: I make the doctrine of truely so generall and so casye to all men, that where as were before wastewyldernes (by whiche vnderstande the erroours of the Heathen wherewith they had made all vnfruitefull: and drye) shall nowe by the grace of the holy ghost, be ryuers of the water of verite. Wher all wasful of Idolatrye, of abhominacion and of synckynge erroours: there shall the hertes of the chosen be watered with godlye wysdome, thorowe the gospel, and gladerydnges: and shall be indued with fayth, wherby they maye bothe profyt them selues and other: and so shall they be fruitefull. Wyldernes is often thus taken, as before in the. xxxv. a.

I haue longe holden my peace (saith the Lorde) should I therfore be stil, and kepe sylence for euer? I wyl crye lyke a trauelyng woman, and once, wil I destroye, and deuoure. ## The. xlii. Chapter.

God promyseth to sende his Christ, whiche shal deliuer his people. He forgiveth synnes for his owne sake.

At now, the Lorde that made the O Jacob, and he that falsyoned the O Israell, sayeth thus: * Feare not, for I wyl sende the. * I haue called the by name, thou arte myne owne.

* When thou wentest in the water, I was by the, that the stronge floudes shoulde not plucke the awaye. * When thou walckest in the fyre, it shall not burne the, and the flame shal not kindle vpon the. for I am the Lord thy God, the holy one of Israell, thy Sauoure. I gaue Egypte for thy deliuerance, the Moyans and the Sabees for the: because thou wast deare in my syght, and because I set by the, and loued the. I pulled all men for the, and deliuered vp all people for thy sake, that thou shouldest not feare, for I was with the. * I wyl bynge thy sede from the East, and gather the together from the West. I wyl saye to the Northe, let go. And to the Southe, kepe not backe: * but bring me my sonnes from farre, & my dough- ters from the endes of the world: Namely, all those that be called after my name: for them haue I created, fashio- ned, and made for myne honoure.

* Bynge forth that people, whether they haue eyes or be blynde, deafe or haue eares. * All nacions shall come in one, and be gathered in one people. But whiche amonge yonder goddes shal declare suche thynges, and tel vs what is to come: Let them bynge the, wytnes- ses, so shall they be fre: for then men shal heare it, and saye, it is trueth. But I bynge you witneses (sayeth the Lorde) euen those that are my seruantes, who I haue chosen: to the intente that ye myghte be certified and geue me faith: full credence: yea and to conspyre, * that I am he, before whome there was ne- uer any God, and that there shalbe none after me. I am onely the Lorde, * and without me is there no Sauoure. I geue warnynge, I make whole, I teach you that there shoulde be no straunge God amonge you. And this recorde muste ye beare me your selues (sayeth the Lorde) that I am God. And euen he am I from the begynnynge, * and there is none that can take any thyng out of my hande. And what I do can no man chaunge.

Thus sayeth the Lord the holy one of Israell your redemer: * for your sake I wyl sende to Babylon, & bynge all the strongest of them from thence: Namely, the Chaldees that boost them of their myppes: Euen I the Lord your holy one whiche haue made Israell, and am your kynge. Moreover, thus sayeth the Lord, * euen he that maketh a waye in the sea, and a footpath in the myghtye waters: whiche * byngeth forth the charettes and horses, the host and the power, that they may fal a depe and neuer ryl, and be extincte, lyke as towne is quenched. and whom I haue chosen

Ye remembre not thynges of olde, and regarde nothyng that is paste. Therefore beholde, I shall make a new thyng, and shortlye shall it appere: ye shall well knowe it, I tolde it you afore, but I wil tel it you againe. I wil make stretes in y desert, & ryuers ple haue I made for my selfe, and they shal shewe forthe my prayse. For thou (Jacob) wouldest not call vpon me, but thou haddest an vnluste towarde me, Israel. Thou gauest me not the younge beastes for burnt offerpynges, nether diddest honoure me with thy sa-crifyces. Thou boughtest me no deare spyce with thy money, nether pourest the fat of thy sacrifices vpo me. Howbeit I haue not bene chargeable vnto the in offerpynges, nether greuous in incense.

But thou hast laden me with thy synnes, and weeryed me with thyne vn-godlynes.

Where as I yet am euen he onely, that for myne owne selves sake do away thyne offences, and forget thy synnes: so that I wyll neuer thyncke vpon them.

But me nowe in remembraunce for thou haste for the, to make the quyte.

Thy fyrst father offeded sore, and thy rulers haue synned agaynst me. Therfore I ether suspended, or due the che-rest dzynces: I dyd curse Jacob, and gaue Israel into reprofe.

Therefore beholde, I shall make a newe thyng for meane that he wyll forsake the Jewes whiche were his owne people, for their offences: and cal the Gentyles that were Idolaters, whome he benedict andeth by the deserte and wyldernes:
as before in the xxxv. a. and xli. e.

The wyldre beastes shal worshyppe me the dragon. Under the name of these beastes spyn-feth he also the Heathen, whiche were wyldre, rude and beastly, concernyng godly knowledge.
These sayeth he that he wyll tame by the pre-chyng of the gospel (whiche thyng he spynfyeth by waters and streames) so that they shal not here after do hurte in the churche, but shal put thei shouldres vnder the yoke of saythe, and be ruled with the lawe of charitie.

To shewe forthe the prayse of the Lorde, is, to preache the redemption of synnes, and the deluerance from death and hell, and the geuenes of euerlastyng lyfe by the merce of God, for Christes sake. A lyke manner of speakyng useth Da-uid in the psal. xlii. d. where he bearynge the y-gure of Christe, sayeth: In the myddes of congregation wyll I prayse the. Thus should the Gentyles and Heathen prayse hym, whiche people he chose for hym selfe, as ye may see in ptept:

For the Jewes (whiche are signified by Jacob) would not do it, but put their confidence in heapyng of the lawe. This doeth the prophete v-breahe them with, in the person of God, sayinge:
d. Thou gauest me not thy yonge beastes. &c. As who shoulde saye: Saye not that thou hast geuen me manye sacrifices, bothe because thou gauest them not vnto me onely, but vnto thy calues and Baalles and other Idoles: and also because I dyd neuer set greatlye by them, nor greatlye requyred them. They greued me alwayes, when they saythe and the deuotion of the geuenes was awaye. The hope of thy burnt offerpynges broughtest thou not vnto me, nether dydest thou glorifie me with thy sacrificys, but dydest onely sacrifice thyne owne superstitious. I compelled the not to worshyp me with thyne offerpynges, but because thou so rebely offeded such thynges vnto Idoles after the manner of the Heathen. I commaunded that they shoulde not be offred vnto other god-des, but vnto me, of whose gyfte thou receyvedest them. &c. None of all these thynges prospered me: in as muche as thou ledest of the thynges which I cheafly requyred, ryghtheousnes, saythe, and iud-thou God & Sauoure of Israel: Confounded be ye, and put to dishonour:

go hence together with shame, al ye that be workemasters of erreure: (that is worshippers of Idols.) But Israel shall be saued in the Lorde, which is the euerlastynge saluacion: They shall not come to shame nor confusion, worlde without ende.

for thus sayeth the Lorde: * eue he that created heauen, the God that made the earth, that fashioned it, and set it forth: I haue not made it for noughte, but I made it to be inhabited: Euen I the Lord, without whome there is none other. * I haue not spoken secretlye, nether in darcke places of the earth. It is not for noughte, that I said vnto the sede of Jacob: seke me, I am the Lord, whiche when I speake, declareth & thig that is righteous and true. Let the be gathered and come together, let them drawe nye hyther, that are escaped of the people: * Haue they any vnderstan-

Idols, and praye vnto a God, that can not helpe them? Let men drawe nye, let them come hyther, and aske counsell one at another, and shewe forth: what is he, & tolde this befoze: or, who spake of it, euer sence the begynnynge: Haue not I the Lorde done it: * Without whome there is none other God: the true God and Sauoure, and there is els none but I. * And therfore turne you vnto me (all ye endes of the earth) so shall ye be saued, for I am God, and there is els none. I sweare by my selfe: oute of my mouthe cometh the worde of righte-ousnesse, and that maye no man turne, * but all knees shall bowe vnto me, and all tunges shall sweare by me, sayinge: Verely in the Lorde is my righte-

a. To syt in the duske, to be brought lowe, to be poorly arayde and deck'd, to sit without pompe, and to fall from her estate and degre, as it is said Iona. iii. c. The prophet here describeth the destruction of Babilon vnder the figure of a proude queene: which was deliciously & dently brought vp, and after fell into extreme pouerte, miserie, and wretchednes.

b. He vnderstandeth by the queene, or (as s<sup>r</sup> e read) myll: scruple, poore, and vyle estate & condicion.

The xlviij. Chapter.

The pyrotrise of the Jewes is reprobued. The Lorde alone wyll be worshypped, whiche hath chosē vs, and whiche succoureth vs for hys owne sake.

Eate this, O thou house of Jacob: Ye that are called by the name of Israell, and are oute of one stocke with Iuda: whiche swere by the name of the Lorde, and beare witness by the God of Israell (but not with trueth and tyghte) which are called* free men of the holy citie, as they s<sup>r</sup> loke for confort in the God of Israell,* whose name is the Lorde of hostes.

The thinges that I shewed you euer sence the beginninge: Haue I not broughte them to passe, immediatlye as they came oute of my mouth, and declared them? And they are come. Howe be it I knewe that thou arte obstinate, and that thyne necke hath an yron beyne, & that thy browe is of bras. Neuertheles I haue euer sence the beginninge shewed thee of thinges for to come, and declared them vnto the, or euer they came to passe: That thou shouldest not saye: Myne Idoll hath done it, my carued or caste ymage hath shewed it. Heare and consyder all these thynges whether it was ye that prophecied them: But as for me, I tolde the before at the beginninge, newe and secrete thinges, that thou knewest not of: * And some done nowe not of olde tyme, whereof thou neuer heardest, before they were brought to passe: That thou canste not saye: I knewe of them. Moreouer there be some whereof thou haste neither hearde nor knownen, neither haue they bene opened vnto thyne eares afozety me. For I knew that thou wouldest malyciously offende, therefore haue I called the a trangressoure, euen from thy mothers wombe.

Neuerthelesse for my names sake, I haue withdrawen my wrathe, and for myne honoures sake I haue ouersene the, so that I haue not rooted the oute. Behold, I haue pouerged the, and not for moneye. * I haue chosen the in the fyre of pouerte, & that onely* for myne owne sake, for I geue myne honoure to none other, that thou shouldest not despyce me. Herken vnto me O Jacob, and Israell whome I haue called. I am euen he that is, I am the fyrste and the laste. My hande is the foundacion of the earthe, and my right hande spanneth ouer the heauens. As soone as I called them they were there. Gather you all together, and herken: Whyche of yonder Goddes hath declared this, that the Lorde wyll doe by the kynge of Babilon, (whome he loueth, and fauouteth) & by s<sup>r</sup> Chaldee his arme: I my self alone haue told you thys before. Yea, I shall call hym and byynge hym forth, and geue him a prosperous iourneye. Come nye and heare this: Haue I spoken anye thyng darchelye sence the beginninge: when a thinge beginneth, I am there.

Wherefore the Lorde God with his spirite hath sente me, and thus sayeth the Lorde God thyne auenger, the holpe one of Israell: * I am the Lorde thy God, whiche teacheth the profitable thinges, and leade thee the waye, that thou shouldest goe. Y<sup>e</sup>* thou wylte nowe regard my commaundemente, thy welthynges shalbe as the water streame: and thy righteounes as the waues flowig in the sea. Thy seede shalbe lyke as the s<sup>r</sup>de in the sea, and s<sup>r</sup> fruite of thy body, lyke the grauell stones thereof: Thy name shall not be rooted oute, nor destroyed before me. * Ye shall goe a waye frome Babilon, and escape the Chaldee with a merye voyce. Thys shall be spoken of, declared abrode, and goe forth vnto the ende of the worlde: So that it shall be sayde: The Lorde hath defended hys seruante Jacob, that they suffred no thurst, when they tra-

The Notes.

a. By this he meaneth that the people of Israell were stubborne, frowarde, rebellious, vntactable, butulye and wamelesse.
b. Some reade: Beholde, I haue purified the: but not as siluer: I haue chosen the out of the furnes of affliction. For myne owne sake. For myne own sake haue I done this: for lyke whome woulde they polute me: & truly I wyll not geue my glorie to anye other: Hecken. &c. The same expound it thus. I woulde not suffer the wholy to perishe: for yf I had proued and purified the as gold and syluer is proued and purified, from which al manner of dross is cleansed, there woulde nothyng haue remained in the: verie fewe, yea, none shuld haue bene saued. But I brought the vnder, & proued the in the fournesse of affliction; that is, I wrapped the in captiuite and bondage in Egypt, from which I afterward deliuered the. And this haue I done for myne owne sake, that is, onelye for myne owne name and glorie, of myne owne gentelnes and louing kindnes, not for any of thy merites and deseruinges, which were none at al.
For howe woulde the gentiles and heathen haue poluted, defiled, & blasphemed my name, yf I had rooted out my people, & so haue made the truer of the promises which I had determined to ful-fyll in Christe, bayne and vntreue. For as wel this praple of my truer, as the glorie of the blessinge promysed in the seede of Abraham and Dauid, wyll I not geue vnto another people or nacyon.
The health of the worde shal come of the Jewes.
John. iiii. & from none other. The glad tydings of health shal the whole worlde receaue of none other then of Christe, by the preachynge of the Apostles, &c.

¶ The. xlix. Chapter.

¶ Christe shall gather together al nations be they ne uer so farre of.

¶ Ye, herken vnto
me, and take hede ye people from farre: The Lorde hathe called me fro my byrth, and made mencion of my name fro my mothers wombe: * He hathe made my mouthe * lyke a sharpe swerde, vnder the shadowe of his hande hathe he defended me, and hyd me in his quiuer, as a good arrowe, and sayde vnto me: Thou arte my seruaunte Israell, * I wyll be honoured in thee. Then answered I: I shall lese my labour, I shall spende my strengthe in vayne. Neuer-thelesse, I wyll commit my cause and my woorkes vnto the Lorde my God.
And nowe sayeth the Lorde, euen he that fashioned me fro my mothers wobe to be his seruaunte, that I maye bring

Jacob agayne vnto hym: Howe be it, Israell wyll not be gathered vnto him agayne. In whose syghte I am great, whiche also is my Lorde, my God and my strengthe. Lette it be but a small thyng, that thou arte my seruaunte, to set bp the kinteddes of Jacob, and to restore the destruccion of Israell: * yf I make the not also the lyghte of the Gentiles, that thou mayst be my health vnto the ende of the worlde.

Moreover thus sayeth the Lorde the auenger and holpe one of Israell, bycause of the abhorrynge and des-pysynge amonge the Gentiles, concer-ninge the seruaunte of all them that beare rule: kyniges and prynces shal se, and arise and worshyp, bycause of the Lorde that he is saythful: and bycause of the holpe one of Israel, which hath chosen the.

And thus sayeth the Lord: * In the tyme apoynted wyll I be presente with the. * And in the houre of healthe wyll I helpe the, & delyuer the. I wyll make the a pledge for the people, so that thou shalte helpe bp the earthe agayne, and challenge agayne the scatered he-ritages: * That thou mayest say to the prisoners: Goe forth, and to them that are in darckenesse: come into the lyght, that they maye fede in the hye wayes, and gette their lyuynge in all places.
* There shal neither hungre nor thurst, heate nor Summe hurte them. For he that fauoureth them, shall leade them, and geue them dryncke of the springe welles. I wyl make wayes vpon al my mountaynes, and my fote pathes shall be exalted. And beholde, they shall come frome farre: Lo, some frome the North and Weste, some frome the Southe.
* Retoyle ye heauens, and singe pray-ses thou earthe: Talke of ioye ye hylles, for God wyll comferte his people, and haue mercey vpon hys, that be in trouble.

Then shall Sion saye. * God hath forsaken me, and the Lorde hathe forgotten me. * Doeth a wife forget the childe of her wombe, and the sonne whom she hathe borne: And thoughe she doe forget, yet wyl not I forget the. Behold, I haue written the bp vpon my handes, thy walles are euer in my sight. * They

As true lye as I liue (sayeth the Lorde) thou shalt put them all vpon the, as an apparell, and gyde them to the, as a bride doeth her Jewelles. As for thy lande that lyeth desolate, wasted and destroyed: It shall be to narrowe for them, that shall dwell in it. And they that wolde deuour the, shall be farre awaye. <sup>c</sup> Then the chylde whome the baren shall brynge forth vnto the, shall saye in thyne eare: this place is to narrowe, lytte nye together, that I maye haue rowme. Then shalt thou thyncke by thy selfe: Who hath begotten me these? Seynge I am baren and alone, a captiue and an outcaste: And who hath nourished them vp for me? I am desolate and alone, but frome whence come these?

And therfore thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, I wil stretche oute myne hande to the Gentyles, and sette vp my token to the people. They shall brynge the thy sonnes in their lappes, and carrie thy daughters vnto the vpon their shoulders. For kinges shall be thy noursynge fathers, and Quenes shall be thy noursynge mothers. They shall fall before the wyth their faces flat vpon the earthe, and lycke vp the duste of thy feete: That thou mayest knowe, howe that I am the Lord. * And who so putteth hys truste in me, shall not be confounded. Who spoyleth the gyaunte of hys praye? Or who taketh the prysoner frome the myghtye? And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: The prisoners shall be taken from the gyaunte, and the spoyle deliuered from the violent: For I wyll maynteyne thy cause agaynste thine aduersaries, and saue thy sonnes. And wyll fede thyne enemyes wyth their owne flesh, and make them drinke of their owne bloude, as of swete wine. And all fleshe shall knowe (O Iacob) that I am the Lorde thy Sauoure, and stronge auenger.

The Notes.

- a. What Ales signifie, loke before in the. xli. b.
- b. He hath made my mouth lyke a sharpe sword, that is. He hath geuen me the spirite, of sharpe and pythie speache, so that my wordes shall cutt a sonder (as it were) the heartes of the chosen, whiche heare me, and driue them to repentance, and declare the offences of the wicked to be without excuse. This doeth the spirite of prophete of true preachinge of the word. Apoca. xix. c. c. Dothe a wife forget the childe of her wombe. & cetera. As who saye, naye: And no moore wyll I doe thec.

d. That is to saye the Gentyles.

e. Some reade: yet shall the children of thy barennes say in thine eare. &c. The meaning is, when thou arte moste baren, and hast fewest of the saythful in the (that is to saye, the. xii. Apostles, and a fewe of their disciples, Jewes borne) by and by shalt thou heare a noyse, that these are increased to suche a nombre, that they shall nor finde place sufficient to dwell in. At the first sermon of Peter were there increased thre thousande. Act. ii. g

* The Lorde God hath geuen me a well learned tongue, so that I can conforte them which are troubled, yea, and that in due season. He waked mine eare vp by tymes in the morninge, (as the scolemaisters doe) that I myghte hearken. * The Lorde God hath opened myne eare, therfore can I not say naye: nor withdraue my selfe, * but I offer my back vnto the smiters, and my chekes to the nippers, * I tourne not my face frome shame and spittinge, for the Lorde God helpeth me, therfore shall I not be confounded. I haue hardened my face lyke a slynte stone, for I am sure, that I shall not come to confusyon. Myne aduocate speaketh for me, who who wyl then go with me to lawe: Let vs stande one agaynste another: Yf there be anye that wyl reason with me, lette hym come here forth to me. * Be holde, the Lorde God standeth by me, what is he that can condemne me: Lo, * they shalbe all lyke as an olde clothe, which the mothes shal eate bp.

Therfore who so feareth the Lorde amonge you let him heare the voyce of his seruante. Who so walketh in darkness, and no light shineth vpon him, lette him hope in the Lorde, and holde hym by his God. But take hede, ye haue all kyndled a fyre, & gyrded youre selues with the flame: Ye walcke in the glistryng of youre owne fyre, and in the flame that ye haue kyndled. Thys commeth vnto you fro my hand, name: Ipe that ye shal slepe in sorowe.

a. God was not the cause why the congregacion of the Jewes (whiche is vnderstande by mother, and was ones his spouse) was deuorced and forsaken: but their owne offences deuorced them, & was the cause why they were solde to the vicer and geuen ouer into the handes of the Gentiles, or Heathen, and sparkled amongst the Medians, Persians, Babilonians, Grecians, and Romaynes.
b. As who say: ye your selues, haue kindled the fyre of my vengeance, with your offences: I was no causer therof: ye must therefore suffer the punishment therto belonging. For it commeth of your owne deservynge that I shalape my hande vpon you and punishe you.

The li. Chapter.

Consolacion and conforte is promysed vnto the saythfull.

I Erken vnto me, ye that holde of ryghteousnesse, ye that seke the Lorde. Take hede vnto the stone, whereoute ye are hewen, and to the graue where oute ye are dygged. Consyder * Abraham your father, and Sara that bare you: Howe that * I called hym alone, prospered hym well, and encreased hym: Howe the Lorde comforted Sion, and repayred all her decaye: Makynge her deserte as p Paradise, and her wyldernesse as a garden of the Lorde. Myrthe and lope was there, thanckesgeuyng & the voyce of prayse. Haue respect vnto me the, o my people, both high & lowe, & lay thyn care to me: for a law & an ordinaunce shal go forth from me, to lyghten the Gentyles. It is harde by, that my healthe and my righteousness shal goe forth, and the people shal be ordered wth myne arme.

The Ilandes (that is the Gentyles) shal hope in me, and put their truste in myne arme. Lyfte vp youre eyes toward heauen, and loke vpon the earth beneth. * For the heauens shal vanishe awaye lyke smoke, and the earthe shal teare lyke a clothe, and they that dwell therein shal perishe in lyke maner. But my healthe endureth for euer, and my righteousness shal not ceasse. Therfore herken vnto me, ye that haue pleasure in righteousness, thou people that * bearest my lawe in thyn heart. * feare not the curse of men, be not a frayde of their blasphemies and reuylnges: * For wormes and mothes shal eate them vp lyke clothe and woll. But my righteousness shal endure for euer, and my sauinge healthe frome generation to generation. Wake vp, wake vp, and be stronge: O thou a arme of the Lorde: Wake vp, lyke as in times past, euer and sence the worlde beganne.

* Arte not thou he, that haste wounded that proude Lucifer, and hewen the dragon in peces: * Arte not thou euen he, whiche hast dyed by the depe of the sea, which hast made playne the sea grounde, that the deliuered myght goe thowre: * That the redeemed of the Lorde, whiche turned agayne, myghte come with ioye vnto Sion, there to endure for euer: That myrth and gladnesse myghte be with them: That sorow and woe myghte flee from them: * Yea I, I am euen he, that in al thynges geueth you consolacion. What arte thou then, that fearest a mortall man, the chyld of man, which goeth awaye as doeth the floure: And forgettest the Lorde that made the, that spred out the heauens, and leyde the foundation of the earthe. But thou arte euer afrayde for the syghte of thyn oppressour, whiche is readye to doe harme: Where is the wrathe of the oppressour: It commeth on faste, it maketh hast to apeare: It shal not pirish, that it shoulde not be able to destroye, neither shal it fayle for faulte of noythinge.* I am y<sup>e</sup> Lorde thy God, that make the sea to be still, and to rage.* Whose name is y<sup>e</sup> Lorde of Hostes.* I shall put my worde also in thy mouth, and defende the with the turnyng of myne hande: That thou mayest plante the heauens, and lepe the foundacions of the earth, and saye vnto Sion: Thou arte my people.

I Awake, awake, and stande vp, O Jerusalem, thou that frome the hande of the Lorde, haste droncken oute the cuppe of hys wrath: Thou that hast supped of, and sucked oute the Rombyng cuppe to the bottome. For amonge all the sonnes whome thou hast begotten, there is not one that maye holde thee vp: And not one to leade the by the hande, of all the sonnes that thou haste noyshed. Bothe these thynges are happened vnto the, but who is sorow for it. Yea, destruction, wastynge, hunger and swerde: But who hath comforted thee? Thy sonnes lye comfortlesse at y<sup>e</sup> head of euery strete lyke a take beuison, and are full of the terrible wrath of the Lorde, and punysshement of thy God. And therfore thou miserable and droncken (howe be it not with wyne) heare this: Thus sayeth thy Lorde: Thy Lorde and God, the defender of his people: Beholde, I wyll take the Rombyng cuppe oute of thy hande, euen the cuppe with the dregges of my wrath: That frome hence forth thou shalte neuer dryncke it more, and wyll put it in their hande that trouble thee: Whyche haue spoken to thy soule: Stoupe downe, that we maye goe ouer thee: Make thy bodye euen with the grounde, and as the strete to goe vpon.

The notes.

a. The arme of the Lorde here signifieth Christe, and the redemption of the worlde and the puttyng awaye of errorres, that cometh by hym. For thys prayeth the prophete that it maye come.

b. The cuppe of the Lordes wrath, signifieth the affliction that we suffer, because wee haue done agaynst the will of the Lorde & the vengeance that he taketh of his for thei<sup>r</sup> offences. Psal. lxxv. b.

The. lii. Chapter.

A consolation and comfort to the people of God.

V Sion vp, take thy strengthe vnto thee: put on thyne honest raymēt O Jerusalem, thou cytye of the holpe one. For frome thys tyme forth, there shall no vncircumcised nor vncleane person come in thee. Shake the from the duste, arise and stande vp, O Jerusalem. Plucke out thy necke from the bonde, O thou captiue doughter Sion. For thus sayeth the Lorde: Ye are solde for noughte, therefore shall ye be redemed also without any monye.

For thus hath the Lorde sayed.* my people wente downe afore tyme in to Egypte, there to be straungers.* Afterwarde byd the kynge of the Assyrians oppresse them, for noughte. And now what profite is it to me (sayeth the Lorde) that my people is scelye carryed awaye, and broughte into heuiness by their ruelars, and my name euer still blasphemed? Sayeth the Lorde. But that my people maye knowe my name, I my selfe wyll speake in that day. Beholde, here am I.* O how beautiful are the fete of the Embassidour, y<sup>e</sup> bringeth the message fro the mountaine, and proclaimeth peace: That bringeth the good tidings, & preacheth healthe, and sayeth vnto Sion: Thy God is the kinge. Thy watchmen shall lyfte vp their voyce, with loude voyce shal they preache of him: for they shal see him presente, when the Lorde shal come agayne to Sion.

Beholde, my seruaunte shall deale wiselye, therfore shall he be magnified, exalted beare (for vnto vs it is spoken as wel as vnto the Jewes) bothe Saincte Paule teaches vs in the Epistle to the Ephesians the. vi. Chapter.

d. His face shall be so deformed, & not as a mans face. &c. That is, his visage shall be more deformed then other mennes: and his beutie fouler the the bewtye of the sonnes of men. The whole sentence meaneth, that manye men shall be astonished when they see Christe our sauour (which was exceedinge bewtyful before all the sonnes of men psa. xlv. a) so wickedlye and violently entreated of the Jewes: spit vpon, scourged, crowned with thorne and all be bloudyed: Yea, and greatly hubled, contemned and despised, then euer was any mortall man.

The. liii. Chapter.

He prophesieth euidentlye of the passion of our sauour Iesus Christe.

And * who geueth credence vnto our preachynge? Or to whom is the arme of the Lorde known? He shall growe before the Lorde lyke as a braunche, and as a rote in a drie groude, * he shall haue neither bewty nor fauour. When we loke vpon him, there shall be no fayrenes: we shall haue no lust vnto him. * He shall be the most simple, and despised of all, whiche yet hath good experience of sorowes and infirmities. We shall re-ken him so simple and so vile, that we shall hyde our faces from him. * Howe be it (of a trueth) he onely taketh away our infirmitie, and beareth our payne: Yet we shall iudge him, as though he were plagued and caste downe of God:

* Where as he (not withstandynge, shall be wondred at for our offences, & limit-ten for our wickednes. For the payne of our punishment shall be layde vpon him, and with his stripes shall we be healed.

* As for vs, we goe all a straye (lyke shepe) euerie one a touneth his owne waye. But thorow him the Lorde pardoneth all our synnes. He shall be pay-ned & troubled, and shall not open hys mouthe. * He shall be led as a shepe to be slayne, yet shall he be as styl as a lambe before the shearer, and not open hys mouth. He shall be had awaye, his cause not hearde, & without anye iudgement: Whose generacion yet no man may no-bye, when he shall be cut of tro & b groude of the lyuyng. Whiche punishmente shall goe vpon him for the transgression of my people. * Hys graue shall be geuen him with the condemned, and his crucifiengge w the theues. * Where as he dyd neuer violence nor vncyght, nether hathe there bene anye deceptfulnesse in his mouthe.

* Yet hathe it pleased the Lorde to linite him with infirmitie, that when he had made his soule an offering for sin, he mighte see a longe lastyng seed. And this deuice of the Lorde shall prospere in his hande. With trauayle & labour of hys soule, shall he obtayne great riches. * My righteous seruante shall with his wisdomme iustifie and delyuer the multitude, for he shall beate awaye their synnes. Therefore wyl I geue hym the multitude for hys parte, and he shall deuide the stronge spoyle by-cause he shall geue ouer hys soule to death, * and shall be rekened among the transgressours, which neuertheles shall take awaye the synnes of the multitude and make intercession for the misdoers.

sed is the man y<sup>e</sup> doth thys, and y<sup>e</sup> mans childe which kepeth the same. * He that taketh heede, that he vnhalowe not the Sabbath (that is) he that kepeth hym selfe y<sup>e</sup> he do no euil. Then shall not the stranger, which cleaueth to the Lorde, say: * Alas the Lorde hath shut me cleane out from his people. Nether shall * the gelded man say: lo, I am a dye tre. For thus saith the Lorde, fyrst vnto the gelded that kepeth my Sabbath: Namely, that holdeth greatly of the thyng that pleaseeth me, and kepeth my couenant: vnto them wyl I geue in my household & wythin my walles, a better herytage and name then yf they had bene called sonnes and doughters. * I wyl geue them an euerlastynge name, that shall not perishe. Agayne, he sayeth vnto the strangers that are dysposed to stycke to the Lorde, to serue hym, and to loue hys name: * That they shall be no bonde men. And all they, which kepe them selues, that they vnhalowe not the Sabbath, namely, that they fulfyll my couenant: Them wyl I brynge to my holy mountayne, and make them ioyfull in my house of prayer. Their burnt offrynges and sacrificees shall be accepted vpon myne auter, * for my house shall be an house of prayer for all people.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God which gathereth together the scatted of Israel: I wyl brynge yet another congregation to him. All the beastes of the felde, & all the beastes of the wod, shall come to deuoure him. * For his watchmen are all blynd, they haue all together no vnderstandynge, they are all domine dogges, not beyng able to barcke, they are slepyng: doggish are they, & lye snoztynge: they are shameles dogges, that be neuer satysfied. The sheperdes also in lyke maner haue no vnderstandynge, * but euery man turneth his owne way, euery one after his owne couetousnesse with all his power. * Come (say they) I wyl fetch wyne, so shall we fyll our selues, that we maye be droncken. And do to morowe, lyke as to daye, yea, and muche more.

The notes.

- a. By these blynde watchmen, vnderstande the chiefe priestes, the scribes, & pharises. &c. which were the peruerterers and depaunders of the lawe of God. These for falsly lakers sake abolyshed the true seruice of god: and were the chiefe causes of the forsakynge of Israel. They were slouggishe, and sought not that whiche was for the edificacyon of the people, and for the glory of God: but that whiche was for theyr owne priuare proffyte & pleasure. They were slouthful to roore out vyce and to plante vertue, and dyuyn in to y<sup>e</sup> profounde and depe slepe of ygnorance, of ydolynesse, of lecherousnesse, and of pryde. As oft as the prielates of the people, Byschoppes, Abbates, & they that auante them selues, for euegous be such: there hangereth a great scourge ouer y<sup>e</sup> whole flocke of Christ.

therfore ye charmers children, * ye son-nes of þ aduoutret & the whoze: wher-in take ye your pleasure: vpon whome gape ye with your mouth, & bleate oute uoutre. And a seide of dissimulacyon: Ye take your pleasure vnder the okes, and vnder all grene trees, þ chylde beyng slayne in the valleyes, and denmes of stone. Thy part shalbe with þ stony roc-kes by the ryuer: Yea, euē these shal be thy parte. For there thou haste powred meate & drinke offringes vnto thē. Shuld I ouerle that: Thou hast made thy bed vpon hye mountaynes, thou wentest vp thither, & there hast thou slayne sacry-fices. * Behynde the dozes and postes, hast thou set vp thy remembraunce.

When thou haddest dyscouered thy selfe to another then me, when thou wē-test downe & made thy bed wyder (that is) when thou didest carue the certayne of yonder Idols, and louedest theyr coun-ches, where thou sawest them. Thou wentest streyght to kyniges with * oyle and dyuers opyntmentes (that is) thou haste sente messangers farre of, and yet arte thou fallen into the pyt therby.

Thou hast had trouble for þ multitude of thine owne wayes, yet saydest thou neuer: I wyl leaue of. * Thou thynkest to haue lyfe (or health) of thy selfe, and therfore thou beleuest not that thou art sycke. For when wilt thou be abashed or feare seying thou hast broken thy promise, and remēbreest not me, nether haste me in thyne heart: Thinkest thou, that I also wyl holde my peace (as afore time) that thou fearest me not: Yea, verely I wyl declare thy goodnes & thy workes, but they shal not pryncipe the whē thou cryest, let thy cholen heape deluyet the.
But the wynde shal take thē all away, and cary them into the ayre. * Neuer-theles, they that put theyr truste in me, shal inherit the land, and haue my holy hyll in possession.

And therfore thus he sayeth: * Make redye, make redye, and clesse the strete, take vp what ye can out of the way that leadeth to my people. For thus sayeth the hye and excellent, euen he that dwelleth in euertlastyngnesse, whose name is the holy one: * I dwel hie aboue & in the sanctuary, & with him also, that is of a contryte & humble sprite: * I may heale a troubled mynde, & a contrite heart. * For I chide not euer, & am not wrothe with out ende. But the blastynge goeth fro me, though I make the breath. I am wroth with him for his couetousnesse & luste, I synpte hym, I hyde me, and am angrye, when he turneth him selfe, & fo-loweth the by waye of hys owne herte.

But if I may se his ryght way agayne, I make him whole, * I leade him, and restore him vnto them whom he maketh ioyfull, and that were sorry for him. I make the frutes of thanksgyvinge. I geue peace * vnto theym that ate sarre of, and to them that are nye, saye I the Lorde, that make him whole. But the wycked are lyke the ragynge sea, þ can not rest, whose water cometh wyth the myre and grauel. Euen so the wycked haue no peace, saith my God.

The .lviij. Chapter.

The Lorde (by the mouth of the Prophecie) repro-ueth the people for theyr fastynges, which were full of hyppocrysy.

And therfore * crye now, as loude as thou canst. Leauē not of, lyft vp thy voyce lyke a trompet, & shewe my people their offences, & the house of Jacob their synnes. For they seke me daylye and wil knowe my waies, euen as it were a people that dyd ryghte, and had not forsaken the statutes of their God. They argue wit h me concernyng right iudge-ment, and wyl plete at the lawe wyth their god. * Wherfore fast we (say they) and thou seist it not: we put oute lyues to strapytenesse, and thou regardest it not.

* Beholde, when ye a fast, your luste remayneth styll: for ye do no lesse by-lence to your detters: lo, ye fast to strife and debate, and to synpte him with your fyt that speaketh vnto you. Ye fast not (as some tyme) that your voyce myght be hearde aboue. * Thyncke ye thys

Shulde that be called fasting, or a day that pleaseth the Lorde: But this fasting pleaseth not me, tyll the tyme be thou * lowse hym out of bondage, that is in thy daunger: that thou breake the ooth of wycked bargaynes, that thou let the oppressed go free, and take from them all maner of burthens. It pleaseth not me, till thou * deale thy bred to the hongry, and bying the poze fatherlesse home into thy house, when thou seest the naked that thou couer hym, and hyde not thy face from thyne own flesh.

* Then yf thou callest, the Lorde shall answer the: yf thou cryest, he shall say: here I am. Yea, yf thou layest awaye thy burthens, and holdest thy fingers, and ceaseest from blasphemous talking, * yf thou hast compassyon vpon the hungry, and refresthest the troubled soule: Then shall thy lyght sprynge out in the darcknesse, and thy darcknesse shall be as the noone daye. Then shalt thou haue thy pleasure in þ Lord, whiche shall carpe the hye aboue the earth, and fede þ wyth þ heritage of Jacob thy father: for þ LORDS owne mouth hath so promysed.

The Notes.

a. This fast remaineth yet among the Christen.

for true chastening of the bodye and abstynynge from vice will we get nerher vnderstand nor heare of: but syl thynke with the Jewes both that we do God a great pleasure when we faste, and also þ we then fast, when we absteyne fro one thyng, & syl our helpe with another. And verely in this thing doeth our supersticiõ exceede the supersticiõ of the Jewes. for we neuer reade that they euer toke it for a fast to absteyne from fleshe, and eate ether fleshe or whit meate (as they call it.)

The. lix. Chapter.

The Lorde is myghty to saue, and ready to heare our requestes.

Beholde, * the Lordes hand is not so shortened that it can not helpe, neither is hys eare so stopped þ it maye not heare.

But * youre mylde dedes haue separated you from your GOD, and youre * synnes hyde his face from you, that he heareth you not. for youre handes are defyled wyth blod, and your fingers wyth buryghtuousnesse: Your lippes speake lesynges, and your tonge setteth oute wyckednesse. No man regardeth ryghtuousnesse, and no manne iudgeth truely. Euery man hopeth in bayne thynges, and ymagyneth deceate, * conceaueth weerynes, and bringeth forth euell. They a brede cockatrice egges, and weue the spyders web. Who so eateth of their egges, dyeth. But yf one treade vpon them, there commeth by a serpent. Their webbe maketh no clothe and they may not couer them wyth theyr labours. They dedes are the dedes of wickednes, & the worke of robbery is in theyr handes.

* Their fete rûne to euill, & they make hast to shed innocent blod. Their counsels are wycked counsels, harme and * destruction are in their wayes. But the way of peace they knowe not. In theyr goynges is no equite, their wayes are so crooked, that whosoener goeth therin, knoweth nothyng of peace.

And this is the cause that equite is so farre from vs, and that ryghtuousnes commeth not nye vs. * We loke for lyghte, lo, it is darcknesse: for the moorninge thyne, se, we walcke in the darck. * We grope lyke the bynd vpon þ wal, we grope euen as one that hathe none eyes. We stamble at the none daye, as thoughe it were towarde nyghte: in the fallynge places, lyke men that are halfe deade. We roare all lyke

Beetes

Beeres, and mourne styll lyke doves.
We loke for equyte, but there is none: for health, but it is farre from vs. For our offences are many before the, & our sinnes testifie against vs. Yea, we must confesse that we offend, and knowledge that we do amysse: Namely. transgresse and dissemble agaynst the Lorde, and fal away fro our God: vsing presumptuous & traitorous ymaginacions, and castyng false matters in our hertes.

And therfore is equite gone awyde, and ryghtuousnes standeth farre of: * truth is fallen down in the strete, and y thing that is plaine and open, may not be the-
wed. Yea, the truth is layde in pryson, and he that refrayneth hym selfe fro euell, must be spoyled.

When the Lorde saw this, it dyspleased him soze, that there was no where any equite. He saw also, that there was no man, which had pitie thereof, or was grieved at it. And he helde him by hys owne power, & cleued to his owne righ-tuousnes. * He put ryghtuousnes vpon him for a brest plate, and set the helmet of health vpon his heade. He put on wrathe in steade of clothyng, and toke gelously about him for a cloake: (like as when a man goeth forth wronfullye to recompence hys enemyes, and to be auenged of his aduersaryes.) Namely, that he myght recompence and reward the Alandes wherthorowe the name of the Lorde myght be feared, from the ri-syng of the Sunne: and his magesty, e vnto the goynge downe of the same.

For he shall come as a violent wa-terstreame, whiche the wynde of y Lorde hathe moued. * But vnto Syon there shall come a redemer, and vnto them in Jacob that tourne from wyckednesse, sayth the Lorde. I will make thys couenaunt with them (saith y Lorde): My spete that is come vpon the, & the wor-des whiche I haue put in thy mouth, shall neuer go out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy childers chyldre, fro this tyme forth for euermore.

The. lxii. Chapter.

Of the redemption promysed to the people

What is he this, y cometh from Edō, wyth stayned read clothes of Bofra: (whyche is so costly cloth) and cometh in so mynibly w al his strength: I am he that teacheth ryghtuousnes, & am of power to helpe. Wherefore then is thy clothing read, & thy rayment lyke his that treadeth in the wyne presse? I haue trodden the presse my selfe alone, and of all people, there was not one with me. Thus haue I troden downe myne enemyes in my wrath, and set my fete vpon them in my indygnacyon: And their bloude sprang vpon my cloothes, and so haue I stayned all my rayment. * For the day of vengeance y I haue taken in hand, & the yeaere of my delyueraunce is come. I looked aboute me, & there was no mā to shew me any helpe, I fel downe, & no man helde me vp. Then I helde me by myne own arme, and my feruentnes susteyned me. And thus haue I troden downe the people in my wrath, and basched the in my displeasure: In so much that I haue shed their bloude vpon the earth.

* I wyl declare the goodnesse of the Lorde, yea, & the prayse of the Lorde for

But after they prouoked hym to wrath and vexed his holy mynde, he was their enemy, and fought agaynst them him selfe. Yet remembred he the olde tyme of Moses and his people: * Howe he brought the from the water of the sea, as a shepherd * doeth with his shepe: howe he had geuen his holpe sprete amonge them: how he had led Moses by the ryghte hande with his glorious arme: how he had deuyded the water before them (whereby he gatte hym self an euerlasting name) howe he ledde the in the depe, as an horse is ledde in the playne, that they shoulde nat stoumble. How is it, that thy gelousye, thy strength, the multitude of thy mercyes and thy lounge kyndnesse, will not be entreated of vs. Yet arte thou * oure father: For Abraham knoweth not vs, neyther is Israell acquainted with vs. But thou Lorde art our father and redeemer, a thy name is euerlastyng. O Lord, * wherfore hast thou led vs oute of thy waye: wherfore hast thou hardened our hertes, that we feare the not: Be at one with vs again, for thy seruantes sake that are of the generacion of thyne herprage. Thy people hath had but litle of thy Sanctuary in possession, for oure enemyes haue taken it in: And we are become euen as we were from the begynnyng: but thou art not they: Lorde, for they haue not called vpon thy name.

haue set vp an aulter vnto fortune, and geuen ryche dryncke offerynges vnto treasure. Therefore wyll I nombze you so sweareth vpon earth, shall sweare in the trewe GOD. For the olde enmitye shall be forgotten, and taken away oute

So shall youre sede and youre name contynue and there shalbe a new Moone for the other, & a new Sabbath for the other, and al fleshe shal come to worship before me (sayeth the Lorde.) And they shall go forth and loke vpon the carjons of them þe haue transgressed agaynst me. * For theyr wormes shall not dye, nether shal their fyre be quenched, and al fleshe shall abhorre them.

The ende of the booke of the Prophete Esay.

The notes.

a. Where shall now the house stande. &c. As who would saye: Wherto make ye me a temple of manshand workes, which rule the whole world? Wherto haue I suffered the temple, to kepe you Jewes in a certayne maner of instructyon, and as bedie: and chose you one place for your seruice, to thynke that ye should not fall to the Idoles of the Gentyles. But now wyll I haue all Idoles banished, and for Ierusalem wyll I challenge vnto me the whole worlde, for one people all the dwellers vpon the earthe, whiche shalbe my worshippers in spirite and in trueth. John, iiii. I wyll not be superstitious ye worshipped with sacrifices and ceremonies in the temple, but with rightuousnes, with faythe, and with the spirite. The same songe that the prophete here spyngeth in the latter ende of his prophecie, sang he before in the begynnyng, each in the fyfte Chapter. Let the christen note these two Chapters (I meane the fyfte, and laste) well, and then shall they perceyue, how greatlye God abhorreth suche Apocrypte workes done without fayth, although they seame & appeare outwardly to be most godlye.

b. That is, there shalbe a perpetuall feast and a perpetuall rest. They shall not then kepe the Sabbath after the maner of the Jewes, nor make difference betwene daye and day, but they shal kepe a contynuall Sabbath, and neuer do seruile workes, that is synnes. Then shall they alwayes bee in the temple, that is, alwayes shall they prayse God, in spirite and trueth, as well in aduersitie as in prosperitie. They shall neyther runne vnto Idoles nor aye creatures, but shall worshype the Lorde onelye.

The booke of the prophet Ieremye.

The fyfte Chapter.

The booke of Ieremy, and in what tyme he prophesied. He refuseth him selfe and would refuse the office of a prophete, because he is young and vnerpente. He is taught of the Lorde, and becometh bolde, God openeth vnto him, that the destruction of the Jewes, by the Babylonians, is at hande. Ieremye is commaunded to speake the worde of God vnto the Jewes, without feare.

These are the Sermons of Ieremy þe sonne of helkiah þe preeft, one of the that dwelt at Anathoth in the lande of Benjamin: when the Lord had fyrst spoken wyth him, in the tyme of Josiah the sonne of Amon kinge of Iuda, in the. xiii. yeare of his kingdome: and so duryng vnto the tyme of Iehoakim the sonne of Josiah kinge of Iuda, * and vntyll the. xi. yeares of Iedekiah þe sonne of Josiah kyng of Iuda wer ended: when Ierusalem was taken, euen in the fift Moneth. in thy mothers wombe, I did know the.

B And or euer thou wast borne, I sanctified the, and ordeyned the, to be a prophete vnto the people. Then sayde I:

* Oh Lorde God, I am vnnmete, for I am yet but younge. And the Lorde answered me thus: Saye not so, I am to pounge. * For thou shalt goo to all that I shal sende the vnto, * and whatsoeuer I commaunde the, I shalt thou speake. Be not afraied of theyr faces, for I will be w the, to deliuer the, sayth the Lord.

* And with that, the Lorde stretch- ed out his hand, & touched my mouth, and sayd mozeouer vnto me. Behold, I put my wordes in thy mouth, and this daye do I sette the ouer the people and kingdomes: that thou maiest roote out, breake of, destroy, & make waste: That I may it build by a plant. After this, I Lord spake vnto me, saying: Jeremye, what seest thou? And I sayd: I se a wa- kyng rod. Then sayd I Lord: thou hast sene right, for I wyl watch diligently vpon my worde, to perfoyme it.

It happened afterwarde, that the Lorde spake to me againe, and sayde: What seyst thou? And I sayde: I do se a seethinge * pot, lokynge from oute of the northe hytherwarde.

Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Out of the northe shall come a plage vpon all the dwellers of the lande. For lo, I wyl cal al the officers of the kingdomes of the north (sayeth the Lord.) And they shall come, and euery one shall sette hys seate in the gates of Ierusalem, and in all theyr walles round aboute, and thoro- uwe all the cyties of Iuda. And thou row them shal I declare my iudgement vpon all the wyckednesse of those men, that haue forsaken me: that haue offred vnto straunge goddes and worshipped the workes of theyr owne handes.

* And therfore gyde by thy loy- nes, aryse, and tell them all, that I geue the in comaundement. Feare them not, I wyl not haue the to be afraied of the. * For beholde, thys daye do I make the a stronge fenced towne, an yron ppyler, and a wall of stele agaynst the whole lande, agaynst the kinges and myghtie men of Iuda, against the pcestes and people of the lande. They shall fyght a- gaynst the, but they shall not be able to ouercome the: for I am with the, to de- lyuer thee, sayeth the Lorde.

The Notes.

a. It is a necessarye thinge to the vnderstandinge of the propheetes, to know the times of the times. wherein they prophesied. The storyes of Ieremye tyme ye haue in the fourth of the kynges, from the xxi. Chapter to the ende of the booke: & in the seconde of the Chronicles, from the xxi. chapter to the ende also. He prophesied aboute. xli. yeares.

b. I sacrificed the. &c. That is, I dedicated, chose, appoynted, and prepared, and set the asyde, to be a prophete vnto the people. So in Iohn. p. g. Say ye then vnto him, whome the father hath sancti- fied. &c. That is, hath chosen. &c.

c. For a Propheet or Preacher to gyde by hys loy- nes, is boldelye and constantly, to resyst the false opinion, and doctrine of the wycked, and euen to empynte in them the worde of truely (which en- gendreth hate) whether they wyl or no: and that not ones or twyse, but vntill suche tyme as they exther amende, or elles wape angrye and furuous with it. Yea, and then to sette more by the com- maundemente of the Lorde, then by the power and tyrannye of this worlde: and not to set by the thyrninges of rulers, which can do nothing but that whiche God permitteth and suffereth: them: therefore are they not to be feared of an obedi- ent & faithfull seruant of the Lorde.

The. ii. Chapter.

God reherceth hys benefices done vnto the Jewes. Agaynst Pcestes and Propheetes, or preachers that contemne and despise God. The Jewes are destroyed, because they forsoke God, and because they ran a whorle huntynge after 3 doles.

Mozeouer, the word of I Lord comaunded me thus: Go thy waye, crye in the eares of Ierusalem, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde: I remembre the for the kyndnesse of thy youthe, and because of thy stedfaste loue: in that thou folowest me thoro- uwe the wyldernes, in an vntylled lande. Thou Israell wast halowed vnto the Lorde, and so was his fyrste frutes. * All they that deuoured Israell, offended: my fortune fell vpon them, sayeth the LORDE. Heare therfore the worde of the LORDE, O thou house of Iacob, and al I generacio of the house of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde vnto you.

What unfaithfullnesse founde your fathers in me, that they wente so farre awaye from me, falling to lychtnesse, and beyng so vayne? ## The. iiii. Chapter.

The true repentance or returnyng to God. He boistereth to the circumcysion of the herte. The destruction of Jewry is prophesied, for the malice of their herte.

Israell, if thou wylte turne the, then turne
vnto me, saith y lord.
And if thou wilt put away thine abhominacyons oute of my syght, thou shalt not be moued: * And shalt swear: The Lord lyueth: in truth, in equitie & rightuous-nesse: and all people shall bee fortunable and ioyfull in him. For thus saith the Lorde, to all Iuda and Ierusalem: plowe your lande, and sowe not among the thornes.

* Be circumcysed in the Lorde, and cut away the foreskynne of your her-tes, al ye of Iuda, and al the indwellers of Ierusalem: * that my indignacyon breake not oute like fyre and kyndle, so y no man may quench it, because of the wickednes of your ymaginacions.

* Preache in Iuda and Ierusalem, crie oute and speake: blowe the trompet tes in the land, cry that euery man may heare, and saye: Gather you together, a we wyl go in to strong cyties. Set vp the token in Sion, speeche you & make no taryng: * for I wyl bring a great plague & a greate destruccyon from the northe.
For the spoyler of the Gentylles is broken vp from his place, as a lyon out of his denne, that he maye make the lande waste, and destroye the cities, so that no man may dwel therein. Wherefore gyrd a mourne and wepe, for þe fearful wrath of the Lorde shall not bee withdrawn from you.

C At the same tyme (sayeth the Lorde) the hert of the kyng and of the prynces shall be gone, the prestes shall be astonied, and the prophetes shall be sore afraied. Then sayde I: O Lorde God, haste thou then disceaued this people and Jerusalem, sayenge: * ye shall haue peace, and now the swearde goethe thorow their lyues. Then shall it bee sayde to the people and to Jerusalem: b there cometh a warre wind from the north thorow the waye of my people, but neither to faime, nor to cleanse.

D After that shall there come vnto me a strong winde, and the wil I also geue sentence vpon them. For lo, he cometh downe lyke as a cloude, and his charrettes are lyke a stormy wynde: his horsemen are swifter then the Eagle. Wo vnto vs, for we are destroyed. O Jerusalem, * wache thyne herte frome wyckednesse, that thou mayest be helped. How longe shall thy noisom thoughtes remaine with the?

For a voice from Dan and from the hill of Ephraim speaketh out, and telleth of a destruccion. Beholde, the Hea: then geue Jerusalem warnyng, and preache vnto her, that her destroyers are comyng frome farre countrees. They tell the cyties of Iuda the same also, they shall geue them warnyng in euery place, lyke as the watche men in the felde. For they haue prouoked me to wrath, sayeth the Lorde.

C * Thy waies and thy thoughtes, haue broughte the vnto this, this is thyne owne wyckednesse and dysobedience, that hath possessed thyne herte: Ah my belye, ah my belye, (shalt thou cry) how is my hearte so sore: my hearte panteth within me, I can not be styl, for I haue herde the cryng of the trompettes and peales of warre.

They crye murther vpon murther, the whole lande shall perishe. Immediatlye my tentes were destroyed, and my hangynges, in the twyncklyng of an eye. Howe longe shall I se the tokens of warre, and heare the noyse of the trompettes.

Neuerthelesse this shall come vpon them * because my people is become foolyshe, and hath vtterlye no vnderstandinge. * They are the chyldren of folyshnes, and wythout any discrecion. To do euell, they haue wytte ynough: but to do wel, they haue no wysdome. I haue looked vpon the earthe, and se, it is waste and voyde. I looked towarde heauen, and it had no shyne.

I behelde the mountaynes, and they trembled, and all the hylles were in a feare. I looked aboute me, and there was no bodye, and all the byrdes of the ayre were awaye. I marked wel, and the plowed felde was become waste: yea, all theye cittytes were broken downe at the presence of the Lorde, and indignacion of his wrath.

For thus hath the Lorde sayde: The whole lande shall be desolate, yet wyll I not then haue done. And therefore let the earthe mourne, and let the heauen be sorre aboute: for the thyng that I haue purposed and taken vpon me to do, shall not repente me, and I wyll not go from it. The whole lande shall fle: for the noyse of the horsemenne and bowmen: they shall runne in to dennes, in to woddes, and clymme vp the stonye rockes. All the cyties shall be voyde, and no man dwellyng therein.

What wylte thou now do, thou beinge destroyed: * For thoughe thou clothest thy selfe with scarlet, and deckest the with golde: * though thou paintest thy face with colours, yet shalt thou tyme thy selfe in bayne.

For those that hitherto haue bene thy greate fauourers, shall abhorre the, & go about to slay the. For (me thinke) I heare a noyse, lyke as it were of a woman trauelyng, or one labouryng of her fyrste chyld: euen the voyce of the doughter Syon, that casteth oute her armes, and cowneth, saying: Ah wo is me, howe sore vexed and faine is my herte, for them that are slayne.

In Jewrye is there no ryghtwylle or faythfull man found, ether amongst the people or the rulers, for whome saith the Lord shoulde spare the ryght: wherfore Jewrye is desctroyed of the Assyrians.

Feare ye not me, sayeth the Lorde: Are ye not ashamed, to loke me in the face? whiche bynde the sea to the side, so that it can not passe his boundes: for though he it rage, yet can it do no thynge, and though he the waues therof do swell, yet maye they not go ouer.

I But this people hath a false and an obstinate heart, they are departed and gone awaye fro me. They thyncke not in their heartes: O let vs feare y Lorde oure God, that geueth vs raynedearly and late, when nede is: whiche kepeth euery styll the harvest for vs yearly.

Exe. lii. a

* Neuertheles your mysdedes haue turned these from you, and youre synnes haue robbed you herof. for among my people are founde wycked personnes, that priuely laye snares & wayte for men, to take the and destroye them.

G And lyke as a net is full of byrdes, so are their houses ful of that which they haue gotten with falschod and dysceate. Herof cometh their greate substaunce and ryches, herof are they fat & welthy, and are runne awaye fro me with shamefull blasphemies. * They minyster not the lawe, they make no ende of the fatherles cause, they iudge not the poore accorpyng to equite.

The spynnes for whiche Ierusalem is afflicted, and circumfised eares. Courteousnes. Discrey. The Lord reiecteth the sacrifyces of the Jewes. The comynge of the Babilonians is prophesied agayne.

I Come oute of Ierusalem, ye stronge chyliden of Ben Iamin: blowe vp the trumpet, saye ye: Cecuytes, set vp a token vnto Bethretem, for a plage and

I wyl lyken the doughter Syon to a fayre and tendre woman, and to her shall come the shepherdes with their flockes. Their tentes shall they pitche rounde aboute her, and euery one shall fede them that are vnder his hande.

Make battel agaynst her (shal they saye) Arise, let vs go bp, while it is yet daye.

Some read: in his place or, hys parte.

Alas, the daye goeth awaye, and the night shadowes fal downe: Arise, let vs go bp by nyghte, & destroye her stronge holdes, for thus hathe the Lorde of hoostes commaunded.

Hew downe her trees, and set vp bulwoikes agaynst Ierusalem. This is the cytie that must be punished, for in her is all malyciousnes. Lyke as a condyte aboundeth in water, euen so this cytie aboundeth in wickednes. Robberie and vntygheousnesse is hearde in her, sorowe and woundes are euery there in my syghte. Amende the (O Ierusalem) lest I withdrawe my hearte from the, and make the desolate: & thy lande also, that no man dwel in it. for thus sayeth the Lorde of hoostes: The resydue of Israel shalbe gathered, as the remnaunte of grapes.

And therfore turne thyne hande agayne in to the basket, lyke the grape gatherer. But vnto whome shall I speake, whome shall I warne that he may take hede? Their eares are so vncircumcysed, that they may not heare.

Jer. llii. a and ix. b

Beholde, * they take the worde of God but for a scozne, and haue no luste therto. And therfore I am so full of thyne indignacion (O Lorde) & I may suffre no longer. Shede out thy wrath vpon the chyliden that are withoute, and vpon al yonge men. Yea, the man must be taken prisoner with y wyfe, and the aged with the crepel. Their houses with their landes and wyues shall be turned vnto straungers, whē I stretch out myne hande vpon the inhabitours of this lande, sayeth the Lord. * for fro the leest vnto y most, they hange al vpon couctousnes: & fro y prophet vnto y priest, they go al about w falschod & lies.

no peace at all. Therfore they muste be ashamed, for they haue comynitted abominacion. But howe shoulde they be ashamed, when they knowe nothyng, nether of shame nor good nurtoure.

Jerem. x. c.

* And therfore they shal fall amonge the flague, and in the houre when I shal byset them, they shall be broughte downe, sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: go in to the streates, consyde and make inquisicio for the olde waye: and yf it be the good and right waye, then go therin, that ye maye fynde rest for youre soules. But they saye: we wyl not walcke therin, and I wyl set watchemen ouer you, and therfore take hede vnto the voyce of the trumpet. But they saye: we wyl not take hede. Heare therfore ye Gentyles, and thou congregacion that knowe, what I haue deuyled for them. Heare thou earthe also: beholde, I wyl cause a * plage to come vpon this people, euen the frute of theyr owne ymaginations.

Then shal this crye be herde: Oure armes are feble, heuyenes and sorowe is come vpon vs, as vpon a woman trauelynge with childe. No man go forth in to the felde, no mā come vpon the hie strete: for the swearde and feare of the enemye shal be on euery syde.

The bellous are bren in the fyre, the leade is consumed, the melter melteth in vayne, for the euell is not taken awaye from them. ## The. vii. Chapter.

Jeremye is commaunded to shewe vnto the people the worde of God, which trusteth in the outwarde seruice of the temple, that healeth nothyng. The culler that shal happen to the Jewes for the despyse of their Prophetes. Sacrifices doth not the Lord cheefly requyre of the Jewes, but that they should obey his word Copneth.

These are the wordes that god spake vnto Jeremy: * Stande vnder the gates of the Lordes house, & crye oute these wordes there, w a loude voyce, & saye: Heare the word of the Lorde al ye of Iuda, & go in at this doore, to honour the Lord. Thus sayeth the Lord of Hostes the God of Israel. * Amende your wayes & youre counceils, and I wyl let you dwel in this place. Trust not in false lyngge wordes, sayinge: here is the temple of the Lorde, here is the temple of the Lorde, here is the temple of the Lorde.

But take hede,

ye truste in counceles, that begyle you and do you no good. For when ye haue stollen, murdered, comyncted aduou-trie, and perurte: when ye haue offred vnto Baal, folowinge straunge and vnknown goddes: Then come ye, & stāde before me in this house, (* whiche hath my name geuen vnto it, & saue: Tushē, we are absolved quite, though we haue done all these abhominacions.

* What: thynke you this house that beareth my name, is a denne of theues:
* And these thinges are not done priue-ly, but before myne eyes, sayeth y<sup>e</sup> Lord.
Go to my place in * Siloh, wherunto
I gaue my name afore tyme, and loke wel * what I dyd to the same place for the wyckednes of my people of Israel.
And now, though ye haue done al these dedes (sayeth the Lorde) and I my selfe rose vp euer by times to warne you and to commen with you, yet woulde ye not heare me: * I called, ye woulde not an-swere. * And therfore euen as I haue done vnto Siloh, so wyl I do this house, that my name is geue vnto (and that ye put youre trust in) yea, vnto the place that I haue geuen to you & youre fathers. And I shal thruste you oute of my syght, as * I haue caste out all your brethren the whole sēde of Ephraim.

* Therfore thou shalt not praye for this people, y<sup>e</sup> shalt nether geue thākes, nor byd prayer for thē: thou shalt make no intercession to me for them, for in no wyse wyl I heare the. Seyst thou not what they do in the cytyes of Iuda, and without Ierusalem: * The chylde gather stickes, the fathers kyndle the fyre, the mothers kneade y<sup>e</sup> dowghe, to bake cakes for the quene of heauen.

They powre oute dzyrke offringes vnto straunge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath: Howe be it they hurte not me (sayeth the Lorde) but rather confounded, and shame them selues.

And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde, my wrath and my indig-nacion shalbe poured oute vpon this place, vpon men & cattel, vpon y<sup>e</sup> trees in the felde and all frute of the lande, and it shal burne so, that no man maye quenche it.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel: * Ye heape vp youre burnte offringes with youre sacrifices, and eate y<sup>e</sup> fleshe. * But whē I brought your fathers out of Egypte, I spake no worde vnto thē of burnte offringes and sacrifices: but this I comaunded them, sayng: * herken and obey my voice, and I shal be youre God, and ye shal be my people: so that ye walcke in al y<sup>e</sup> wayes, whiche I haue commaunded you, that ye maye prospere.

* But they were not obedyent, they in-clyned not theyr eares there vnto, but wente after their owne imaginacions and after the mocions of their owne wicked herte, and so turned them selues a-wayne, and conuerted not vnto me. And this haue they done, from the time that your fathers came out of Egypte, vnto this daye.

* Neuertheles, I sent vnto them my seruauntes al the prophetes: I rose vp early and sente them worde, yet woulde they not herke, nor offre me theyr eares, but were obstynate and worse then their fathers. And thou shalt nowe speake all these wordes vnto them, but they shal not heare thee: thou shalt crye vpo thē, but they shal not answer the. Therfore shalt thou saye vnto them: this is the people, that nether heareth the voyce of the Lorde theyr God, nor receaueth his correccion. * Faythfulnes and truely is cleane roted oute of their mouthe.

Wherfore cut of thyne heere, & caste it awaye, take vp a complaynte in the whole lande for the Lorde shal caste a-wayne, and scatre the people, y<sup>e</sup> he is dys-pleased withal. For the chylde of Iu-da haue done cruel in my syghte, sayeth the Lorde. * They haue set vp their ab-hominacions, in the house that hath my name, and haue despyled it. They haue also buylded an aulter at * Topheth, which is in the valley of the chylde of Iu-da: y<sup>e</sup> they might burne their sonnes & daughters, which I neuer comaunded thē, nether came it euer in my thought.
And therfore beholde, y<sup>e</sup> dayes shal come (sayeth y<sup>e</sup> Lord) y<sup>e</sup> it shal no moze be called Topheth, or the valley of y<sup>e</sup> chylde of Iuda, but y<sup>e</sup> valley of y<sup>e</sup> slayne. * for in Topheth, they shal be buryed, because they shal els haue no rowme. * Yea, the dead bodies of this people shal be eaten vp of y<sup>e</sup> foules of y<sup>e</sup> ayre & wilde bestes they come shortly, & sponge a mounyng

F For there is a lamettable noyse hearde of Sion: O howe are we so sore destroyed? O howe are we so pyteously confounded? We muste forsake oure owne natural countre, and we are shut out of oure owne lodgynges. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde (O ye women) and let yours eares regarde the wordes of hys mouth: that ye maye lerne your doughters to mourne, and that euery one may teache her neyghboure, to make la-mentacion. Namely thus: Deathe is clymmyng by in at oure wyndowes, he is come in to our houses, to destroye the chylde before the doore, and the yong man in the strete.

B But tel thou playnely, thus sayeth whiche do mercede, equyte and ryghteousnes vpon the earth. * Therefore haue I pleasure in suche thynges, sayeth the Lorde. Beholde, the time cometh (sayeth the Lorde) that I wyll vylet a all them, whose foreskynne is vncircumci-sed. The Egipcians, the Jewes, yf Edomites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, * and the shauen Madianites, yf dwell in the wyldernes. For all the Gentyles are vncircumcysed in the fleshe, but all the house of Israel are vncircumcysed in the herte.

The notes

a. All (that is) as well the Jewes as the Gentyles: for the one is as free as the other. The Jewes are euyl as well as the Heathen, as touchyng the herte, although they be circumcysed, as touchyng the fleshe. Therefore are they here reckoned among the vncircumcysed.

The .x. Chapter.

The constellacions of yf starres are not to be feared.
Of the weakenes of Idoles, and of the power of God.
Of euell carates.

M Ear the worde of the Lorde, I that he speaketh vnto the, O thou house of Israel: Thus saith the Lorde: * Ye shall not learne after the maner of the Heathen, and ye shall not be afrayed for yf tokens of heauen: for the Heathen are afrayed of suche: yea, all the customes & lawes of the Gentyles are nothyng, but vannyte. * They hewe downe a tree in the wod with the hādes of the worcke man, and fashyō it with the axe: they couer it ouer with golde or syluer, they fasten it in nayles and hammers, yf it moue not.
It standeth as styfe as the palmie tree, it can nether speake nor go, but must be borne. * Be not ye afrayde of suche, for they can do nether good nor euell. But there is none lyke vnto the, O Lorde, and greate is the name of thy power. Who would not feare the? O what kynge of the Gentyles would not obeye the?

B For amonge all the wyse men of the Gentyles, and in all their kyngdomes, there is none that maye be lyckened vnto
the. They are all together vnlearned and vnwyse. All their connyng is but vannyte: namely, wod, syluer, whiche is brought out of Charis, and beaten to plates: and golde fro Ophir, * a worcke that is made with the hande of yf craftesman and the caster, clothed w yelow sylcke and scarlet: euen so is yf worcke of their wyse men all together. But the Lorde is a true God, a liuyng god, and an euerlastinge kyng. * If he be wroth, the earth shaketh: all the Gentiles may not abyde his indignacion.

* As for their goddes, it maye wel be sayde of them: they are goddes, that made nether heauen nor earth: therefore shall they perishe from the earthe, and from all thynges vnder heauen. But (as for oure God) he made the earthe with hys power, and with hys wysedome hath he synnyshed the whole compasse of the worlde, with hys discrecy-on hath he sprede oute the heauens.

At hys voyce the waters gather together in the ayre, * he draweth by the cloudes from the vttemoste partes of the earthe: he turneth lychtenyng to rayne, and byngeth forth yf wyndes out of their treasures: His wysedome

Put away thyne vncleynesse out of þ lande, thou that arte in the stronge cityes. for thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I wil nowe thurst oure the inhabitours of this lande a great waye of, and trouble them of suche a fashion, that they shall no more be founde.

Alas, howe am I hurte: Alas, howe paynfull are my scourges vnto me: for I consydre this sorowe by my selfe, and I must suffer it. My tabernacle is destroyed, and all my coardes are broken. My chyldren are gone fro me, and can no where be founde. Howe haue I none to sprede out my tente, or to set vp my hangynges. for the herdmen haue done folyshlye, þ they haue not soughte the Lorde. Therfore haue they dealte vnwysely with their cattel, and all are scatered abrode. Beholde, the noyse is harde at hande, and greate sedycio out of the north: to make the cityes of Iuda a wyldernesse, and a dwellinge place for Dragons. * Howe I knowe (O Lord) that it is not in mas power to order his owne wayes, or to rule hys owne steppes and goynges. Therfore chasten thou vs, O lord, but with fauoure * and not in thy wrathe, byrge vs not vtterlye to noughte. * Poure oute thyne indignacion rather vpon the Gentyles, that knowe the not, and vpon the people that cal not on thy name: * And that because they haue consumed, deuoured and destroyed Jacob, and haue roted out hys glozpe.

The .xi. Chapter.

A curse of them that obey not the word of Goddes promise. The people of Iuda folowynge the steppes of theyr fathers, worshipped straunge Goddes. The lorde sayeth that he wyll not heare the Jewes, and forbyddeth also Jeremie to praye for them.

This is aliother Sermon, A whiche the Lorde commaunded Jeremie for to preache; sayinge: Heare the wordes of the couenaunt, and speake vnto all Iuda, and to all them that dwell at Ierusalem. And saye thou vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel: * Cursed be euery one that is not obedynt vnto the wordes of this couenaunt: which I comaunded vnto your fathers, what tyme as I brought them out of Egypt, from the * ydols fornaice, sayng: Be obedyente vnto my voice, and do according to al that I comaunde you: so shal ye be my people, and I wyl be your God, and wyl kepe my promyse, * that I haue sworne vnto your fathers: Namelye, that I would geue them a lande which floweth with mylcke and hony, as ye se, it is come to passe vnto this daye. Then answered I, and sayde. Amen. It is euen so Lorde, as thou sayest.

Then the Lorde sayde vnto me a gayne: preache this in the citles of Iuda and rounde aboute Ierusalem, and saye: Heare the wordes of this couenaunt, that ye maye kepe them. For I haue diligently exhorted your fathers, euer sence the tyme that I broughte them out of the lande of Egypt, vnto this daye. I gaue them warnynge by tymes, sayinge: herken vnto my voyce: * Neuertheles, they woulde not obey me, nor enclyne their eares vnto me, but folowed the wycked ymaginacions of their owne hertes. And therfore haue I accused them as transgressours of all the wordes of this couenaunt, that I gaue them to kepe, which they (not with vnderstandynge) haue not kepte.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me: It is founde out, þ whole Israel and al these citezens of Ierusalem are gone backe. They haue turned the selues to þ blasphemies of their forefathers, which had no lust to heare my word. Eue lykewise haue these also folowed straunge goddes, & worshipped the. The house of Israel & Iuda haue brokē my couenaute, whiche I made with their fathers.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I wyl sende a plage among you, whiche ye shall not be able to escape:

The Prophete maruellet greatly at the prosperite of the wycked, although he confesse God to be ryghteous. The Jewes are forsaken of the Lorde. He speaketh against Curates and preachers that seduce the people. The Lorde threatneth destruction vnto the nation p bordered vpon Jewrye, which troubled & vexed it.

Lord, thou art more ryghteous, then that I shoulde dispute w the: Neuertheles, let me talke with the in thynges reasonable.

Myne herytage is vnto me, as a speckled byrde, a byrde of diuerse coloures is vpon it. Goe hence, and gather all the beastes of the felde together, that they maye eate it vp.

Clap. lvi. c. * Diuerse herdmen haue broken downe my vineyarde, and troden vpo my porcion. Of my pleasaunte porcyon, they haue made a wyldernes and deserte. And after, by the peasable sure lande is vnderstande Anathoth, and by the pride of Iorda Ierusalem. The litle riuer of Anathoth is not to be compared to the greate flowinge streames of Iordan. If he were despised of hys owne auditoures howe shoulde he be hearde of other, and those greater and excellenter.

The. xlii. Chapter.

The destruction of the Jewes is prefigured, and their spacklynge abroad. Why Israel was reuealed to be the people of God, and why they were forsaken.

Moreouer, thus sayd the Lorde vnto me: Goe thy waye, and get the a linnen breche, and gyze it aboute thy loynes, and let it not be wete. Then I got me a breche, accordynge to the commaundemente of the Lorde, and put it aboute my loynes. After this, the Lorde spake vnto me againe: Take the brech that thou hast prepared and put it aboute the, and get thee vp, and goe vnto Euphrates, and hyde it in a hole of the rocke. So wente I, and hydde it, as the Lorde commaunded me. And it happened longe after this, that the Lorde spake vnto me. Up, and get thee to Euphrates, and fet the breche frome thence, whiche I commaunded thee to hyde there. Then wente I to Euphrates, and dygged vp, and toke the breche from the place where I had hyd it: and beholde, the breche was corrupt, so that it was profitable for nothyng.

D Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Euen so wyll I corrupte the pryde of Iuda, and the hye mynde of Ierusalem. This people is a wicked people, they wyl not heare my worde, they folow the wycked imaginations of their owne heart, & hange vpon straunge Goddes, then haue they serued and wurshypped: and therfore they shall be as this breche, that serueth for nothyng. For as straytelye as a breche lyeth vpon a mans loynes, so straytelye dyd I bynde the whole house of Israell, and the whole house of Iuda vnto me, sayeth the Lorde: That they myghte be my people: That they might haue a glorious name: that they myght be in honoure: But they woulde Thynckest thou we knowe not, that e-uery pot shalbe fylled with wine? Then shalt thou saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I shall fyll all the inhabitoures of thys lande wyth dronckenes, the kynges that sytte vpon Dauids stole, the Priestes and Prophetes, with all that dwell at Jerusalem. And I wyll shut them one agaynst another, yea, the fathers agaynste the sonnes, sayeth the Lorde.

I wyll not pardon them, I wyll not spare them, nor haue pitye vpon them: but destroye them. Be obeyente, gyue care, take no disdayne at it, for it is the Lorde hym selfe that speaketh. Honour the Lorde youre God hererin, or he take hys lyghte frome you, and or euer your fete stumple in darkenesse at the hyl:
lest when ye loke for y lyght, he tourne it into the shadowe and darckenesse of deathe. But yf he wyll not heare me, that geue you secrete warnynge, I wyl mourne fro my whole hearte for youre stubburnesse. * Piteously wyl I wepe, and the teares shal gush out of myne eyes. For the Lordes flocke shalbe carryed awaye captiue. Tell the Kyng and the ruelars: Humble youre selues, sette you downe lowe, for the crowne of youre glozpe shal fall frome youre heade. The cytyes towarde the South shalbe shut vp, and no man shal open them. All Juda shalbe carryed awaye captiue, so that none shal remayne.

Lyfte vp youre eyes, and beholde them, that come from the North: Lyke a fatte flocke shal they fall vpon thee.
* To whome wylte thou make thy moone, when they come vpon thee: for thou haste taughte them thy selfe, and made them maysters ouer thee. Shall not sorowe come vpon thee, as on a woman trauallynge with childe? And yf thou wouldest saye then in thine heart: Wherefore come these thynges vpon me? * Euen for the multitude of thy blasphemies, shal thy hynder partes and thy fete be discouered. For lyke as the man of Jude maye chaunge hys skynne, and the catte of the mountayne her spottes: So maye ye that be exercised in euell, doe good. Therfore wyl I scatter you, lyke as the stubble that is taken awaye with the Southe wynde.

Thys shal be youre porcion, and the porcion of youre measure, wherewith ye shal be rewarded of me, sayeth the Lorde: Because ye haue forgotten me, and put youre truste in deceitfull thin-
ges. * Therfore shal I tourne thy clothes ouer thy heade, and discouer thy thyghes, that thy pryncyples maye be sene, thy aduoutre, thy deadly malice, thy beastlinesse and thy shameful whor-dome. For vpon the feldes and hylles I haue sene thy abhominacions. Woe be vnto the (O Jerusalem) when wylte thou euer be clemed anye more?

The. xliii. Chapter.

Of the darthe that shoulde come in Jerwyre. The prayer of the people askynge mercey of the Lorde, The unfaythfull people are not hearde. Of prayer, fastynge and of false prophetes that seduce the people.

He woorde of the Lorde shewed vnto Jeremye, I concernynge the darthe of the frutes. Juda shal mourne, men shal not goe muche more thorow hys gates: The lande shalbe no moore had in reputacion, and the crye of Jerusalem shal breake oute. The lordes shal sende their seruauntes to fetch water, and when they come to the welles, they shal fynde no water, but shal carie their vesselles home empty. They shal be ashamed and contounded, and shal couer theyre heades. * For the grounde shalbe dryed vp, because there cometh no rayne vpon it. The plowes men also shalbe ashamed, and shal couer their heades. The wynde shal forsake the yonge sawne, that he bringeth forth in the felde because there shal be no grasse. The wyld Asses shal stande in the Masse, and drawe in their wynde like y Dragons, their eyes shal fayle for wante of grasse.

Doutles oure owne wickednesse re-warde vs: But Lorde doe thou accordunge to thy name, though oure transgressions and synnes be manye. * For thou arte the conforste and helpe of Israell in the tyme of trouble. * Why wylte thou be as a straunger in the lande, and as one that goeth ouer the felde

felde, and cometh in onely to remaine for a nyghte. Why wylte thou make thy selfe a coward, and as it were a Gyaunte that yet maye not helpe.
For thou arte ours (O Lorde) and we beare thy name, therfore forsake vs not.

Then spake the Lorde, concerning thys people that haue pleasure to goe to nymblve with their fete, and leaue not of, and therfore displease the Lord:
in so muche, that he wyl nowe brynge agayne to remembraunce all their mil-dedes, and punyche all their synnes.
Yea, even thus sayd the Lord vnto me:
*Thou shalt not praye to doe this people good. * For though they faste, I wyl not heare their prayers. And though they offer burnt offerynges and sacrifices, yet wyl I not accepte them. For I wyl destroy them with the swerde, hunger and pestilence. Then answered I: O Lorde God, the *prophetes saye vnto them: Tush, ye shal see no swerde, and no hunger shal come bp on you, but the Lord shal geue you continual rest in this place.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me. The Prophetes preache lyes vnto them in my name. I haue not *spoken with the, neither gaue I them anye charge, neither dyd I lend the: yet they preach vnto you false billions, charmyng vanetie, and deceitfulnesse of their owne heart. Therfore thus sayeth the Lord:
As for those prophetes that preache in my name (whome I neuertheless haue not sent) and that saye: tush, there shal neither battell nor hunger be in thys lande: * With swerde and with hunger shall those prophetes perishe, and the people to whome they haue preached shall be caste oute of Jerusalem, dye of hunger, and be slayne with the swerde (*and there shall be no man to burye them) bothe they and their wiues, their sonnes and their daughters. For thus wyl I polvre their wickednesse vpon them. This shalte thou saye also vnto them: * Myne eyes shall wepe without ceasynge daye and nyghte. For my people shall be destroyed wth great harne, and shall perishe wth a great plage. For yf I goe into the felde, lo, it lyeth all full of slayne men: If I come into the citie, lo, they be all famished of honger.

Yea, theyre Prophetes also and Priestes shall be ledde into an vnkn-wen lande.

Haste thou then vtterlye forsaken Juda: (sayde I) doest thou so abhorre Sion: Or haste thou so plagued vs; that we can be healed no moore: * Wee loked for peace, and there cometh no good: for the tyme of healthe, and loe, here is nothyng but trouble. We knowledge (O Lorde) all oure misde-des, and the synnes of oure fathers, that we haue offended the. Be not displeased (O Lorde) for thy names sake, *forget not thy lounge kyndenes: remembere the trone of thyne honoure, breake not y couenaute, that thou haste made with vs. * Are there any amonge the Goddes of the Gentyles, that sende rayne or geue the showres of heauen: Doest not thou it (O Lorde oure God) in whome we truste: Yea, Lorde, thou doest al these thynges.

The Notes.

a. Why wylt thou be as a straunger. &c. As who saye. Thou behauest thy selfe vnto vs as a stranger, or as a wayfaringe man: for thou settest not by vs, nor disposdest thy strengthes to helpe vs.
d. Somerday, but thou, O Lord, art in y middes of vs: and thy name is called on, of vs.

The .xv. Chapter.

The Lorde wyl not heare Moyses or Aarons, if they pray for y people, but wyl wrappe them in manye miseries, The cause of such great myseryes.

Then spake the Lorde vnto me, & said: * though Moyses and Samuell
stode before me, yet haue I no heartte to thys people. Dyrue them awaye, that they may go out of my syght. And yf they saye vnto the: Whyther shall we goe: Then tell them: The Lord geueth you thys answer: * Some vnto deathe, some to the swerde, some to hunger, some into captiuite. For I wyl brynge foure plagis vpon them sayeth the Lorde. The swerde shall strangle them, the dogges shall deuoure them, * the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the earthe shall eate them vp, and de-stroye them. I wyl scatter them about also in all kyngedomes and landes to be plagued, bycause of * Manesseth the

Moreouer, thus sayd the Lorde vnto me: Thou shalt take the no wyfe, nor beget childre in this place. For of the children that are borne in thys place, of their mothers that haue borne them, and of their fathers that haue begottē them in this lande, thus sayeth the Lorde: They shall dye an horrible deathe, * no man shall mourne for them, nor burie them, but they shall lye as donge vpo the earth. They shall pershe thorow the swearde and hunger, * and their bodyes shall be meate for the foules of the ayre, & beastes of the earth. Agayne, thus sayeth the Lorde: Goe not vnto them, that come together, for to mourne and wepe: for I haue taken my peace frome this people (sayeth the Lorde) yea, my fauour & my mercy. And in this lande shall they dye, olde and yonge, and shall not be buried: no man shall shall betwene them, no man shall clyppe or haue hym selfe for them.

There shall not one viset another, to mourne with them for the dead, or to comforte them. One shall not offer another the cuppe of consolacion, to forget their heynesse for father and mother. * Thou shalt not goe into theyr feast house, to sytte downe, muche lesse to eate or dryncke with them. For thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: * Beholde, I shall take awaye out of this place, the voyce of myrthe and gladnesse, the voyce of the byde-grome and of the byde: Yea, and that in youre dayes, that ye maye see it.

Nowe when thou shewest this people all these wordes, and they saye vnto thee: * Wherefore hath the Lorde deuyled all this greate plage for vs?
Or what is the offence and synne, that we haue done agaynste the Lorde oure

God? Then make thou them this an-swere: * because your fathers haue forsaken me (sayeth the Lorde) and haue cleued vnto straunge Gods, whom they haue honozed and worshipped: But me haue they forsaken, & haue not kepte my lawe. * And ye with youre shamefull blasphemies, haue excedded y wickednesse of youre fathers. For euery one of you foloweth the frowarde & euell imagination of his owne harte, and is not obedient vnto me.

* Therefore wyll I caste you oute of this lande, into a lande that ye and your fathers know not: And there shall ye serue straunge Goddes daye and nyghte, there wyll I shewe you no fa-uoure. * Beholde, therfore (sayeth the Lorde) the dayes are come, that it shall no moore be sayde: The Lorde lyueth, whiche brought the children of Israel oute of the lande of Egypte: But (it shall be sayde) the Lorde lyueth, that broughte the children of Israel frome the North, and from all landes where I had scatred them. For I wyll bringe them agayne in to the lande, & I gaue vnto their fathers.

Beholde (sayeth the Lorde) I wyll sende out manye b*shpers to take the,
and after that wyll I sende oute manye hunters to hunte them oute, frome all mountaynes and hylles and out of the caues of stones. For myne eyes beholde all their wayes, and they can not be hyd fro my face, neither can their wicked dedes be kepte close oute of my syghte.

But first wyll I sufficientely rewarde their shamefull blasphemies and syn-nes, wherewith they haue despyled my lande: Namelye, with their stynckynge Idols and abhominacions, wherewith they haue fylled myne heretage. * O Lorde, my strength, my power, and refuge in tyme of trouble. The Gentyles shall come vnto thee frome the endes of the worlde, and saye: Verelye oure fathers haue cleued vnto lyes, their Idolles are but vayne and vn-profitable. Howe can a man make those his Goddes, whiche are not able to be Goddes. And therfore I wyll once teach them (sayeth the Lorde) I wyll shewe them my hande and power, that they maye knowe, that my name is the Lorde.

The Notes.

a. The manner of the prophetes commeth, is, first utterly to condemne, and after to releace and conforte the faythfull, as Jeremie doeth here in this chapter, and as it is used the whole scripture thorow.

b. By these sisters are vnderstand the hostes, by whom the Lorde scourged the Jewes, and fished awaye their euyls. At foure sondrie draughtes were foure of their kynge taken, and at euery tyme some of the cheaf people withal. But at the last in the tyme of zedeiah was al the rest of the people hunted out, of those cruel hunters & Chaldees.

The xvii. Chapter.

The frowardnesse of the Jewes. Cursed be those that put theyr confydence in man, and those blessed that trust to God. Hannes heart is wycked, God is the ser-cher of the heart. The luyng waters are forsaken. The holowynge of the Saboth is commaunded.

Oure synne (O ye tribe of Iuda) is written in the table of youre heartes, and grauen so vpon the edges of youre alters with a penne of pyron, and with an adamant clawe: that your children also maye thynke vpon your alters, woddes, thycke trees, hye hylles, mountaynes, and feldes.
* Wherefore, I wyll make all your substaunce and treasure be spoyled, for the great sinne that ye haue done vpon your hye places thorow out all the coastes of youre lande. Ye shall be caste out also from frome the herytage, that I gaue you. And I wyll subdue you vnder the he-uye bondage of youre enemyes in a lande that ye knowe not. for ye haue mynystred fyre to my indygnacyon, whiche shall burne euermore. Thus sayeth the Lorde: * Cursed be the man that putteth hys truste in man, and a that taketh steepe for hys arme: And he whose hearte departeth frome the Lorde. He shall be lyke the heeth, that groweth in the wyldernes. As for the good thinge that is for to come, he shal not see it: But dwell in a drye place of the wyldernes, in a salte and vnuccuped lande. * Blessed is the man that, putteth hys truste in the Lorde, and whose hope is the Lord him selfe. * for he shalbe as a tree, that is planted by the water syde: whiche spredeth oute the rote vnto moystnesse, whō the heate cannot harme, when it commeth, but his leaues are grene. And though there grow but lytle frute because of drouth, yet is he not carefull, but he neuer leaneth of to brynge forth frute. Amonge all thynges lyuynge, man hathe the mooste disceatfull and vnserchea-ble hearte.

Who shall then knowe it? * Euen I the Lorde seache oute the grounde of the hearte, and trye the reynes, and * re-warde euerye man accordynge to hys wayes, and accordynge to the fruite of his councelles.

* The disceatfull maketh a nest, but bryngeth forth the no yonge: He commeth by ryches, but not ryghtcoulye.
 In the myddest of his life must he leaue them behynde hym, and at the laste be founde a verpe foole. But thou (O Lorde) whose trone is mooste glorious, excellent and of mooste antiquite, why-che dwellest in the place of oure holpe rest: Thou arte the comforte of Israell.
 All they that forsake thee, shall be confounded: All they that departe frome thee, shalbe written in earthe, * for they haue forsaken the Lorde the very con-dite of the waters of lyfe.

Heale me (O Lorde) and I shall be whole: saue thou me, and I shall be saued, for thou arte my prayse. Beholde, these men saye vnto me: Where is the worde of the Lorde? Let it come, where as I neuerthelesse ledyge the flocke in thy wayes, haue compelled none by violence. for I neuer desired any mannes death, thys knowest thou well. My wordes also were ryght before thee. We not nowe terryble vnto me, O Lorde, * for thou arte he in whome I hope, whē I am in perel. Let my persecuters be confounded, but not me: let them be afrayde, and not me. Thou shalt brynge vpon them the tyme of their plage, and shalt destroye them right soze.

Agayne, thus hathe the Lorde sayde vnto me: * Goe and stande vnder the gate, where thorowe the people and the kynges of Iuda goe oute and in, yea, vnder al the gates of Jeru-salē, and say vnto thē: heare y worde of the Lorde, ye kinges of Iuda, & al thou people of Iuda, & all ye citezins of Jerusalem that goe thorowe thys gate: Thus the Lorde commaundeth: * take hede of youre lyues, y ye carye no burthen vpon you in the Saboth, to bryng it thorowe the gates of Ierusalem: Ye shall beare no burthen also out of your houses in the Sabboth. * Ye shall doe no labour therein, but halowe the Sabboth, * as I commaunded youre fathers. How be it they obeyed me not, neither herkened they vnto me: But were obstinate and stubburne, and neither obeyed me, nor receaued my correccion. Neuertheles, yf ye wyll heare me (sayeth the Lorde) and beare no burthen in to the citie thorowe thys gate vpon y Sabboth. If ye wyl halow the Sabboth, so that ye doe no woorkes therein: Then shal there goe thorow the gates of this citie, kinges and princes, that shall syt vpon the stole of Dauid:
 They shall be carryed vpon charettes, and ryde vpon horses, bothe they and their prynces. Yea, whole Iuda, and al the citezins of Ierusalē shal goe hert thorowe, and thys cytye shall euer be the more and more inhabited. There shall come men also frome the cities of Iuda, frome aboute Ierusalem, and from the lande of Ben Iamin, from the playne felde, frome the mountaynes and from the wyldernes: whiche shall brynge burnt offerynges, sacrifices, oblacyns, and incense, and offer bp thanckesgeuyng in the house of the Lorde

The notes

a. That taketh heede for his ayme, that is, that putteth his trust in anye thinge but in the Lord.
b. Ye shall do no labour therein, but halowe the Sabboth, as I commaunded your fathers. & c. The foundation of the saythe, is, to beleue Goddes promises, and that made the whole worlde, and doeth also gouerne it: And further that he knoweth and wyl iudge all thynges. & c. These thynges byd the lawe require in keepyng of the Sabboth, to confesse bothe with worde & signe: and to geue diligente heade to the hearyng and interpretinge of the lawe, to thinke of the glory of God, and to releue the faythful soule with the fodder of the word, to minister occasion also vnto the simple that they by hewise might attempte suche thynges in their houses amongst their household folkes, to be pitifull ouer the merynes of suche neighbours as laboured fore al y weke longe, and releate them, to attende and geue hede to the exerceyses of the spirite and to the consolation and comfortyng of their neighbours: Not onely to abstayne from outward woorkes, and fulfyl their appetites & lustes, for that byd the Lord forbide. The Sabboth shoulde be applyed to y leasful seruinge of God, not to sensynesse and wantones. It is commaunded to be sanctified, not to be polluted and defiled with noughtynesse. To God alone muste we also kepe it, and call on his name: other goddes or goddes scolours ought we not to enquire of, nor fall downe vnto them. But when such occasions come as turne our rest into occupation and labour, then ought we to remembre that the Sabboth was ordeyned for man, not man for the Sabboth. Mat. ii. d. so that in the meane reason, the feare of God and y charite towards oure neighbour whiche are the cheafe and princypall thynges in the obseruacion of the Sabboth, be not lightly regarded.

The .xviii. Chapter.

God sheweth by the example of a potter, that it is in hys power to destroye the despylers of hys word, and to helpe them agayne when they amende. The conspiracye of the Jewes agaynst Jeremye, hys prayer agaynst hys aduersaries.

Ays is another communicacyon, y God had with Jeremye, sayyng: Aryse, and goe downe into y potters house, and there shal I tell thee moore of my mynde. Nowe when I came to the potters house, I founde hym makynge his worke vpon a whele. The vessell that the Potter made of claye, brake amonge hys handes: So he beganne a newe, and made another vessell, accordyng to hys mynde. Then sayde the Lord thus vnto me: * May I not do w you, as thys Potter doeth, O ye house of Israell, sayeth the Lord: Beholde, ye house of Israel: ye are in my hande, euen as the claye is in the Potters hande.

* When I take in hande to rote out, to destroye, or to waste away any people or kyngedome, & yf that people (agaynst whome I haue thus deuyled) conuert from their wickednes: I immediately, I repent of y plage that I deuised to bringe vpon them. * Agayne: When I take in hande, to buylde, or to plante a people or a kyngdome: yf the same people doe euell before me, and heare not my voyce: I immediately, I repente of the good, that I deuyled to doe for them.

Speake nowe therefore vnto whole Iuda, and to them that dwell at Ierusalem: Thus saith the Lord: beholde, I am deuylyng a plage for you, and am takynge a thyng in hande agaynst you.

* Therefore let euerye man turne fro his euell waye, take vpon you y thyng that is good, and doe ryghte. But they saye: No more of thys, * we wyl folowe oure owne ymaginacyons, and do euerye man accordyng to the wylfulnesse of his owne mynde.

Therefore thus sayeth y Lord: aske amonge the heathen, yf any man hath hearde suche horrible thynges, as the daughter of Sio hath done. Shall not the snowe (that melteth vpon the stony rockes of Libanus) moisten the felde: Or make the sprynges of waters be so grauen awaye, that they runne no more, geue moystnes, nor make frutes full: But my people hath so forgotten me, that they haue made sacrifice vnto bayne Goddes. And while they folowed their owne wayes they are come oute of the hye strete, and gone into a fote waye not bled to be troden. Where thorowe they haue broughte their land into an euerslastyng wyldernesse and scoyne: * So that who so euer traualleth therby, shal be abashed, and wagge their heades. The. xix. Chapter.

The prophete the destruction of Ierusalem, for the contempne and despisinge of the worde of God.

Moreouer, thus said the Lord vnto Jerempe: Goe thy way, and bye the an earthen pytcher, and brynge forth the Senatours, and chese priestes into the valley of the children of Hennom, which lieth before the poorte that is made of bricke, & shewe them there the wordes, that I shal tell the, and saye thus vnto them: Heare the worde of the Lorde, ye kynges of Iuda, and ye citezynes of Ierusalem: * Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will brynge suche a plage vpon thys place, that the eares of al that heare it, shal glow. And y because they haue forsaken me, and vnhalowed thys place, and haue offred in it vnto straunge goddes: whom neither they, their fathers, nor the kynges of Iuda haue knownen. They haue fylled thys place also with the bloude of innocetes, * for they haue sette vp an aulter vnto Baal, to burne their children for a burnt offering vnto Baal, which I neither commaunded, nor charged the, neither thought ones ther vpon.

Beholde therefore, the tyme cometh (sayeth the Lorde) that thys place shal no moore be called. a Topheth, nor the valley of y children of Hennom, but the valley of slaughter. For in thys place will I slaye the Senatours of Iuda & Ierusalem, & kyll them downe with the swerde in y sight of their enemies, and of the y seke their lyues. And their deed carcales wil I geue to be meate for the foules of the ayre, and bestes of the felde. And I will make thys cytye so desolate, and despyled: * That who so goeth therby, shal be abashed and least vpon her, because of al her plages.

* In Topheth shal they be buryed, for they shal not haue none other place. Thus wyl I doe vnto thys place also, sayeth y Lorde, and to them that dwell therein: Yea, I wyl doe to this citie, as vnto Topheth (for the houses of Ierusalem & the houses of y kynges of Iuda are defyled, lyke as Topheth) because of al y houses, in whose parlors they did sacrifice vnto all the hoozte of heauen, and poured out dryncke offerpnyges vnto straunge Goddes. And so Jerempe came fro Topheth, where the Lord had sent him to prophecie, and stode in the courte of the house of the Lorde, and spake to al the people: Thus sayeth the Lorde

The .xx. Chapter.

Jeremy is smytten and cast into prison, for preaching of the word of God. He prophesyeth þ captiuitie of Babilon. He complayneth þ he is a mocking stocke, for the word of God. He is compelled by the sperte to preache þ worde, wyll he wyll he not.

When Whaſhur þ pꝛieſt, þ ſonne of Emmer, chief in the houſe of þ Lord, heard Jeremy pꝛeache ſo ſtedfaſtly: he * ſinote Jeremy, & put him in þ ſtockes, that ate by the hye gate of Bē Jamin, in the houſe of the Lord. The nexte day folowynꝝ Whaſhur brought Jeremy out of the ſtockes againe. The ſayde Jeremy vnto hym: The Lord ſhall call the no moze Whaſhur (that is excellent and increaſynꝝ) but Magor, (that is, fearful & aſtrayed) euery where. For thus ſayeth the Lord: beholde, I wyll make the aſtrayed, euē thy ſelfe, and all that fauour the: which ſhall perſhe with the ſwerde of their enemyes, euē befoze thy face.

B And I will geue whole Iuda vnder the power of the kynge of Babylon, whiche ſhall carye ſome vnto Babylon prifoners, and ſlaie ſome with ſweard.

* Mozeouer, all the ſubſtaunce of this lande, all theyꝝ pꝛecyous and gorgious workes, all coſtlyneſſe, and all the treaſure of the kyngeſ of Iuda: wyll I geue into the handes of theyꝝ enemyes, whyche ſhall ſpoyle them, and carye the vnto Babilon. But as for the (Whaſhur) thou ſhalte be caried vnto Babilon with all thyne houſholde, & to Babilon ſhalte thou come, where thou ſhalt dye, and be buryed: thou and all thy fauourers, to whom thou haſte preached lyes. O Lord, thou makeſt me weake, but thou reſtreſcheſt me, and makeſt me ſtronger agayne. * All the daye long am I deſpyſed, and laughed to ſcoꝛne of euery man: becauſe I haue nowe preached longe agaynſt malycyous tyrannye, and ſhewed theym of deſtruction.

* For the which cauſe they caſt þ word of the Lord in my teeth, and take me euery to the worſt.

Wherfoze, I thoughte from hence forth, not to ſpeake of hi, nor to pꝛeache any moze in hys name. But the worde of the Lord was a very burnynꝝ fyꝛe in my hearte, and in my bones, whiche when I wold haue ſtopped, I myght not. For why, * I heard ſo many derpyſons and blaſphemyes, yea, euē of myne owne companyons, and of ſuche as were conuerſaunt with me: whyche wente about, to make me aſtrayed, ſayynge: vpon him, let vs go vpon him, to feare hym, & make him hold hys tonge: that we maye ouercome him, and be aꝛuenged of him.

But the Lord ſtoode by me, lyke a myghtyꝝ gyaunt: therfoze my perfecutors fell, and coulde do nothyng. They ſhall be ſore confounded, for they haue done vnwiſely, they ſhall haue an euerylaſtynꝝ ſhame. * And nowe, O Lord of hoostes, thou ryghtuous ſearcher, (which knoweſt the repnes & the very hertes:) let me ſe them puniſhed, for vnto the I commyt my cauſe.

Synge vnto the Lord, and prayſe hym, for he hath deliuered the ſoule of the oppꝛeſſed, from the hande of the violent. * Cursed be the daye, wherem I was boꝛne: vnhappye be the daye, wherem my mother brought me forth. Cursed be the man, that brought my father the tydings, to make him glad, ſayynge: thou haſte gotten a ſonne. Let it happen vnto that man, as to the cyties * which the Lord turned vꝛſydes downe (when he had heard long the wicked rumoure of the) becauſe he ſlew mo not, as ſoone as I came out of my mothers wombe, and becauſe my mother was not my graue herſelfe, þ the byrth myght not haue come oute, but remayned ſtyll in her. * Wherfoze came I forth of my mothers wombe: To haue experyence of labour and ſozowe: and to leade my lyfe wyth ſhame.

The. xxi. Chapter.

The propheth that zedekiah shall be taken, and the cytie burned.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy, * what time as king zedekiah sente vnto hym Paschur the sonne of Melchiah, and Sophoniah & sonne of Maasiah priest, saying: * Aske counsell at the Lorde (we pray the) of our behalfe, for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon beseegeth vs, yf the Lorde (peradventure) will deale with vs, according to his maruelous power, and take him from vs.

Then spake Jeremy. Thus saith the Lorde God of Israell: beholde, I will turne backe & weapons, that ye haue in your handes, wherewith ye fyghte agaynst the kynge of Babylon and the Caldees, whiche beseege you rounde aboute the walles, and I will bringe them together into the midst of thys cytie, and I my selfe will fyght agaynst you, with an outstretched hande, and with a myghty arme, in greate displeasure and terrible wrath: & I will synpte them, that dwell in this cytie: yea, both men & catell shall dye of the pestilence.

* And after this (saith the Lorde) I shall deliuer zedekiah the kynge of Juda, and hys seruantes, hys people (and suche as are escaped in the cytie, from the pestilence, swearde, and hunger) in to the power of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon: yea, into the handes of theyr enemyes, into the handes of those that folow vpon theyr lyues, whych shall synpte them with & swerd: they shall not ptye them, they shall not spare them, they shall haue no mercye vpon them.

And vnto thys people thou shalt say: Thus saith the Lorde: * beholde, I laye before you the way of lyfe & death. * Who so abyde in thys cytie, shall peryshe: eyther with the swearde, with hunger, or with pestilence. But who so goeth out to hold on & Chaldees parte, that beseege it, he shall saue his lyfe, and shall wyne his soule for a praye. * For I haue sette my face agaynst thys cytie (saith the Lorde) to plage it, and to do it no good. It must be geuen into & hande of the kynge of Babylon, and be bzent with fyre.

And vnto the house of the kynge of Juda, say thus: Heare the word of the Lorde (O & house of David) for thus saith the Lorde. * Ministre righteousness, and that soone, deliuer the oppressed from byolent power: * or euer my terrible wrath breake oute lyke a fyre, and burne so, that no man maye quenche it, because of the wyckednesse of your ymaginacions. * Beholde (saith the Lorde) I will come vpon you, that dwell in the valleyes, rockes and feldeg, and saye: * Tush: who will make vs afrayed: or who will come in to oure houses? For I will byset you (saith the Lorde) because of the wyckednes of your inuencion, & I will kyndle suche a fyre in your wod, as shall consume al, that is about you.

The Notes.

a. Shall wyne hys soule for a praye, & is, shall escape daunger: It is all one with that whiche goth before, he shall saue his lyfe. His soule, that is, his lyfe, shall be vnto him as a praye: because he shoulde vtterly haue loste it, yf he had bydden in Ierusalem: and by flyinge vnto the Chaldees he shoulde wyne it, euen as a manne winneth a praye in battell.

The. xxii. Chapter.

The exhorteth the kyng of Juda to iudgement and righteousness. Why Ierusalem is broughte into captiuite. The death of Sallum the sonne of Josias is prophesied.

Thus sayde the LORDE also: I Go downe into the house of the kyng of Juda, and speake there these wordes, and saye: Heare the word of the LORDE, thou kynge of Juda that syttest in the kyngly seate of David: thou and thy seruantes and thy people, that go in and out at thys gate. Thus the LORDE commaundeth: * kepe equite and ryghtuousnesse, deliuer the oppressed from the power of the violence: do not greue nor oppresse the straunger, the fatherlesse nor the wyddow, and shede no innocent blouds in this place.

Then shall it be answered: * because they haue broken the couenaint of the Lorde their God, and haue worshypped & serued straunge goddes. * Mourne not ouer the deade, & be not wo for the, but be sorow for him that departeth awaye: for he cometh not agayne, and seeth his natyue countre no more. For thus sayeth the Lorde, as touching * a Selum y<sup>e</sup> sonne of Iosiah kyng of Iuda, whiche raygned after hys father, and is caried oute of thys place: He shall neuer come hyther agayne, for he shall dye in y<sup>e</sup> place, wherunto he is led captiue, and shall see thys lande no more. * Wo worth hym, that buyldeth his house wth buryghtuousnesse, & his parlours wth the good y<sup>e</sup> he hath gottē by violence: which neuer recompenseth his neyghbours labour, nor payeth him his hyre. He thynketh in hym selfe: I wyl buylde me a wyde house, and gorgeous parlours: He causeth windowes to be hewen therein, and the sylinges and geastes maketh he of Cedre, and paynteth theym with zenober. Thinkest thou to raygne now, that thou prouokest me to wrath wyth the Cedre trees?

Dyd not thy father eate and drink, and prospere well, as longe as he dealt wyth equitye and ryghtuousnesse: Yea, when he helped the oppressed and poore to they<sup>r</sup> ryght then prospered he well.

From whence came this, but onelye because he had me before his eyes, sayeth the Lorde. Neuertheles, as for thine eyes and thynne hert, they loke vpon conuetousnesse, to shede innocente bloude, to do wronge and violence. * And therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde agaynst Iehoakin, the sonne of Iosiah kyng of Iuda: They shall not mourne for him, (as they vse to do) alas brother, alas syster: Nether shall they sape vnto him: Alas syr, alas for that noble prynce.

But as an Ayle shall he be buried, corrupte and be cast without the gates of Ierusalem.

Elymire vpon the hyll of Libanus (O thou doughter Sion) lyst by thy voice vpon Balan, crye from all parties: for al thy louers are destroyed. I gaue the warnyng, whyle thou wast yet in prosperyte. * As truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde) though <sup>b</sup> Conaniah the sonne of Iehoachim kyng of Iuda were the sygnet of my ryghte hande, yet wyl I plucke him of: And I wyl geue the in to the power of them that seke to slaye thee, and into the power of theym that thou fearest: in to the power of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon, and into the power of the Caldees. Moreover, I wyl sende the, and thy mother that bare the, into a straunge lande, where ye were not borne, & there shall ye dye. But as for the lande that ye wyl despise to retorne vnto, ye shall neuer come at it agayne. ## The. xxiii. Chapter.

He speaketh against euil curates that make haue of the flocke of the Lord. Of the conuersacion of the remnant of the Jewes to the faith. The coming of the true Shepherd. Christ is prophesied. Against false prophetes. When a prophete preacheth the worde of God. God conuerteth the heres of the hearers. Against prophetes that preachelys vnder the name of God. The myracles of false prophetes.

Shal no more feare & dreed, for there shal be none of the be lost, saith the Lord. * Behold, the tyme cometh, saith the Lord, I wyl rayse vp the ryghtuous braunche of Dauid, * whiche shal beare rule, and discusse matters with wisdom, and shall set vp equite and ryghtuousnesse agayne in the earth.

In his tyme shall Iuda be saued, and Israel shall dwell wythout feare. And this is the name that they shal call him: * euen the Lord oure ryghtuous maker. * And therfore behold, the tyme cometh, saith the LORD, that it shall no more be sayd: the LORD lyueth, which brought the chyldren of Israel out of the lande of Egypt: But the Lord liueth, which brought forth, and led the sede of the house of Israel, out of the North lande, and from all countrees where I had scatred them; and they shall dwell in their owne land agayne.

Why herte breaketh in my bode because of þe false prophetes, al my bones shake: I am become lyke a droncken man (that by the reason of wine can take no reast) for verie feare of the Lord, and of hys holpe wordes: Because the lande is ful of aduouterers, where thorow it is destroyed and mourneth, * the pleasaunte pastures of the deserte are dryed vp. Yea, the waye that men take, is wicked, and their gouernance is nothing lyke the holpe worde of the Lord. For the prophetes and the priestes thyn selues are polluted wycrites, and theyr wyckednesse haue I founde in my house, saith the Lord. Wherefore, theyr way shalbe slippery in the darcknes, wherein they maye staker and fall. For I wyl bringe a plage vpon them, euen the yere of theyr bysytacion, saith the LORD. I haue sene folys amonge the prophetes of Samaria, that they preached for Baal, and decayed my people of Israel.

I haue sene also amonge the prophetes of Ierusalem foule aduouterie, and presumptuous lies. They take the most shamefull men by the hande, & trynge them, so that they can not retourne from theyr wickednesse. Al these wiche cutes are vnto me, as Sodom, and as the inhabitours of Gomorre.

Therefore

Behold, I will sende vnto the shepherdes, that destroye, & scatere my flocke, saith the Lord. Wherefore, this is the commaundement of the Lord God of Israel, vnto the shepherdes of my people: Ye scatere & thruste out my flocke, & loke not vpon them. Therefore now wyl I byset þe wickednes of your imaginacions, saith the Lord. And wil gather together the remnant of my flocke, from all landes that I had decayed vnto, & wil bringe them agayne to theyr pastures, that they may grow and increase. I wyl set shepherdes also ouer them, which shall fede them. They

Jer. ix. b. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes concerning the prophetes: * Beholde, I wyll fede theym with worme: wod, and make them dryncke the water of gall. For from the prophetes of Ierusalem is the spycknes of ypocresie come into all the lande.

Jer. 27. b. and. 8. b. And therfore the Lorde of Hostes geueth you this warning: * Heare not the wordes of þe prophetes, that preach vnto you, and dysceaue you: for they speake the meanyng of their own hert, and not out of the mouth of the Lorde.

Jer. xii. a. Sapho. i. c. Jer. v. b. and. xiii. b. Deu. xix. c. * They saye vnto theym, that despyse me: The LORDE hath spoken it: Tylle, ye shall prosper ryghte well.

And vnto all them, that walcke after þe lust of theyr owne hert, they say: Tylle, there shall no mysfortune happen you. For who hath sytten in the counsell of the LORDE, that he hath hearde and vnderstande, what he is aboute to do? Who hath marked hys deuyce, and hearde it? * Beholde, the storme whether of the Lorde (that is, his indignacyon) shall go forth, and shall fall downe vpon the head of þe vngodly. And the wrath of the Lorde shall not tounce agayne, vntyll he perfourme and fulfill the thought of his herte. * And in þe latter dayes ye shall knowe his meanyng.

I haue not sente these Prophetes (sayeth the Lorde) and yet they raine. Jer. 14. v. * I haue not spoken to them, & yet they preached: But yf they had contynued in my counsell and hearde my wordes: they had turned my people from their euill wayes and wycked ymagynacyons.

Jer. xxi. a. Jer. viii. b. * Alas I then God that seyth but the thyng, whiche is nye at hande, and not that is farre of: sayeth the Lorde.

Jer. 139. a. Amos. ix. b. * May any man hyde him selfe so, that I shall not see hym: sayeth the Lorde.

Jer. 66. a. Jer. vii. f. and. xvi. b. * Do not I fulfill heauen and earth: sayeth the LORDE.

I haue heard wel ynough, what the prophetes say, that preache lyes in my name, saying: I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed. Howe longe wyll this contynue in the prophetes hertes, to tel lies, and to preache þe craftye soylte of theyr own herte: whose purpose is (with the dreames þe euery one tell) to make my people forget my name, as they forsaithers did, whē Baal came vp. The pro-phete þe hath a dreame, let him tel it: * & he that vnderstandeth my worde, lette hym shewe it saythfully.

For what hath chaffe and wheate to do together: sayeth the Lorde. Is not my worde lyke a fyre, sayeth the Lorde, and lyke an hammer, that breaketh the harde stone? Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll vpon the prophetes, þe that steale my worde pryuely from euery man. Beholde, here am I (sayeth the Lorde) agaynste the prophetes, that take vpon theyr tinges to speake: The Lorde hath sayde it. Beholde, here am I (sayeth the Lorde) agaynste those prophetes, that dare prophce lyes, and dysceaue my people wth theyr vanyties, and myracles, whome I neuer sent, nor commaunded theym. They shall do this people great harme, sayeth the Lorde.

If this people, eyther any prophete or priest aske the, and saye: what is the burthen of the Lorde? Thou shalt saye vnto them: What burthen? Therefore wyll I cast you fro me (sayeth the Lorde) because ye your selues are a burthen. And the prophet, priest or people that vseth this terme (the burthen of the Lorde) him wyll I vylet, and his house also.

But thus shall ye saye, euery one to another: What answere hath the Lorde geuen? Or, what is the Lordes commaundement? And as for the burthen of the LORDE, ye shall speake no more of it: for euery mans owne worde is hys burthen, because ye haue altered the wordes of the lyunge God, the Lorde of Hostes our God.

Thus shall euery man saye to the Prophetes: what answere hath the Lorde geuen ther? Or, what sayeth the Lorde. And not once to name þe burthen of þe Lorde. Therefore thus saith þe Lorde: For so muche as ye haue vset this terme (the burthen of the Lorde) where as I notwithstanding sent vnto you, and forbade you to speake of the Lordes burthen.

Beholde therfore, I wyll repute you as a burthen, & wyll cast you out of my presēce: yea, & the cytye also, & I gaue you & your fathers: & wil bring you to an euerlasting confusion, and into such a

The vñsion of the. li. panners of fygges. The first vñsion signifieth that part of þ people shuld be brought agayn from captiuite. The second, that zedekiah and the rest of the people shoulde be destroyed.

The Lorde shewed me a vision: Beholde, there stode two maundes of fygges before the Tēple of þ Lord, after that * Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilon had led awaye captiue Jechoniah the sonne of Jehoakim kyng of Iuda, the myghtye men also of Iuda, with the worckmasters, and connyng men of Ierusalem, vnto Babilon. In the one maunde were very good fygges, euen like as those that be first ripe. In the other maunde were very naughtie fygges, whiche myghte not be eaten, they were so euill. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: what seyst þ Jeremy?

The. xlv. Chapter.

C Jeremy prophesyeth that they shalbe in captiuite. lxx. yeaues, because they contemned & dispised the word of God. He sheweth þ after. lxx. yeres þ Babilonians shuld be destroyed. The destructiō of al naciōs is prophesied. He moueth þ priestes of þ naciōs to wailing.

Whych sermon, Jeremy the prophet made vnto al þ people of Iuda, and to all the inhabitours of Ierusalē, on this maner.

From the. xlii. yeaue of Josiah the sonne of Amnon kyng of Iuda, vnto thys presente daye (that is euen. xliii. yeaue) the word of the Lorde hath bene comytted vnto me. * And so I haue spoken to you, I haue ryfen vp earlye, I haue geuen you warnyng in season, but ye woulde not heare me. * Though the Lorde hath sent his seruauntes, al the prophetes vnto you in season: Yet woulde ye not obeye, ye woulde not enclyne your cares to heare.

to your owne great harme.

Wherefore thus sayeth the Lord of Hostes: * Because, ye haue not hearkened vnto my word, lo, I wyl sende out, and call for all the people, that dwell in the North, sayeth the Lord, and wyl prepayre Nabuchodonosor the kynge of * Babylon my seruaunte, and wyl bryng them vpon this lande, & vpon al þe dwel therein, & vpon al the people þe are about the, & wyl vtrerly rote them out. I wyl make of the a wyldernes, a morage, and a continuall deserte.

* Moreover, I wyl take from them the voice of gladnesse and solace, the voice of the bydgrome and the byde, the voice of the anoynted, with the cressettes: and this whole lande shall become a wyldernes, and they shall see the sayde people and the kynge of Babylon, threescore yeaeres and ten. * When the threescore and ten yeres are expired, I wyl vsset also that wyckednes of the kynge of Babylon and hys people sayeth the Lord: yea, and the lande of the Caldees, and wyl make it a perpetual wyldernes, and wyl fulfyl al my wordes vpon that lande, which I haue deuysed agaynst it: yea, all that is wytted in this booke, whiche Jeremy hath prophesied of all the people: so that they also shall be subdued vnto dyuerse nationes and greate kynges. * for I wyl recompense them, accordyng to theyr dedes and workes of their own handes.

For thus hathe the Lord God of Israel spoken vnto me: Take thys * wyne cuppe of indignacyon fro my hande, that thou mayest cause all the people, to whome I sende thee, for to drynke of it: that when they haue dronken therof, they may be madde, and out of theyr wittes, when the swearde cometh, that I wyl sende amonge them. Then toke I the cuppe from the Lordes hande, and made all the people drynke thereof, vnto whom the Lord had sent me.

But fyrst the ctyte of Jerusalem, & al the ctytes of Iuda, theyr kynges and prynces: to make them desolate, waste, despyed and cursed accordyng as it is come to passe thys daye. Yea, & Pharaos the kynge of Egypt, his seruautes, his prynces, and his people altogether one wyth another, and al kynges of þe lande of Hus, all kynges of the Philistines lande, Ascalon, Azah, Accaron and the remnaunt of Asdod, the Edomites, the Moabites and the Ammonites: all the kynges of Tyrus and Sidon: the kynges of the Isles, that are beyonde the sea: Dedan, Thema, Buz and * the Hittites: all the kynges of Arabie, and (generally) all the kynges that dwell in the deserte: all the kynges of Hamir, all the kynges of Elam, all the kynges of the Medes, all kynges towarde the North, whether they be farre or nye, euery one with hys neyghbours: Yea, and all the kingdome that are vpon the whole earth. The kyng of Szech, sayde he, shall dryncke wyth them also.

And saye thou vnto them: Thys is the commaundement of the LORD of hostes the God of Israel: Dryncke and be droncken, spewe and fall, that ye neuer ryl: and that thowowe the swearde, whiche I wyl sende amonge you. But yf they wyl not receaue the cup of thy hand, and dryncke it, then tel the: thus doeth the Lord of Hostes threaten you: drynke it ye shall, and that shortlye. For lo, * I begynne to plage the ctyte, that my name is geuen vnto: thynke ye the, that I wyl leaue you unpunished? Ye shall not go quite. For why, I call for a swearde vpon al the inhabytours of the earth, sayeth the LORD of hostes.

Wherefore tell them all these wordes, and saye vnto them: * The Lord shall crye from aboue, and let hys voice be hearde from his holy habitation. With a great noyse shall he crye fro his court regall. He shall geue a great voice (like the grape gatherers) and the sounde thereof shall be hearde vnto the endes of the worlde. For the Lord hath a iudgemente to geue vpon all people, and wyl holde his courte of iustice with all flethe and punthe the vngodlye, sayeth the Lord.

For thus sayeth þe Lord of Hostes: * Beholde, a myserable plage shall goe from one people to another, and a great storme water shall arylse from all the endes of the earthe. And the same daye shall the LORD him selfe slay them,

The. xxi. Chapter.

Jeremy moueth the people to amendement. He is taken of the prophetes and priestes, & brought to iudgement. He beinge accused before the prynces answereth, that he had preached onely the wordes of God. The rulers & the people despuer Jeremy, agaynst the willes of the priestes & prophetes: after the example of Hezekiah, whiche hadde despuered Micah, that had preached the same thynges that Jeremy had preached. Uriah the prophete is killed of Jehoahim, contrarie to the will of God.

In the begynnynge of the reygne of Jehoahim y sonne of Josiah kynge of Iuda, came this word fro y Lord, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde: * Stande in the courte of the Lordes house, and speake vnto al them which (out of the cyties of Iuda) come to do worshyppe in the Lordes house, al the wordes that I commaunde thee to say. * Loke that thou kepe not one word backe, yf (peraduenture) they wyll hearken, and turne every man fro hys wycked waye: * that I maye also repente of the plage, whiche I haue determed to bringe vpon theym, because of theyr wycked inuencionys.

And after this maner shalt y speake vnto them: Thou sayest the Lorde: yf ye wyll not obeye me, to walcke in my lawes, which I haue geuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruantes the prophetes, whome I sent vnto you, to synge by tymely, and styll sendynge: If ye wyl not folow them (I say) then wyl I do to thys house, * as I dyd vnto Siloh, and wyl make thys cytie to be abhorred of al the people of y earth. And the priestes, the prophetes and all the people hearde Jeremy preache these wordes, in the house of the Lorde.

Jerem. 7. a

Now when he had spoken out al the wordes, that the LORDE commaunded him to preache vnto all the people, then the priestes, prophetes and al the people toke holde vpon hym, and sayde: thou shalt dye. Howe darrest thou be so bolde, as to saye in the name of the Lorde: it shall happen to thys house as it dyd vnto Siloh: and thys cytie shall be so waste, that no manne shall dwell therein.

And when all the people were gathered aboute Jeremy in the house of the Lorde, the prynces of Iuda hearde of thys rumoure, and they came soone out of the kynges Palace into the house of the Lorde, and satte them downe before the * newe doore of the LORDE. Then spake the priestes and the prophetes vnto the rulers and to all the people, these wordes: * Thys manne is worthy to dye, for he hath preached agaynst thys cytie, as ye your selues haue hearde with your eares.

Then sayde Jeremy vnto the rulers and to all the people: The Lorde hath sent me to preache agaynst this house and agaynst thys cytie all the wordes that ye haue hearde. Therefore amende your wayes, and your aduise mentes, and be obedyent vnto the voyce of the LORDE your GOD: so shall the Lorde repent of the plage, that he had deuysed agaynst you. vnto you, to speake all these wordes in poure eares.

Then sayde the rulers and the people vnto the preeles and prophetes: Thys man maye not bee condemned to deathe, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the Lorde oure God. The Elders also of the lande stode vp, and sayd thus vnto all the people: * Micah the Moreshite, whiche was a pro-phete vnder Hezekiah kynge of Iuda, spake to all the people of Iuda: Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes: * Sion shal be plowed lyke a felde, Ierusalem shal be an heape of stones, and the hyll of the Lordes house shal bee turned to an hye wod. Byd Hezekiah the kynge of Iuda and the people of Iuda put hi to death for this: No verelye, but rather feared the Lorde, and made their prayer vnto him. For the whiche cause also y Lorde repented of the plage, that he had deuyssed agaynst them. Shoulde we then do suche a shamefull dede agaynst our sou-les: Ther was a prophet also, that preached styflye in the name of the Lorde, called Uziah the sonne of Semeiah of Cariathiarim: thys man preached also agaynst thys cytie and agaynst thys lande, accordynge to al as Jeremy sayeth. Nowe when * Jehoakim the kynge with all the estate and princes had herd hys wordes, the kynge wente aboute to slay him. * Whē Uziah perceaued that, he was afrayed, and fledde, and departed into Egypte.

Then Jehoakim the kynge sent seruauntes into the lande of Egypte, Pamelye: Elnathan the sonne of Achaboz, and certayne menne wyth hym into Egypte, whiche fetched Uziah out of Egypte, and brought him vnto kynge Je-hoakim that slew him with the swerde, and caste hys deade bodye into the co-men peoples graue. But Ahikam the sonne of Saphan helped Jeremye, that he came not into the handes of the people to be slayne.

The false propheeye of Hananiah the prophete. Ieremy sheweth that the propheeye of Hananiah is false, by the example of the other prophetes. He beinge inspirid of the Lord reprooveth Hananiah, prophesyinge his death.

Then the prophete Ieremy gaue answer vnto the prophete Hananiah, before his pristes & before all his people that were present in his house of his lord. * And his prophete Ieremy sayde: Amen, the Lord do that, and graunt the thyng, which thou haste prophesied: that he maye byrge agayne all the orna-homes, were proued by this (yf God had sende the in very dede) * when the thing came to passe, whiche that prophet told before.

C And Hananiah the prophete toke the chayne frome the prophete Jeremys necke, and brake it and with that sayde Hananiah, that all the people myghte heare: Thus hath the Lorde spoken: Euen so wyl I breake the yocke of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon, frome the necke of all nacions, yea, and that within this two yeaere. And so the prophete Jeremy went his way. Now after that Hananiah the prophete had taken the chayne from the prophete Jeremys necke, and broken it: The worde of the Lorde came vnto the prophete Jeremy, sayinge: God, and tell Hananiah these wordes: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Thou haste broken the chayne of wood, but in steade of wood thou shalt make chaines of yron. For thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israell: I wyl put a yocke of yron vpon the necke of all this people, that they may serue Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon, yea, and so shall they do. And I wil geue him the beastes in the felde. Then sayde the prophete Jeremy vnto the prophete Hananiah: * Heare me (I praye the) Hananiah: The Lorde hath not sent the, but he bringest this people into a false belefe. And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: behold, I wil sende the oute of the lande and within a yeaere thou shalt dye because thou hast falsely spoken against the Lorde. So Hananiah the prophete died the same yeaere in the seuenth moneth.

And The xxix. Chapter.

The pyle of Jeremys, sente vnto them that were in captiuitie in Babilon. He propheseth theyr retorne from captiuitie after .lxx. yeaeres. He propheseth the destruccyon of the kynge and of the people that remayned in Ierusalem. He threatneth .ii. prophetes that seduced the people. The deathe of Semeiah the Rechabitic is prophesied.

This is the Copie of the lettre, that Jeremys the prophete sente frome Ierusalem vnto the prisoners: the Senatours, preestes, prophetes, and al the people, whome Nabuchodonosor had led vnto Babilon: after the tyme the kyng Iechoniah, & hys Quene, hys chābzelaines, & princes of Iuda, & Ierusalem, the workmaisters of Ierusalem, were departed thither. Whiche lettre Elasah the sonne of Saphan and Samariah the sonne of Helkiah dyd beare, whome zedekiah the kynge of Iuda sente vnto Babilon to Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon: these were the wordes of Jeremys lettre.

Thus hath the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israell spoken vnto all the prisoners, that were led from Ierusalem, vnto Babilon: * buyde you houses to dwell therein: plante you gardens, that ye maye enioye the frutes therof: * take you wiues, to beare you sones, & doughters: proude wiues for youre sonnes, and husbandes for youre doughters, that they may get sonnes & doughters, and that ye maye multiplye there. Labour not to be few, but seke after peace and prosperitie of the cytie, wherein ye be prisoners, * and praye vnto God for it. For in the peace thereof, shall youre peace be. For thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes, the God of Israell: * Lette not those prophetes and sothslayers that be amonge you dysceane you: and beleue not youre owne dreames. For why, * they preache you lyes in my name, and I haue not sente them, sayeth the Lorde. ~~And I haue not sent them~~

But thus sayeth the Lorde: * When ye haue fulfilled .lxx. yeaeres at Babilon, I wyl bringe you home, and of myne owne goodnes I wyl carpe you hyther agayne vnto this place. For I know what I haue deuised for you sayeth the Lorde. My thoughtes are to geue you peace, and not trouble (which I geue you al redie) and that ye myght haue hope agayne. * Ye shall crye vnto me, ye shal goo and call vpon me, and I shall heare you. * Ye shall seke me and fynde me. Yea, if so be that ye seke me with your whole herte, I wyl be found of you (sayeth the Lorde) and wyl deliuer you oute of prison, and gather you together agayne out of all places where in I haue scatted you sayeth the Lorde: and wil bringe you agayne to the same place, from whence I caused you to be carried away captiue.

But where as ye saie, that a God hath raised you by prophetes at Babilon

The captiuitie of Israell.

The Prophecye.

Ion: Thus hath the Lorde spoken concerninge the kynge that sitteth in the stole of Dauid, and all the people that dwell in this cytie, youte brethren* that are not gone wyth you into captiuitie.) Thus (I saie) speaketh the Lorde of hostes, beholde, I wil sende a swerde, hunger and pestilence vpon them, and will make them lyke vntimely fygges, that may not be eatē for bitterness. And I wil persecute them with the swerde, with hunger and death.

I will deliuer them vp to be vexed of all kyngdomes, to be cursed, abhorred, laughed to scorn, and put to confusion of all the people, amonge whome I haue scattered them: and that becaue they haue not bene obediēte vnto my commaundementes (sayeth the Lorde) whiche I sente vnto them by my seruantes the prophetes. * I stode vpon ear ly, and sent vnto them, but they would not heare, sayeth the Lord. Heare therfore the worde of the Lorde, all ye prysoners, whome I sente from Ierusalem vnto Babylon: Thus hath the Lord of hostes the God of Israell spoken, of Ahab the sonne of Colaiah, and of zedekiah the sonne of Maasiah, which prophecye lyeth vnto you in my name: Beholde, I will deliuer them into the hand of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, that he maye slaye them before youte eyes. And all the prysoners of Iuda that are in Babylon, shall take vpon them this terme of cursynge, and saie: Nowe God do vnto thee, as he dyd vnto zedekiah and Ahab, whome the kynge of Babylon rosted in the fyre, because they synned shamefully in Israell.

For they haue not only despyled their neyghbours wyues, but also preached lyinge wordes in my name, whiche I haue not commaunded them. This I testifie, and assure, saith the Lord. But as for Semeiah the Rehela myte thou shalt speake vnto him: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: Because thou haste sealed lettres vnder thy name, vnto al the people that is at Ierusalem, and to Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah the preeste, yea, and sent them to al the priestes: wherein thou wyrttest thus vnto him: The Lord hath ordeyned the to bee preeste in steade of * Jehoiada the preeste, that thou shouldest be the chek in the house of the Lord aboue all prophetes, and preachers, and that thou mightest put them in prison, or in the stocks. Howe happeneth it then, that thou hast not reprovēd Jeremye of Anathoth, whiche neuer leaueth of hys prophesying. And besyde al this, he hath sente vs worde vnto Babylon, and tolde vs playnely, that our captiuitie shall longe endure: that we shoulde buylde vs houses to dwel there in, and plante vs gardens, that wee myght enioye the frutes therof. Whiche lettre Sophoniah the preeste, dyd receiue, and let Jeremye the prophete heare it.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye, sayinge: Sende word to al the that be in captiuitie, on this maner: Thus hath the Lorde spoken concerninge Semeiah the Rehela myte: * Because that Semeiah hath prophesied vnto you without my commission, and brought you in to a false hope, therfore thus the Lorde dothe certify you: Beholde, I will viset Semeiah the Rehela myte, and his sede: so that none of his shall remayne amonge thys people, and none of them shall see the good, that I will do for thys people, sayeth the Lorde. For he hath preached falselye of the Lorde.

This is the doctrine. And the doctrine. a. Suche prophetes as preached vnto them the thynges whiche they were desyrous of, dyd they greatlye allowe: yea, euen after they came to Babylon. In them they reioyced, as though they had bene sente of the Lorde, and yet were they in dede false prophetes. But Ezechiel the true prophet of the Lorde, whiche preached them contrarye, dyd they persecute. By the false prophetes they sayd: God hath sente vs prophetes, and theyr doctrine dyd they heare and folow. But the true prophete dyd they moche and laughe to scorne: and would nether beleue his doctrine, nor geue eare vnto it.

The xxx. Chapter.

The returne of the people from Babylon. God by hys chaunge sheweth that the people to synful. The destruction of the enemies of Israell.

These are the wordes, that the Lorde shewed vnto Jeremie, sayinge: Thus sayeth the God of Israell: * Wyrtte vpon dylygentlye all the wordes, that I haue spoken vnto thee, in a booke. For lo, the tyme cometh (sayeth the Lorde) that I will bringe you from Babylon, from the hand of the king of Acha, sonne of Celijah, and of Zedekiah, sonne of Maasiah, and you shall dwell in your owne land.

that I wyl bring agayne the prisoners of my people of Israell and Juda, sayeth the Lorde: for I wyl restore them vnto the lande, that I gaue to theyr fathers, and they shall haue it in possession.

Agayne, these wordes spake the Lorde, concernynge Israell and Juda: Thus sayeth the Lorde: we heare a terrible crye, feare and disquietnesse, for what elles dothe this signifie, that I see Dauidelype, that all stronge men synpte, eue ry manne his hande vpon his loynes, * as a womā in p paine of her trauaile. Who euer saue a manne trauayle with childer: Enquyre thereafter, and se. Yea all their faces are maruelous pale.

Alas for this daye, which is so dreedfull, that none maye be lyckened vnto it: and alas for the tyme of Jacobs trouble, frome the which he shall yet be deliuered. For in that daye, sayeth the Lorde, I wyl take hys pocke frome of thy necke, and breake thy bondes. They shall nomore serue straunge Goddes vnder hym, but they shall do seruyce vnto God their Lorde, and to * Dauid their Kyng, whome I will raise vp vnto the. * And as for the, O my seruaunt Jacob, feare not (sayeth the Lorde) and be not afrayed, O Israell. For lo, I wil helpe the also frome farre, and thy sede from the lande of theyr captiuite.

And Jacob shall turne agayne, he shall be in rest, and haue a prosperous lyfe, & no man shall make hym afrayed. For I am with the, to helpe thee, sayeth the Lorde. * And thoughe I shall destroy al the people, among whom I haue scattered the, yet wyl I not destroy thee, but correct the, * and that with dyscrecion. For I knowe, that thou arte in no wise * without faute. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: I am soyy for thy hurte and woundes. There is no man to medle w thy cause: or to bynde vp thy woundes: there may no man helpe the.

All thy louers haue forgotten the, and care nothyng for the. For I haue geuen thee a cruell stroke, and chastened the roughly: and that for the multitude of thy mysdoedes, for thy synnes haue had the ouerhande. Why makest thou mone for thy harme? I my selfe haue pytie of thy sorowe, * but for the multitude of thy mysdoedes and synnes, I haue done thys vnto the.

* And therfore all they that deuoute the, shall be deuoured, and all thine enemies shall be led into captiuitie. All they that make the waste, shall be wasted the selues: and all those that robbe the, wil I make also to be robbed. For I wyl geue the thy healthe agayne & make thy woundes whole, sayeth the Lorde: because they reuyled the, as one cast away and dispised, O Syon.

For thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde * I wil sette vp Jacobs tentes agayne, and defende hys dwellynge place. The ctyte shall be buylded in her olde estate, and the houses shall haue their righte foundacion. And oute of them shall go thankesgeuyng, and the voyce of ioye.

I wyl multiply them, and they shall not mynyshe: I shall endue them with honoure, and no manne shall subdue them. Their chyldren shall be as a foretyme, and their congregacyon shall continue in my sight. And al those that bere them, wil I viset.

* A captayne also shall come of them, and a prince shall sprynge out from the myddest of them: him wil I challenge to my selfe, and he shall come vnto me. * For what is he, that geueth ouer hys herte to come vnto me: sayeth the Lorde. * Ye shall be my people also, and I wil be youre God. * Beholde, on the other syde shall the wraethe of the LORDE breake oute as a stormye water, as a mighty whyle winde, and shall fall vpon the heades of the vngodly.

The terribble dyspleasure of the Lorde shall not leaue of, but yll he haue done, and perfourmed the intent of hys hert, * which in the later dayes ye shall vnderstande. At the same tyme (sayeth the Lorde) shall I be the God of al the generacions of Israell, and they shall be my people.

shall so be rempyted, that they shall not ones bee thought on. God prompseth that he will cast of James. The buylding agayne of Ierusalem.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: * The people of Israell whiche escaped in the wilderness from the Ihererde, found grace to come in to their reste. Euen so shall the Lorde now also appeare vnto me from farre, and saye: * I loue the wyth an euerlasting loue, therefore do I sprede my mercye before the. I will repayre thee agayne (O thou doughter of Israell) that thou mayest be fast and sure. Thou shalt take thy tabzettes agayne, and goo forth with them, that leade the daunce.

Thou shalt plante bynes agayne vpon the hylls of Samaria, and the grape gatherers shall plante, and syng.

And when it is tyme, the watch men vpon the mount of Ephraim shall crye: * Arise, let vs go by vnto Sion to oure Lorde God, for thus sayeth the Lorde: Reioyce with gladnes because of Jacob, crye vnto the head of the Gentiles: speake oute, syng, and saye: The Lord shall deliuer his people, the remnaunte of Israell, and make them whole. Beholde, I will bringe them agayne from out of the north lande, and gather them frome the endes of the worlde, with the blynde and lame that are among them, with the women that bee greete with chylde, and suche as be also deliuered: and the companie of them that come agayne, shall be greete.

They departed from hence in heynnes, but with ioye will I bringe them byther agayne. I wil leade them by the riuers of water in a straight way, wher they shall not stumbe: * For I will be Israells father, and Ephraim shall bee my fyrste borne.

Hear the worde of the Lorde, O ye Gentylles, preache in the Iles, that I ye farre of. and saye: he that hath scatteded Israell, shall gather hi together agayne and shall kepe hym as a shepherde doth his flocke. For the Lorde shall re-deme Jacob, and rid him from the hand of the byolente. And they shall come, and reioyce vpon the hyll of Syon, and shall haue plenteousnes of goodes, whiche the Lorde shall geue them: Ramele, wheate, wyne, oyle, younge shepe and calues. And their consience shall be as a wel watted garden, for they shall nomore be hongrye.

Then shall the mayde reioyce in the daunce, yea, bothe yonge and olde folkes. For I will turne their sorowe into gladnesse, and will comforte them and make them ioyfull, euen from theyr herres. I will powre plenteousnes vpon the hertes of the preestes, and my people shall be satisfied with good thynges sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayth the Lorde: * The voice of heynnes, wepyng and lamentacion came by into heauen: euen of Rachell mourninge for her chylde, and would not bee comforted because they were awaye.

But now sayeth the Lorde: leaue of frome wepyng and cryng, withholde thyne eyes from teares, for thy labour shall be rewarded, sayeth the Lorde. And they shall come agayne oute of the land of their enemyes: Yea, euen thy posterite shall haue consolacion in thys (sayeth the Lorde) that thy chylde shall come agayne into theyr owne lande.

Moreouer I herde Ephraim, that was led awaye captiue, complayne on thys maner: O Lorde thou hast correcte me, and thy chastenynge haue I receaued, as an vntained calfe. * Conuerter thou me, and I shall bee conuerted, for thou arte my Lorde God: Yea, as soone as thou turnest me, I shall resourme my selfe: and when I vnderstand, I shall smyte vpon my thygh. For verely I haue committed shamefull thynges: O let my yowthe beate this reproche and confusion.

Upon this complaynte, I thought thus by my selfe: * is not Ephraim my beate sonne? Is he not the chylde, wyth whome I haue had all myrthe and pastyme? For sence the time that I fyrste commened with hym, I haue him euer in remembraunce: therefore my very hert, dyueth me vnto hym, gladlye and loynglye will I haue mercye vpon him, sayeth the Lorde. Set the watchmen, proude teachers for the, set thine herte vpon y right waye, that thou shouldest walke, & turne agayne (O doughter of Israell) turtle agayne to these cyties of thyne. Howe longe wilt thou go astraye, O thou shrinkinge doughter: for the Lorde wyll worke a newe thing vpon earth: b. A woman shall compasse a manne. Thou shalt be as a woman

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: It wyll come there to, that wha I haue brought Iuda out of captiuitie, these wordes shalbe herde in the land and in his cyties: The Lorde which is the sayre* bydegrome of rightuousnesse, make the frutefull O thou holpe hyll: And there shall dwell Iuda, and all her cytyes, the shepherdes and husbände men: for* I shall fede the hongry soule, and refreth al saynt herites. When I herde thys I came agayne to my selfe, and mused, lyke as I had bene waked out of a swete slepe.

Beholde (sayeth the Lorde) the dayes come, that I wyll sowe the house of Israell and the house of Iuda, with men and with cattell.* Yea, it shal come therto, that lyke as I haue gone about in tymes past to rote them out, to scatere them, to breake them downe, to destroie them and chasten them: Euen so wyll I also go diligently about, to buyld them bp agayne and to plante them, sayeth the Lorde.

*Beholde, the dayes come (sayth the Lorde) that I wyll make a newe couenaunte with the house of Israell & with the house of Iuda: not after the couenaunt that I made with their fathers, when I toke them by the hande, and led them out of the lande of Egypt: whiche couenaunte they brake, wherfore I puryshted them fore, sayth the Lorde.* But thys shall be the couenaunt that I wyll make with the house of Israell after those dayes, sayeth the Lorde.* I wyll plante my lawe in the inward partes of them, and wyte it in their hertes,* and wylbee their God, and they shalbee my people.

And from thence forth shall no man teach his neighbour or his brother, and saye: knowe the Lorde: But they shal al knowe me, from the lowest vnto the highest, sayth the Lorde. For I wyll forgeue their mysdoedes, and will neuer remembre their synnes anye more. Thus sayeth the Lorde* whiche gaue the sunne to be a lyght for the day, and the moone and starrs to shyne in the nyght: which moueth the sea, so that the floudes therof waxe scarce: his name is the Lorde of hostes. Lyke as thys ordynauce shall neuer bee taken oute of my sight, sayeth the LORDE: So shal the sede of Israell neuer cease, but alwaye be a people before me. I haue mercy vpon them

Moreover, thus sayeth the Lorde: like as the heauen aboue can not bee mesured, and as the foundacions of the earth beneth maye not be soughte out: *So wyll I also not caste oute the whole sede of Israell, for that they haue commytred, sayeth the LORDE. Beholde, the dayes come sayeth the Lorde, that the cytie of the Lorde shalbee enlarged from the towre of Hananeell, vnto the gate of the corner wall. Frome thence shall the ryghte measure bee taken before her vnto the hyll toppe of Gareb, and shall come aboute Gaath,* and the whole valley of the dead karcases, and of the ashes, and all Cereimoth vnto the broke of Cedron: and from thence vnto the corner of the horsagate toward the Caste, where as the Sanctuarie of the Lorde also shalbee sette. And when it is now buylded, and sette bp of thys fashion it shall neuer be broken, nor cast downe anye more.

The Proets.

a. To smyte vpon the thighe is a token of greefe. He meaneth that when the Lorde geueth him vnderstanding, he shal come to repentaunce and forsake his euyl conuersacion.

b. This do they commente expounde of the redemption of Israell, by the similitud of a woman searhyng her husbände. As though the prophet had sayde: The people of Israell, after they haue of longe tyme forsaken their spouse God, shal yet at the laste retorne and embrace him wth the armes of fayth, charitie and obedience. &c. Some expounde it of the byrgin Mary. And some of the churche the spouse of Christ.

their Lorde. To feare God is Goddes gifte, to repente that synnes may be eschued.

These wordes spake the Lorde vnto Jeremie, in the tenth yeare of zedekiah kyng of Juda, whych was the xviij.
yeare of Nabuchodonosor, what tyme as the kyng of Babylons hoste layed seige vnto Ierusalem. But Jeremie the Prophete laye bounde in the court of the prizon, whiche was in the kyng of Judaes house: where zedekiah the kyng of Iuda caused him to be laied, because he had prophesied of this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde: * Beholde, I will de-liuer this cytye into the handes of the kyng of Babilon, whiche shall take
it. As for zedekiah the kyng of Iuda, he shall not bee able to escape the Caldees, but surely he shall come into the handes of the kyng of Babilon: which shall speake with him mouth to mouth and one of them shall loke another in the face. And zedekiah shall be carped vnto Babilon, and there shall he be, vntill the tyme that I byset hym, sayeth the Lorde. But yf thou takest in hand to fight against the Caldees, thou shalt not prosper.

And Jeremie sayde: Thus hath the Lorde spoken vnto me: Beholde, Ha-naneell the sonne of Selum thynne Ancles sonne shall come vnto thee, and re-quyre the to redeme the land, that lyeth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe: * for by reason of kyured it is thy parte to redeme it, and to bye it oute.

And so Hananeel myne vncles sonne came to me in the court of the prizon (according to the worde of the Lorde) and sayd vnto me: Bye my land (I pray the) y lieth in Anathoth in the countre of Beniamin: for by heritage thou hast right to lowse it out for thy selfe, therfore redeme it. Then I perceaued, that this was the commaundemente of the Lorde, and so I lowsed the lande from Hananeell of Anathoth, myne vncles sonne, and weyed hym there the money:
euen seven syckles, and ten spluer pens.

I caused him also to make me a wri-tynge, and to seale it, and called recorde therby, and weyed him there the money vpon the waightes. So I toke the euidence with the cōpy (when it was orderly sealed and red ouer) and I gaue the euidence vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah the sonne of Maasiah in the syghte of Hananeel my colen, and in the presence of the witneses, that be named in the euidence, and before all the Jew-es that were therby in the court of the prizon.

I charged Baruch also before them, sayinge: The Lorde of hostes the God of Israel comaundeth the, to take this sealed euidence with the copie, and to laye it in an erthen vessel, that it may longe contynue.

For the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell hath determined, that houses, feldes and byneyardes shalbe possessed again in this lande.

Nowe when I had deliuered the e-uidence vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah, I beloughte the Lorde, sayinge: O Lorde God. * It is thou that hast made heauen and earth with thy great power and hye arme, and there is nothyng to harde for the. * Thou shewest mercy vpon thousandes, thou recompencest the wickednes of the fathers, into the bossome of the chyldren that come after them.

Thou arte the greate and myghtye God, whose name is the Lord of hostes: greate in counsell, and infynite in thought: Thynne eyes loke vpon all the wayes of mens chyldren, * to rewarde euerye one after hys waye, and accor-dyng to the frutes of his inuencions: * Thou hast done greate tokens and wonders in the lande of Egypte (as we se this daye) vpon the people of Israell and vpon those men: to make thy name greate, as it is come to passe this daye: Thou hast broughte thy people of Israell oute of the lande of Egypte, with tokens, with woundres, with a myghtye hand, with a stretched out arme, and with greate terryblenes: and hast geuen the this land, lyke as thou haddest promysed vnto theyr fathers: Namely, that thou wouldest geue them a lande, that floweth with mylke and honny.

* Nowe when they came therein, and possessed it, they folowed not thy voyce, they walcked not in thy lawe: * but al that thou commaunded them to do, that haue they not done, & therfore come al these plagues vpon them.

Beholde, there are bulleworckes made nowe agaynst the cytie, to take it: and it shalbe wonne of the Caldees that besege it, with swearde, with hunger, and deathe, and loke what thou haste spoken, that same shall come vpon them.

E For lo, all thynges are present vnto the: Yet saiest thou vnto me (O Lord God) and commaunded me, that I shal lowse a peece of lande vnto my selfe, and take wytnesses therto: & yet in þe meane season the cytie is deliuered in to the power of the Caldees.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Beholde, I am the Lorde GOD of all fleshe, is there anye thyng then to harde for me? Therfore thus sayde the Lorde: * beholde, I shal deliuer this cytie in to the power of the Caldees, and in to the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon, they shal take it in: For the Caldees shall come, and wyne this cytie, and set fyre vpon it, and burne it: with the gorgeous houses, in whose parlours they haue made sacrifice vnto Baal, and poured dryncke offrynges vnto straunge Goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrathe.

For seynge the children of Israell, and the children of Iuda haue wrought wyckednes befoze me euer from theyr yowth vp, what haue they els done, but prouoked me with the worckes of theyr owne handes: sayeth the Lorde.

O, what hathe this cytie bene els, but a prouokynge of my wrathe, euer sence the daye that I buylded it, vnto this houre: wherin I caste it out of my syght, because of the great blasphemies of the chyldren of Israel and Iuda, whiche they haue done to prouoke me: yea they, their kynges, their prynces, theyr prestes, their prophetes, whole Iuda, and all the cytelyns of Ierusalem.

I * When I stode vp early, & taughte them and instructe them, they turned their backes to me, and not theyr faces.

I * They woulde not heare, to be reformed and correcte. They haue set theyr Goddes in the house, that is halowed vnto my name, to defyle it. They haue buylded hye places for Baal in the valley of the children of Bennom, to bowe theyr sonnes and doughters vnto Moloch: whiche I neuer comaunded them, nether came it euer in my thoughte, to make Iuda synne with suche abhominacion.

Moreouer thus hathe the Lorde God of Israell spoken, concernynge this citie, which (as ye your selues confesse) shalbe deliuered in to the hande of the kynge of Babilon, when it is wonne with the swearde, with hunger, & with pestilence. * Beholde, I wyll gather them together from all landes, wherin I haue scatered them in my wrathe, in my fearful and greate dyspleasure: and wyll brynge them agayne vnto thys place, where they shall dwel safely. And they shalbe my people, and I wyll be theyr God.

* And I wyll geue them one herte and one waye, that they maye feare me all the dayes of theyr lyfe, that they and theyr chylde after them maye prosper. * And I wyll set vp an euerclastynge couenaunte with them. Namelye: that I wyll neuer ceasse to do them good, and that I wyll put my feare in their hertes, so that they shall not runne awaye from me.

* Yea, I wyll haue a luste and pleasure to do them good, and faythfullpe to plante them in this lade with my whole herte, and with all my soule.

For thus sayeth the Lorde: lyke as I haue broughte all this greate plage vpon this people: so wyll I also brynge vpon the all the good, that I haue promyled them. And men shall haue theyr possessions in this lande, wherof ye saue nowe, that it shall nether be inhabited of people nor of catel, but be deliuered in to the handes of the Caldees: Yea, lande shall be bought for money, and euidences made there vpon and sealed befoze witnesses in the countre of Beniamin, and rounde aboute Ierusalem: in the cities of Iuda, in the cyttes that are vpon the mountaynes, and in them that lye beneth, yea, and in þe cities that are in the deserte. For I wyll brynge their prysoners hyther agayne, sayeth the Lorde.

The Prophecie

The xxxlii. Chapter.

The prophet is monyghed of the Lorde, to praye for the deliuerance of the people, whiche the Lorde promyseth. God forgiueth synnes and dothe graciously to the people, for his owne renowne. Of the byrthe of Christe. The kyngedome of Christe in the churche shall neuer be ended.

Moreouer the word of the Lorde came vnto Ieremy on this maner, * whē he was yet boūde in the courte of p̄rison: Thus sayeth the Lorde, whiche fulfilled the thyng that he speaketh, the Lorde whiche perfourmeth p̄ thyng that he taketh in hande: euen he, whose name is the Lorde: thou haste * cryed vnto me, and I haue hearde the: I haue shewed great and hye thinges, whych were vnknewen vnto you.

Thus (I saye) spake the Lorde God of Israel, cōcernynge p̄ houses of this cytie, and the houses of the kynges of Iuda: that they shalbe broken thorow the ordynaunce and weapons, when the Caldees come to besege them: and they shalbe fylled with the deade carcasses of men, whome I wyl slaye in my wyathe and dyspleasure: when I turne my face from this cytie, because of all her wyckednes. Beholde, (sayeth the Lorde) I wil heale their woundes and make them whole: I wyl open them the treasure of peace and truethe.

And I wyl returne the captiuite of Iuda and Israel: and wyl set them vp agayne, as they were afore. * From all mysdedes (wherin they haue offended agaynst me) I wyl cōfesse them: And al their blasphemies whiche they haue done agaynst me, when they regarded me not, I wil forgiue them.

And this shall get me a name, a prayse and honoure, amonge all people of the earth, whiche shall heare all the good, that I wyl shewe vnto them: yea, they shall be afrayed and astonnyed at all the good dedes and benefytes, that I wyl do for them. Moreover, thus sayeth the Lorde: * In this place, wherof ye saye that it shall be a wyldernes, wherin nether people nor cattell shall dwel: in lyke maner in the cyties of Iuda and withoute Ierusalem (whiche also shall be so voyde, that nether people nor cattell shall dwell there) shall the voice of gladnesse be hearde agayne, the voyce of the Byrdgrome and of the byrde, the voice of them that shall singe: * Praise the Lorde of hostes, for he is louynge and his mercye endureth for euer, and the voyce of them that shall offer vp gyftes in the house of the lord. For I wyl restore the captiuite of this lande, as it was afore, sayeth p̄ Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: It shall come yet therto, that in this lande, whiche is voyde from men and cattell, and in all the cyties of the lande, there shall be set vp shepherdes cotages: in the cyties vpon the mountaines: and in the cyties that lye vpon the playne, and in the deserte.

In the lande of Beniamin, in the felde of Ierusalem, and in the cyties of Iuda shall the shepe be nombred agayne, vnder the hande of hym, that telleth them, sayeth the Lorde. * Beholde, the tyme cometh, sayeth the Lorde, that I wyl perfourme that good thing, whiche I haue promysed vnto p̄ house of Israel and to the house of Iuda. In those dayes and at the same tyme, I wyl byrge forth vnto Dauid, the braunche of ryghteousnes, and he shall do equyte and rightousnes in p̄ lande. In those dayes shall Iuda be helped, * and Ierusalem shall dwell safe, and he that shall call her is euen GOD oure ryghteous maker. For thus the Lorde promyseth: * Dauid shall neuer wante one, to syt vpon the stole of the house of Israel: * nether shall the priestes and Leuites wate one to offer alway before me burnte offerings, to kyndle p̄ meate offerynge, & to prepare the sacryfyces.

And the word of the Lorde came vnto Ieremy after this maner: Thus sayeth p̄ Lorde: Make the couenaunt * which I haue made with daye and nyghte be broken, that there shoulde not be daye and night in due season: Then make my couenaunte also be broken, whych I made with Dauid my seruaunte, and so he not to haue a sonne to reygne in his Trone. * So shall also the priestes and Leuites neuer sayle, but serue me. * For lyke as the starres of heauen maye not be nombred, nether the lande of the sea measured: so wyl I multiplye the sede of Dauid my seruaunte

Moreover, the worde of the Lorde came to Jeremie, sayinge: Consydrest thou not what this people speaketh?

Two kynneddes (saye they) had y<sup>e</sup> Lord chosen, and those same two hath he cast awaye. for so farre is my people come, that they haue no hope to come together any more, and to be one people againe. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord: If I haue made no couenaunte with daye and nyghte, and geuen no statute vnto heauen and earth: then wil I also caste awaye the seide of Dauid my seruaunte: so that I wyll take no prince oute of his seide, to rule the posterityte of Abraham, Isaac and Iacob. But yet I wyll turne agayne their captiuyte, and be merciful vnto them.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

The treacher that the captie, and kynge zedekiah also, halbe geuen in to the handes of the kynge of Babylon. He rebueth them that broughte suche of theyr brethren in to captiuyte, as were pardoned to go at their libertie.

These are the wordes whiche the Lorde spake vnto Jeremie, * what time as Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylō, and all his hostes (oute of all the kyngdomes that were vnder his power) and all his people, foughte agaynste Ierusalem and all the cityes therof. Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel: Goe, and speake to zedekiah the kynge of Iuda, and tell him: The Lord sendeth the this worde: * Beholde, I wyll deliuer this cite in to the hande of the kynge of Babylon, he shal burne it, and thou shalte not escape his handes, but shalte be lead awaye prysoner, and deliuered in to his power. Thou shalte loke the kynge of Babylon in the face, & he shal speake with thee mouthe to mouthe, and then shalte thou goe to Babylon. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde, O zedekiah thou kyng of Iuda: Thus sayeth the Lord vnto the: Thou shalt not be slayne with the swearde, but shalt dye in peace. * Lyke as thy forefathers the kynges, thy progenytours, were brente: so shalt thou be brent also, and in the moynynge they shal saye: oh Lorde. for thus haue I determyned, sayeth the Lorde.

When spake Jeremie the prophet all these wordes vnto zedekiah kynge of Iuda in Ierusalem: what tyme as the kynge of Babylons hoost beseged Ierusalem, and the remnaunte of the cityes: Namely, Lachis & Azekah, whiche yet remayned of the * stronge defended cityes of Iuda.

These are the wordes that the Lord spake vnto Jeremie the prophet, when zedekiah was agreed with all the people at Ierusalem, that there shoulde be proclaimed * a libertie: so that euery man shoulde let his seruaunte & hande mayde go fre, Hebrue and Hebruelle, and no Jewe to holde his brother as a bonde man. Nowe as they had consented, euen so they were obedyente, and let them go fre. But afterwarde they repented, and toke agayne the seruantes and handmaydens, whome they had let go fre, and so made them bonde agayne.

For the whiche cause the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremie from the Lorde him selfe, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel: * I made a couenaunte with your fathers, when I brought them out of Egypte, (that they shoulde no more be bondmen) sayinge: * When seuen yeares are oute, euery man shall let his boughte seruaunte an Hebrue go fre, yf he haue serued hym syxe yeares. But your fathers obeyed me not and hearkenēd not vnto me. As for you, ye were nowe turned, and dyd ryghte before me, in that ye proclaimed, euery man to let his neyghboure go fre, and in that ye made a couenaunte before me, in the temple y<sup>e</sup> beareth my name: But yet ye haue turned your selues agayne, and blasphemed my name: In this, that euery man hath requyred his seruaunt and handmayde agayne, who ye had let go quyte and fre, and compelled them to serue you agayne, and to be your bonde men. And therefore thus sayeth y<sup>e</sup> Lorde: ye haue not obeyed me, euery man to proclame fredome vnto his brother & neyghboure: wherefore, I wil cal you vnto a fredoe, saith y<sup>e</sup> lord: euen vnto the swearde, to the pestilence, and to hōger, & wil make you to be plagued in al y<sup>e</sup> kyngdomes of y<sup>e</sup> earth. Yea, those mē y<sup>e</sup> haue broke my couenaunte, & not kept y<sup>e</sup> wordes of the appoyntment;

The notes

a. The Babylonians were departed from them to go agaynst the Egyptians, whom when they had vanquished, they returned to fight agaynst Jerusalem.

The. xxxv. Chapter.

The propoundeth the obedience of the Rechabites, and thereby confoundeth the pryde of the Jewes. The commaundement of Jonadab, the father of the Rechabites, he threatneth punishment vnto the rebellious Jewes, he promyseth prosperite vnto the Rechabites, for theyr obedience vnto their father.

4. Reg. x. c

The wordes, which the lord spake vnto Jeremy, in the raigne of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda, are these: Go vnto the house of * the Rechabites, and cal them oute, and brynge them to the house of the Lorde in to some commodious place, and geue them wyne to dryncke. Then toke I Iazaniah the sonne of Jeremy the sonne of Habaziniyah, and his brethren and al his sonnes, and the whole household of the Rechabites: and brought them to the house of the Lord, in to the closet of the chyldren of Hanan the sonne of Jegedaltah the mā of God: whyche was by the closet of the Princes, that is aboute the closet of Maasiah the sonne of Selum, whichc is the cheafe of the treasure. And before B the sonnes of the kynred of the Rechabites, I set pottes full of wyne, and cuppes, and sayde vnto them: Dryncke wyne. But they sayde: we dryncke no wyne, for Jonadab the sonne of Rechab oure father commaunded vs, sayinge: * ye and youre sonnes shal neuer dryncke wyne, buylde no houses, sowe no seede, plante no bynes, yea, ye shal haue no byneyardes: but for all youre tyme ye shal dwell in tentes, that ye may lyue longe in the lande wherein ye be straungers.

Ier. xxi. b

Thus haue we obeyed the commaundement of Jonadab the sonne of Rechab oure father, in all that he hath charged vs, and so we dryncke no wyne all oure lyfe longe: we, nor oure wyues, oure sonnes and oure daughters. Nether buylde we any house to dwell therein, we haue also amonge vs nether byneyardes, nor corne lande to sowe: but we dwell in tentes, we obeye, and do accor dyng vnto all, that Jonadab oure father commaunded vs.

But nowe that Nabuchodonosor C the kynge of Babilon came by in to the lande, we sayde: come, let vs go to Jerusalem, that we maye escape the host to the Caldees and the Assirians: and so we dwell nowe at Jerusalem. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Go and tell whole Juda and all the inhabitours of Jerusalem: Wyl ye not be reformed, to obey my wordes? sayeth the Lorde. The wordes whichc Jonadab the sonne of Rechab commaunded his sonnes, that they shoulde dryncke no wyne, are faste and surelye kepte: for vnto this day they dryncke no wyne but obeye their fathers commaundement. But as for me, * I haue stande by earlye, I haue spoken vnto you, and geuen you earnest warnynge: and yet haue ye not bene obedyente vnto me. Yea, I haue sente my seruauntes, all the prophetes vnto you, I tole by earlye, and sente you worde, sayinge: Turne you, euery man from his wycked waye: amende youre lyues, and go not after straunge goddes, to worshyppe them: that ye maye contynue in the lande.

lande, whiche I haue geuen vnto you and your fathers, but ye woulde neither heare me, nor folowe me.

D The children of Ionadab Rachabs sonne haue stedfastly kept their fathers commaundement, that he gaue the, but this people is not obedyente vnto me. And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I wyll byynge vpon Iuda and vpon euery one that dwelleth in Ierusalem, all the trouble that I haue deuyled agaynste them. * For I haue spoken vnto the, but they woulde not folowe: I haue called vnto the, neuertheles they woulde geue me no answer. Jeremye also spake vnto the household of the Rechabites: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: For so muche as ye haue obeyed the commaundemente of Ionadab your father, and kepte al his preceptes, and done accordynge vnto all y<sup>e</sup> he hath bydden you: * Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel: Ionadab the sonne of Rechab shall not fayle, but haue one out of his stocke, to stande alwaye before me.

The. xxxvi. Chapter.

Baruch wyrteth (as Jeremye enuyteth) the boke of the cursses agaynst Iuda and Israel. He is sente with the boke vnto the people, and readeth it before them all. He is called before the rulers, and readeth it before the also. The rulers cower vnto the kynge, the wordes of the boke. Jehudi taketh the boke, and readeth a lytle of it, and after calleth it in the fyre. There is another wyrtten at the commaundement of the Lorde.

In the fourthe yere of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Iuda, came the word of y<sup>e</sup> lord vnto Jeremye, sayinge: * Take a boke, & wyrteth therein all the wordes, that I haue spoken to the, to Israel, to Iuda, and to all the people, from the tyme y<sup>e</sup> I beganne for to speake vnto the (in the raygne of Josiah) vnto this daye. That when the house of Iuda heareth of the plage, whiche I haue deuyled for them, they maye peraduenture * turne, euery man from his wycked waye, that I may for geue their offences and synnes.

Then dyd Jeremye call Baruch the sonne of Neriah, * and Baruch wrote in the boke at the mouth of Jeremye, al the wordes of the Lorde, whiche he had spoken vnto him. And Jeremye commaunded Baruch, sayinge: I am in prysoun, so that I maye not come in to the house of the Lorde: therfore go thou thyther, and reade the boke, that thou hast wyrtte at my mouth: namely, the wordes of the Lorde, and rede the in the Lordes house vpon the fastinge daye: that the people, whole Iuda, and all they that come out the cytyes, maye heare. Peraduenture they wyll praye mekelye before the face of the Lorde, and turne euery one from his wycked waye. For greate is the wrathe and dyspleasure, y<sup>e</sup> the Lorde hath taken agaynste this people.

So Baruch the sonne of Neriah dyd, accordynge vnto all that Jeremye the prophete commaunded hym, reacyng the wordes of the Lorde oute of the boke in the Lordes house. And this was done in the fyfthe yere of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Iuda, in the ix. moneth * when it was commaunded, that all the people of Ierusalem shoulde faste before the Lorde, and they also that were come from the cities of Iuda vnto Ierusalem.

Then red Baruch the wordes of Jeremye oute of the boke within the house of the Lorde, oute of the treasury of Gamariah the sonne of Saphan the Scrybe, whiche is besyde the hyer losse of the * newe doore of the Lordes house: that al the people might heare. Nowe when Micheah the sonne of Gamariah the sonne of Sepha had hearde all the wordes of the Lorde oute of the boke, he wente downe to the kynges palace in to the Scrybes chambre, for there all the prynces were set: Elisama the Scrybe, Dalaiash the sonne of Semai, Elnathan the sonne of Achbor, Gamariah the sonne of Saphan, zedekiah the sonne of Hananiah, with al the prynces. And Micheah tolde them all the wordes, that he hearde Baruch reade oute of the boke before the people.

Then all the prynces sente Jehudi the sonne of Nathaniah, the sonne of Selamiah, the sonne of Chusi, vnto Baruch, sayinge: Take in thyne hande the boke, wherout thou hast red before al the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah toke the boke in his hande, and came vnto them. And they sayde vnto him: Syt downe, & rede the boke that we may heare also. So Baruch red, that they myghte heare. Now when they had hearde all the wordes, they were abashed one vpon another, and said vnto Baruch: We wyl certyfy the kynge of all these wordes. And they examined Baruch, saying: tel vs, howe dydest thou wyte all these wordes out of hys mouth? Then Baruch answered them: He spake all these wordes vnto me with his mouth, & I alone was with him, & wrote them in the boke.

Then said the Princes vnto Baruch: So thy waye, and hyde the wth Jeremy, so that no man knowe where ye be. And they wente in to the kynge to the court. But they kept the boke in the chambze of Elisama the Scribe, & tolde y<sup>e</sup> kynge al the wordes y<sup>e</sup> he might heare. So the kynge sent Jehudy to fetch him y<sup>e</sup> boke, whiche he brought out of Elisama the Scribes chambze. And Jehudi red it, that the kynge & al the Princes, whiche were about him, might heare. Now the kynge sat in y<sup>e</sup> wynter house, for it was in y<sup>e</sup>. ix. Moneth, and there was a good fyze before him. And when Jehudi had red thre or foure leaues therof, he cut the boke in peces with a penne knyfe, *and cast it into y<sup>e</sup> fire vpo the hearth, vntyll the boke was all bzente in the fyze vpon the hearth.

Yet no man was abashed therof, or rente his clothes: nether the kynge him selfe, nor his seruauntes, though they hearde all these wordes. Neuerthelesse Elnathan, Dalaiah, and Gamariah besoughte the kynge, that he woulde not burne the boke: not withstandyng the kynge would not heare them, but commaunded Jerahmeel the sonne of Amalech, Saraiah the sonne of Etziel and Selamiah the sonne of Abdtel, to laye handes vpon Baruch the Scribe, and vpon Jeremy the prophet: but y<sup>e</sup> Lorde kepte them out of sight. After now that the kynge had bzente the boke, and the sermons whiche Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremy: The word of y<sup>e</sup> Lorde came vnto Jeremy, sayinge: Take another boke, and wyte in it al the forsaide sermons: that were written in the fyrste boke, whiche Jehoakim the kynge of Juda hath bzente.

And tel Jehoakim the kynge of Juda: thus sayeth the Lorde: y<sup>e</sup> hast bzente the boke, and thoughtest win thy selfe: why hast thou wytten therin, that the kynge of Babilon shall come, and make this lande waste, so that he shall make bothe people and cattel to be out of it? Therfore thus the Lorde sayeth of Jehoakim the kynge of Juda: * There shall none of hys generacion syt vpon the throne of Dauid. * His dead corse shall be caste out, that the heate of the daye, and the frost of the night may come vpon him. And I wil byset the wyckednes of him, of hys sede, and of his seruauntes. Moreouer all the euel that I haue promysed the (though they hearde me not) wyl I brynge vpon them, vpo the inhabytours of Ierusalem, and vpon all Juda. Then toke Jeremy another boke, and gaue it Baruch the Scribe the sonne of Neriah, whiche wrote therein out of the mouth of Jeremy: all the sermons that were in the fyrste boke, whiche Jehoakim the kynge of Juda dyd burne. And there were added vnto them manye mo sermons, then befoze.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

*J*zedekiah succedeth Cononiah. He sendeth vnto Jeremy: to praye for hym. Jeremy goinge in to the launde of Ben Jamin, is taken. He is beaten, and put in pryson. He is deliuered by kynge zedekiah.

Zedekiah y<sup>e</sup> sonne of Josiah, * whiche was made kynge thorow Nabuchodonosor king of Babilon, reigned in the lande of Juda, in y<sup>e</sup> steade of Cononiah the sonne of Jehoakim. But nether he, nor his seruauntes, nor the people in the lande woulde obey y<sup>e</sup> wordes of the Lorde, whiche he spake by y<sup>e</sup> Prophet Jeremy. * Neuerthelesse zedekiah the kynge sent Jehucal the sonne of Selemiah and Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah the priest to the Prophet Jeremy, saying: O praye y<sup>e</sup> vnto the Lorde oure God for vs. Now Jeremy walked fre amonge the people at that time, and was not put in pryson as yet. * Wharados hooste also was come out of Egipte: whiche when the Caldees that beleaged Ierusalem perceaued, they departed from thence.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto unto Jeremye þe Prophet, saying: Thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel, this answer shall ye geue to the kyng of Iuda, that sente you vnto me for counsell: * Beholde, Pharaos hoste whiche is come forth to helpe you, shall retorne to Egypt in to his owne lande: but the Caldees shall come agayne, & fyght againste this cite, wyne it, and set fyre vpon it. For thus sayeth the Lord: a dysceau not your owne myndes, thynckynge on this maner: tush, the Caldees go nowe their waye from vs: No, they shall not go their waye. For though ye had slaine the whole hoste of the Caldees, that beslege you, and euery one of the slayne lay in his tente, yet shoulde they stande vp, and set fyre vpon this cite. Now when the hoste of the Caldees was broken vp from Ierusalem, for feare of the Egyptians armye, Jeremy wente out of Ierusalem towarde the lande of Beniamin, to do certayne busynes there amonge the people. And when he came

The sayde Jeremy: It is not so, I go not to þe Caldees. Neuertheles Ieriah would not beleue hym, but broughte Jeremye bounde before the Prynces. Wherefore the Prynces were angry with Jeremy, causynge hym to be beaten, and to be layed in prysen in þe house of Ionathas the scribe. For he was the ruler of the prysen. Thus was Jeremy put in to the dongeon and prysen, and so laye there a longe tyme. * Then zedekiah the kyng sente for him, and called him, and asked him quyetly in hys owne house, saying: thinkest thou this busynes (that nowe is in hande) cometh of the Lord? Jeremy answered: yea, that it doth: & thou (sayde he) shalte be deliuered in to the kyng of Babylons power.

Then zedekiah the kyng commaunded to put Jeremy in the fore entree of the prysen, and daily to be geuen him a cake of bread, and els no dighte meate, vntyl all the bread in the cite was eaten vp. Thus Jeremy remayned in the fore entree of the prysen.

S By the mocon of the rulers Jeremy is put in to a dongeon. At the request of Abedneco the Chambers layne the kyng commaundeth Jeremy to be broughte forth of the Dongeon. Jeremy sheweth the kyng howe he myghte escape death, Aphatiah the sonne of Nathan, Godoliah the sonne of Phasur, Iuschal þe sonne of Selmliah, and Phasur þe sonne of Melchiah perceaued the wordes, that Jeremy had spoke vnto al the people, namely on this maner: Thus sayeth the Lord: * Who so remaineth in this cite, shall perishe ether with the swearde, with hunger, or with the pestilence: But who so falleth vnto the Caldees, shall escape, & wyngynge his soule for a praye, and shal lyue. * For thus sayeth the Lord. This cite (no doute) must be deliuered in to þe power of the kyng of Babilon, and he also shal wyne it. Then sayde the prynces vnto the kyng: Syr, we beseech you let this man be put to death. For thus he dyscourage the handes of the soudyers that be in thys cite, and the handes of all the people, when he speaketh suche wordes vnto them. This man herely labourereth not for peace of the people, but myschefe. zedekiah the kyng answered and sayde: lo, he is in your hands, for the kynge may denye you nothyng. Then toke they Jeremey, and cast him in to the dongeon of Melchiah the sonne of Hamlech, & dwelt in the fore entrey of the pylon. And they let downe Jeremey with coardes in to a dongeon, where there was no water, but myze. So Jeremey stakke fast in the myze. Now when Abedmelech the Moorian beyng a chamberlayne in the kynges courtte, vnderstode, that they had cast Jeremey in to the dongeon: he wente out of the kynges house, and spake to the kynge, (whiche then sat vnder the poorte of Beniamin) these wordes: My lord the kyng, where as these men medle with Jeremey the prophet, they do him wronge: Namely, in that they haue put him in pylon, there to dye of hunger, for there is no more bycade in the cytie. Then the kynge commaunded Abedmelech the Moorian and sayde: Take from hence xxx. men whome thou wylte, and drawe vp Jeremey the prophet oute of the dongeon, before he die. So Abedmelech toke the men with him, and went to the house of Hamlech, and there vnder an almyr he gate olde ragges & worne cloutes, and let them downe by a coarde, in to the dongeon to Jeremey.

And Abedmelech the Moorian sayde vnto the prophet Jeremey: I put these ragges and cloutes vnder thyne arme holes, betwixte them and the coardes: And Jeremey dyd so. So they drewe vp Jeremey with coardes and toke him out of the dongeon, and he remayned in the fore entrey of the pylon. Then * zedekiah the kynge sente and caused Jeremey the prophet be called vnto hym, in to the thyrde entrey, & was by the house of the Lorde. And the kynge sayde vnto Jeremey: I wil aske the some what but hyde nothyng from me. Then Jeremey answered zedekiah: Vt I be playne vnto the, thou wylte cause me suffre death: vt I geue the counsell, thou wylte not folowe me. So the kynge swore an ooth secretly vnto Jeremey, sayinge: As truly as the Lorde lyueth, that made vs these soules, I will not slaye the, nor geue the in to the handes of them that seke after thy lyfe.

Then sayde Jeremey vnto zedekiah: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: * If case be, & thou wylte go forth vnto the kynge of Babilons princes, thou shalt saue thy lyfe, and this cytie shall not be brente, yea, both thou and thy household shall escape with your lyues. But vt thou wylt not go forth to the kynge of Babilons princes, then shall this cytie be delpyetted in to the handes of the Caldees which shall set fyre vpon it, and thou shalt not be able to escape them. And zedekiah said vnto Jeremey: I am afrayde for the Iewes, that are fled vnto the Caldees, lest I come in their handes, and so they to haue me in derision.

But Jeremey answered: No, they shall not betraye the: O herken vnto the voyce of the Lorde (I beseeche the) which I speake vnto the, so shalt thou be well, and saue thy lyfe. But vt thou wylt not go forth, the Lorde hath tolde me thus plainely: Beholde, al the women that are left in the kynge of Iudaes house, shall go out to the kynge of Babilons princes. For they thynke, that thou arte deceaued: and that the men in whose thou dydest put thy trust, haue gotten the vnder, and set thy fete faste in the myze, and gone theyr waye from the. Therefore all thy wyues with their chyldren shall fle vnto the Caldees, and thou shalt not escape their handes, but shalt be the kynge of Babilons prisoner, and this cytie shall be brente. Then sayde zedekiah vnto Jeremey: loke that no bodye knowe of these wordes, and thou shalt not dye. But vt the princes perceaue, that I haue talked with the, and come vnto the, sayinge: O speake, what sayde the kynge to the: hyde it not from vs, & we wil not put the to death. Tel vs (we praye the) what sayde the kyng to the: Se thou geue the this answer: I haue humbly besoughte the kynge, & he wyllet me lie no more in Jehonathas house, that I dye not there: Then came al the princes vnto Jeremey, and asked hym. And he tolde them, after the maner as the kynge bad hym. Then they helde their peace, for they perceaued nothing. * So Jeremey abode styl in the fore entrey of the pylon, vntyll the daye that Jerusalem was wonne.

The xxxix. Chapter.

Aburhodonosor besiegeth Ierusalem. zedekiah dyeth

Myeth. He is taken of the Chaldees. Hys sonnes are slayne. Hys eyes are thynke oute. Jeremye is prouyded for. Abedmelech is deliuered from captiuitie, because of the confidence that he hath in God.

Nowe when the citie of Ierusalem was taken *(for in the .ix. yere of zedekyah kyng of Iuda in the tenth Moneth, came Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babilon and all hys host, and beseged Ierusalem. And in the .xi. yere of zedekiah in the fourthe Moneth the .ix. dawe of the Moneth, he brake into the citie). Then all the Prynces of the kyng of Babilon, came in, and late them downe vnder the porte: Neregel, Sarezet, Samegarnabo, Sarlachim, Rabaris, Neregel, Sarezet, Rabmag, with all the other Prynces of the kyng of Babilon. * And when zedekyah the kyng of Iuda with his souldiers sawe them, they fledde, and departed oute of the ctyte by nyghte thoroowe the kynges garden, and thoroowe the porte that is betwene the two walles, and so they wente toward the wyldernesse.

But the Chaldees hooste folowed faste after them, and tooke zedekiah in the felde of Jericho, and broughte him prisoner to Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon vnto Reblath, that lyeth in the lande of Hemath where he gaue iudgement vpon hym. So the kyng of Babilon caused the chyloren of zedekiah & al the nobles of Iuda to be slayne, befoze hys face at Reblath. And made zedekiahs eyes to be putte oute, and boode hym wpyth chaynes, and sent him to Babilon.

C* Moreover, the Chaldees brente by the kynges palace, with the other houses of the people, and brake downe the walles of Ierusalem. As for the remnant of the people that were in y<sup>e</sup> citie, and suche as were come to helpe them (what so euer was left of the commensforte) Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne caried them to Babilon. But Nabuzaradan y<sup>e</sup> chefe captayne let the rascall people (& those that had nothyng) dwell in the lande of Iuda, and gaue them vineyardes and corne feldes at the same tyme. Nabuchodonozor also the kyng of Babilon gaue Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne a charge, concerninge Jeremye, sayinge: Take and cherishe hym, and make muche of hym: les thou do him no harme, but intreat him after his owne desire.

So Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne, Nabusalban the chefe chamberlayne, Nergalsareser the treasurer and all the kyng of Babilons lordes, sent for Jeremye, * and caused hym to be fet oute of the fore entrie of the pryson, and committed hym vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam the sonne of Saphan: That he shoulde carpe hym home, * and so he dwelt amonge the people. Nowe whyle Jeremye laye yet bounde in the fore entrie of the pryson, the worde of the Lorde came vnto him, sayinge: Goe, and tell Abedmelech the Moorian: Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israell: Beholde, the cruell and sharpe plage that I haue deuised for this citie, wyl I bring vpon them, that thou shalte se it: but I wyl deliuer thee (sayeth the Lorde) and thou shalt not come in to the handes of those men, whome thou fearest. For doutles I wyl saue thee, so that thou shalte not perishe with the swearde: but thy lyfe shalbe saued, and that because thou hast put thy truste in me, sayeth the Lorde.

Moreover, Iohanan the sonne of Careah and all the captaynes of the chooste, that were scattede on euery syde in the land, came to Godoliah in Mazphah, and sayd vnto him: knowest thou not that Baalis kynge of the Ammonites hath sente Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, to slaye thee: But Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam beleued them not. Then sayde Iohanan the sonne of Careah vnto Godoliah in Mazphah these wordes secretly: Lette me goe, I pray thee, and I wylle slaye Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, so þ no body shal knowe it. Wherefore wylle he kyll thee, that all the Jewes whyche resorte vnto thee, myghte be scattede, and the remmaunte in Iuda perithe: Then sayde Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam to Iohanan the sonne of Careah: Thou shalte not doe it, for they are but lyes, that men say of Ismaell.

And Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah with those ten men that were swozne to him, starte bp, and smote Godoliah the sone of Ahicam the sonne Saphan with the swearde, and slewe hym, whom þ kynge of Babilon had made gouernour of the lande, Ismaell also slewe all the Jewes that were with Godoliah at Mazphah, and all þ Chaldees that he fonde there waytynge vpon hym.

The. xliiii. Chapter.

¶ He repproueth the people for theyr ydolatre. They that sette byghte by the threatenynge of the Lorde, are chastened. The destruction of Egypt and the Jewes therein is prophesied.

A Ihs is the worde þ was shewed to Jeremie concerninge all the Jewes which dwelte in Egypt: At Magdal, at Thaphnis, at Mephis, & in the lade of Natutes. Thus sayeth þ Lorde of Hostes the God of Israell: Ye haue sene all the misery, that I haue brought vpon Ierusalem, and vpon all the cyties of Iuda: So that thys daye they are desolate, and no man dwelling therein: And that because of the great blasphemyes, whiche they committed, to prouoke me vnto anger: In that they wente backe to doe sacrifyce, and wythpyppe vnto straunge Goddes: Whom neither they, nor ye, nor youre fathers haue knowen. Howe be it, I sente vnto the my seruantes al the prophetes: * I rose vpearlye, I sente vnto them, and gaue them warnynge: I doe no suche abhominable thynges, and thynges that I hate. But they woulde not forlowe nor herken, to tourne frome theyr wyckednes, and to do no more sacrifice vnto straunge goddes.

¶ Wherefore myne indignacion and wrath was kyndled, and it burnte vp the cyties of Iuda, thefeldes with the stretes of Ierusalem so that they were made waste and desolate, as it is come to passe thys daye. Howe therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israell: Howe happeneth it, þ ye doe so greate euell vnto youre owne soules, thus to destroye the men and women, chyldzen and babes of Iuda? So that none of you is lefte, because ye prouoke me vnto wrath, wyth the woorkes of youre owne handes: When ye offre vnto straunge Goddes in the lande of Egypt where as ye begonne to dwell: That ye myghte vtterlye perishe, and that ye myghte be reuyled and shamefullye entreated of all nacyns.

A These are þe wordes that Jeremy þe prophet spake vnto Baruch the sone of Neriah, * after that he had written these Sermons into a booke at the mouth of Jeremye, in the fourth yere of Jehoakim þe son of Josiah kig of Juda.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel vnto the, O Baruch: In so muche as thou thoughtest thus (when thou wast wyrtynge. Wo is me, the Lorde hath geuen me payne for my trauayle: I haue wepyed my selfe with sighinge, and shall I fynde no rest: Therefore tell hym, O Jeremye, that the Lorde sayeth thus: Beholde, the thyng that I haue buylded, wyll I breake downe agayne, and rote oute þe thyng that I haue plated, yea, this whole lande. And sekest thou yet promotion: Looke not for it, and desyre it not. For I wil bringe a miserable plage vpon all flesh sayeth the Lorde: * But thy lyfe wyll I geue thee for a praye, whersoener thou goest.

The propheteþ the destruction of Egypte. Despuerance is promysed to Israel.

A Ere folowre the wordes of the Lorde to the prophete Jeremye, whiche he spake vnto þe Gentyles. These wordes folowynge preached he to the * Egypciens concerninge the hooſte of Pharaon Mecho kyng of Egypt, * when he was in Charcanis belyde the water of Euphrates: what tyme as Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon ſewe hym, in the fourth yere of Jehoakim þe sonne of Josiah, kyng of Juda.

* Ye make redy buckler and shyld, ye goe forth to fyght. Ye harnesse your horsſes, and set your selues vpon them. Ye set youre salettes fast on, ye byynge forth speares, ye scoure youre swerdes, and put on youre brest plates.

But alas, howe happeneth it, that I see you so astrayde: Why shyyncke ye backe: Wherefore are youre worthyes slayne: Yea, they runne so faste awaye, that none of them loketh behynde hym. Fearfulnes is falle vpon euerychone of them, sayeth the Lorde. The lyghtest of foote shall not flee awaye, and the worthyes shall not escape.

Towarde the Northe by the water of Euphrates, they shall stumbe & fall. But what is he thys, that swelleth vp, as it were a floude, roaringe & raginge like þe streames of water: It is Egypte that tyseth vp lyke þe floude, & casteth out the waters with so greute noyse.

For they saye: we wyll goe vp, & wyll couer the earthe: we wyll destroye the cytyes, with the that dwell therein. Get you to horse backe, role forth the Charettes, come forth ye worthyes: ye Moorsians, ye Libeans with your bucklers, ye Libeans wyth youre bowes: So shall this daye be vnto the Lorde God of hooſtes, a daye of vengeance, that he maye avenge hym of hys enemyes. The swerde shall deuoure, it shall be satisfied & bathed in their bloude: * for the Lorde God of hooſtes shall haue a slayne offeringe towarde the Northe, by the water of Euphrates. Goe vp (O Gilead) and byynge tryacle vnto the daughter of Egypte.

But in bayne shalte thou goe to surgerie, for thy wounde shall not bee stopped. The hepythen shall heare of thy shame, and the lande shall be full of thy confusion: For one stronge man shall stumbe vpon another, howe then shulde they not fall both together.

* These are the wordes that þe Lorde spake to the prophete Jeremye, concerninge the hooſte of Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon, which was sente to destroye þe lande of Egypt: preach out thowowe þe lande of Egypt, & cause it be proclaimed at Magdol, Memphis, and Thaphnis, and say: Stande still, make the redye, for the swerde shall consume the rounde aboute.

Howe happeneth it that thy myghty worthyes are fallen: Why stode they not fast: Euen bycause þe Lorde thrust them downe. The slaughter was great, for one fell euery styll vpon another. One cryed vpon another: Up, let vs goe as gayne to our owne people, and to oure owne natural coultre, fro the swerde of oure enemye.

Crye euen there: O Pharaon kyng of Egypte, the tyme wyll byynge sedition. As truely as I lyue (sayeth the kyng), * whose name is the Lorde of hooſtes) it shall come as the mounte of Chabor, & as Libanus yf it stode in y sea. O thou doughter of Egypte make redye thy gect to flyghte. For Mēphis shalbe voyde & desolate, so that no man shal dwel therein. <sup>b</sup> The lande of Egypt is lyke a goodly fayre calfe, but one shal come oute of the North to prycke her forwarde. <sup>c</sup> Her wagied souldiers y be with her, are lyke fat calves.

If they also shal flee away together, and not abyde: For the daye of their slaughter and the tyme of their visitacion shal come vpon them.

The crye of their enemyes shal make a noyse, as the blaste of a trōpet. For they shal entre in with their hoste, and come with ares, as it were hewers downe of wod. And they shal cut downe her wod (sayeth the Lord) without any discrecion. For they shal be moe in nombze then the greshoppers, so that no man shal be able to tell them. The doughter of Egypte shalbe confounded, when she shal be deliuered in to the handes of the people of the North.

Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israell: Beholde, I wyl visit that retchlesse people of Alexandria, Pharao and Egypte, yea, both their goddes and their kynges: Euen Pharao, and all them that put their trust in hym. Yea, I wyl deliuer the in to the handes of those, that seke after their lyues. Namely, into the power of Nabuchodonozor the kinge of Babilō, and into the power of his seruauntes. And after al these thynges it shalbe inhabited as a fore tyme, sayeth the Lord.

E But be not thou afrayde (O my seruaunte Jacob) feare not thou, O Israell. For lo, I wyl helpe the from farre, and thy sede from the lande of thy captiuite. Jacob also shal come agayne, and be in rest: He shalbe ryche, and no man shal do him harme. feare thou not (O Jacob my seruaunte) sayeth the Lord, for I am with the: and wyl destroye all nacions, amonge whome I haue scatered the. Neuerthelesse I wyl not consume thee, but chastene and correcte the: yea, and that with discrecion: neither wyl I spare thee as one that were faultlesse.

The notes

a. The Chaldecers kylled the Egyptians, at y floud of Euphrates, whiche was towarde the North: where as yet their host was wonderous great, and their hostes and charrettes manye. But the greater their host was, the more cruell was their slaughter: so dyd the Lord punishe their wickednesse, geuinge them into the handes of the Chaldecers: and therefore called the prophete the daye of their slaughter the daye of the Lordes vengeance, and them a flayn offering of the Lord.

b. As though he sayd. Hitherto (O Egypte) hast thou bene as a goodly fayre calfe, for thine haboudaunce of ryches. Therefore as bullockes and oxen are stonge with hornettes and pricked forwarde with goades (or as some cal them gaddes) so shal the Babilonians stinge and pricke the, and driue the to flighte and overthrowe thee. By him that shoulde come oute of the North, is vnderstande the kyng of Babilon and his hoste.

c. Her wagied souldiers, &c. The meaninge is, that the hyred hooste of the Egyptians gathered of the coastes that bordered thereon, shoulde be fearful and weake, and more deyr ic & delicious, then stronge and manfull, as men fattened lyke shal fed oxen, so that they shoulde also flye wryth the Egyptians, when their miserie drewe nye, & when the daye of their visitacion and punishment shoulde come.

And the men shal crye, & all they that dwell in the lande, shal mourne at the noyse & stampyng of their stronge barded horses, at the makynge of their charrettes, and at the romblyng of the wheles. The fathers shal not looke to their chyldren, so feable and werye shal their handes be: at the same tyme, when he shal be there, to destroye the whole lande of the Philistines. Yea, thy stronge cytie of * Bariathia-rim shall be brought to shame, & astay-ed: Moab shall no more be had in ho-noure: wycked counsell shall be taken vpon Hesebon. Come (shal they say) let vs rote them out, that they maye be no more amonge the nombre of the Gentyles, yea, that they maye no more be thought vpon: Thus the sword shal persecute the: A voyce shall crye from Ho-ronaim: With great wasting & destruction, is Moab made desolate.

And this crye shalbe herde in all her cittyes. At the goynge vp vnto Luth there shall arys a lamentacyon: and downe towarde Horonaim, there shall be herde a cruell and a deadly crye: Set you awaye, saue your lyues, and be like vnto the heeth in the wyldernesse.

* For because thou hast trusted in thy stronge holdes and treasure, thou shalt be taken a Chamos with hys pryestes, and prynces shall go awaye into captiuitye.

B The destroyer shall come vpon all cittyes, none shall escape. The valleys shalbe destroyed, and the felde shalbe layed waste: lyke as the Lorde hath determined.

b Make a token vnto Moab, that she get her awaye spedelye: for her cittyes shall be made so desolate, that no man shall dwell therein. c Cursed be he that doeth the worke of the Lorde negly-gentlye, and cursed be he that kepeth backe hys * swearde from the dymyng of bloude.

Moab hath euer bene tych and care-lesse from her youth vp, she hath sptten and taken her ease with her treasure.
She was neuer yet put out of one vessell into another (that is) she neuer went awaye into captiuitie, therefore her last remayneth, and her sauoure is not yet chaunged.

But lo, the tyme cometh, sayth the Lorde, that I shal sende her trusters to truiste her vp, to prepare and season her vessels: yea, her tanchredes rattell and Make to and fro. And Moab shall be ashamed of Chamos, like as Israel was ashamed of * Bethel, wherin she put her truste.

Wherfore do ye thyncke thus: we are myghtye, and stronge men of warre: Moab shall be destroyed, and her citleg brente vp: her chosen yong men shall be slayne, sayeth the Kinge, whose name is the Lorde of hostes. The destruction of Moab cometh on a pace, and her fall is at hande.

All her neighbours shall mounthe for her, and all they that knowe her name, shal saye: How happeneth it, that the stronge state and the goodlye rodde is thus broken: And thou doughter Di-bon, come dōwne from thy glorie, and syt in pduerte. For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come vp to thee also, and breake downe thy stronge holdes.

And thou that dwellest in Aroer, get the to the strete, and loke aboute thee: aske them that are fled and escaped, and saye: what thinge is happened: O, Moab is confounded and ouercome.

Mourne and crye, tell it out at Ar-non, that Moab is destroyed. And myscry shall come vpon the playne landes namely, vpon Holon, and Jahazah: vpon Mephath and Dibon, vpon Rabo and the house of Deblathaim, vpon Ba-riathiarim & Bethgamul, vpon Beth-maon & Carloth, vpon Bozrah & all the cittyes in the lande of Moab, whethere they lye farre or neare.

The hozne of Moab shall be smyteten downe, and her arme broken, sayth the Lorde. Make her dyoncken, for she magnified her selfe aboue the Lord, that men maye clappe their handes at her vomite, & that she also may be laughed to scozne. O Israel, halt ꝑ not laughe him to scozne, when he is taken among theues: * Yea, because of thy wordes that thou hast spokē agaynst him, thou shalte be dryuen awaye. Ye Moab-bites shall leaue the cittyes, and dwell in rockes of stone, & become lyke dōw-ues, that make theyr nestes in holes.

hearde of it, she is very hye mynded. I knowe her stoutnesse, her hostynge, her arrogancy and þe pride of her stomacke, sayeth the Lorde. For her furiousnesse may nether vpholde her wth strenght nor dede. Therfore shall thei<sup>r</sup> mournynge be made for Moab, and euerye man shall cry for Moabs sake: a lamentacyō shall be made to the men that stand vpon the wall. So wyl I mourne for the also, O Jazer, and for the, o thou vyneyard of Sabamah.

Thy wyne braunches shall come ouer the sea, and the braunches of Jazer but vnto þe sea: the destroyer shall break into thy haruest and grape gathering: Myrrh and cheate shall be taken awaye from the tymbre felde, & from the whole lande of Moab.

There shall be no swete wyne in the presse, the treader shall haue no stomack to crye, yea, there shall be none to crye vnto him: which afore tyme were herd from Hesebon to Eleale and Jahaz, whiche lyfted vp thei<sup>r</sup> voyce from zoar vnto Hozonaim, that bullock of thre yere olde. The waters also of Dimriū shall be dyed vp.

I More ouer I wyl make Moab cease (sayeth the Lorde) from the offerynge & censynge that she hath made vnto her goddes in hye places. Wherfore my hert mourneth for Moab, lyke a crowde playenge an heuy songe: and for the mennes sake of the byrcke wall my hert mourneth also, cūen as a pype that pppeth a dolefull songe: for they shall be very fewe, and destroyed.

All heades shall be shauen, and all beertes clippyd of: all handes bounde, and all loynes gyrded about with sack cloth. vpon all the house toppes and stretes of Moab, there shall be mournynge: for I wyl breake Moab like an vnprofytable vessel sayeth the Lorde. O howe fearfull is she: O howe mourneth she: O howe doeth Moab hange down her head, and is ashamed: Thus shall Moab be a laughing stocke, and had in derision of all them, þe be rounde aboute her.

* For thus sayeth the Lorde: Behold, the enemy shall come spenge as an eagle, and sprede his wynges vpon Moab. They shall clyme ouer the walles, and wyne the stronge holdes. Then the myghtie mens hertes in Moab shall be lyke the hert of a woman trauelyng with childe.

And Moab shall be made so desolate, that she shall no more be a people, because she hath set vp her self against the Lorde. * feare, pyt, and snare shall come vpon the (O Moab) sayeth the Lorde. Who so escapeth the feare, shall fall in the pyt: and who so getteth oute of the pyt, shall be taken in the snare.

For I wyl byrnye a yere of dystacyon vpon Moab, sayeth the Lorde. They that are able to flye, shall stande vnder the shadowe of Hesebon. For there shall go a fyre out of Hesebon, and a flame from Sion, and shall burne vp that proude people of Moab, both before and behynde.

Woe be vnto the (O Moab) for thou people of Chamos shalt perishe: Yea, thy sonnes and daughters shall be led awaye captiue. Yet at the last wyl I byrning Moab out of captiuite agayne, sayeth the Lord, Thus saith the Lorde of Moab.

The Notes.

- Chamos is the name of the Idole and God of the Moabites.
- After the Greke. Some read: Beue a flower: or, wynges.
- The Hebr. expound this of the Chaldees, that they should haue destroyed the whole kyngdome of the Moabites: as though the rexe should meane thus much: Cursed be he that neglygently performeth the vengeance of the Lorde, that spareth these moste wycked Moabites, & that withholdeth his swerde from smyting of thei<sup>r</sup> bloude.

The .xliij. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde agaynst the Ammonytes, agaynst Iudaea, Damascus, Aedae and Elam.

A Concerninge the Ammonytes, thus the Lord sayeth: Hath Israell no chyldren, or is he without an heyre? Why hath the poure kyng then taken Gad in wherfore doeth his people dwell in hye cyties. Beholde therfore, the tyme cometh (sayeth the Lord) that I wil bring a noyle of warre in to Rabah of the Ammonytes. Lahell shall be desolate, and her cytyes brente vp: and the Israelytes shall be lordes ouer those that had thei<sup>m</sup> in possession afore, sayeth the Lorde. Hesebon shall mourne, for it shalbe roted out of þe ground, saith the Lorde. The ctytes of Rabah shall crye out, and gyze them selues with sacke clothe: they shall mourne, and runne about the walles: for theyr kyng shall be led away prysoner: yea, his prynces and prynces with him.

B Wherefore trustest thou in the water streames that flowe to and fro, O thou fearce doughter: and thynkest thou that thou arte so safe (by reason of thy treasure) that no man shal come to the?

Beholde, I wyll brynge a feare vpon the, sayth the Lorde God of hostes, fro all those that be aboute the: so that ye shall be scatred euery man from another, and no man shall gather theym together agayne that be fled. But after that, I wyll brynge the Ammonites also out of captiuite agayne.

Apoc. 21. b
Ezech. 25. b
32. 1. 35. a

* Upon the Edomites hath the Lord of hostes spoken on thys maner: Is there no more wysdom in Themar? Is there no more good counsell amonge his people? Is their wysdom then turned cleane to naught? Get you hence, turne your backes, cpepe down into the depe, O ye cptyens of Dedan.

For I wyl brynge destruction vpon Elam, yea, and þe day of his visitacion.
If the grape gatherers came vpon the, shoulde they not leaue some grapes? If the night robbers came vpon the, shoulde they not take so much as they thought were ynough?

C But I wyll make Elam bare, and discouer his secretes, so that he shal not be able to hyde them. Hys sede shall be wasted away, yea, his brethren and hys neighbour, and he hym selfe shal not be left behynde.

Thou shalt leaue thy fatherles children behynde the, and I wyll kepe the,
and thy wydowes shall take theyr com-forth in me. For thus hath the Lorde spoken: Beholde, they þe men thought were bnumete to dryncke of the cuppe, haue drunken with the fyrst: & thynkest thou then to be free?

Jer. 49. b
Ezech. 12. b
1 Pet. 4. 1.

No, no: thou shalt nether be quyte nor free, but thou must drynke also: for why, I haue sworne by my selfe (sayeth the Lorde) that Bozrah shall become a wyldernes, an open chaine, a laughing stocke and cursyng: and her ctytes shal be a continual desert.

For I am perfectly informed of the Lorde, that he hath sent a message all ready vnto the heathen. Gather you together, and go forth agaynste them:
make you ready to the battayle, for lo:

* I wyll make the but small amonge the hethen, a lytle regarded among men.

* Thy hys stomacke and the pryde of thy hert haue disceaued þe, because thou wylt dwell in the holes of stony rockes, and haue the hys mountaynes in possession. Neuertheles though the nest were as hys as the Eagles, yet wyll I cast the downe, sayeth the Lord. More-ouer Idumea shall be a wyldernes:

* who so goeth by it, shalbe abashed, & wondre at all her inferable plagues.

* Like as Sodome, Gomor, and the cities that laye there about, were turned vpon lyde downe (sayth the Lord) so shal no body dwell in Idumea, and no man shall haue his habytacyon there. Be-holde, lyke as the Lyon cometh vpon from the pleasaunt medowes of Jordane vnto the grene pastures of Etha, so wyll I dryue him, & make him runne agaynst her. But who is the yong ma that I wyll ordeyne thereto? Who is like vnto me? What is he that wyll stryue wyth me? What shepherde maye stande in my handes?

*As for Cedar and the kyngedome of Hazor, whom Nabuchodonozor þe king of Babylon smote downe, the LORD hath spoken thus vpon them. Arise, & get you vp vnto Cedar, and destroy the people towarde the east. Theyr tentes and theyr flockes shall they take away, yea theyr hangynges and theyr vessell.
Theyr Camels also shall they carpe away with them. They shall come about them on euery syde with a fearful crye.

file, get you soone away, crepe into caues, that ye may dwell there: O ye inhabytours of Hazor sayeth the Lord: for Nabuchodonozor the kinge of Babylon hath holden a counsell concerning you, and concludeth his deuice against you. Arise, and get you vp agaynste ponder ryche and carelesse people (sayeth the Lorde) whiche haue nether gates nor doze barres, and that dwell not together. Their Camels shall be stollen, and the droues of theyr catell dyuen away.

Moreouer, these that be Hauen wil I scatter towarde all the wyndes, and brynge them to destruction: yea, & that thorowe theyr owne fampliers, sayeth the Lord. Hazor also shall be a dwelling for dragons, and an euerlastyng wil-dernesse: so that no bodye shall dwell there, and no man shall haue there hys habytacyon.

These are the wordes, that the Lord des from the foure quarters of heaue, and will scatter them agaynst the same foure wyndes. And there shall be no people, but some of Elam shall flye vnto them.

For I will cause Elam to be afraied of theyr enemies, and of them that seke theyr lyues: and will brynge vpon the the indignacyon of my wrathe, sayeth the Lorde. And I will persecute them with the swearde so longe tyll I haue brought them to nought. I will sette my stole in Elam, I will destroy both the kyng and the prynces from thence, sayeth the Lorde. But in processe of

The I. Chapter.

He propheseth the destruction of Babylon, & the deliuerance of Irael, whiche was in captiuite.

In the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto the prophete Jeremy, concernyng Babylon, and the lande of the Caldees:

*preach among the Gentyles, let your voyce be heard, make a token: cry out, kepe no silence, but saye: Babilon shall be wonne, *Bel shall be confounded, and Merodach shall be overcome.

to shame and their ymages shall stande in feare. For out of the north there shall come a people agaynst her, whiche shall make her lande so waste, that no body shall dwell therein: nether man nor beast, for they shall flye and depart fro thence.

Dani. 2. 35.

* In those dayes and at that tyme sayeth the Lorde, the children of Istra-ell shall come, they and the chyldren of Iuda, wepyng and makinge hast, and shall seke the Lorde theyr God. They shall aske the way to Sion, thither shall they turne theyr faces, and come & haue vpon thee, in a couenante that neuer haue deuoured them: and their enemies said: We haue made no fault agaynst the, for they haue displeased the Lord, yea, euen the Lord which is the bewtpe of their rightuousnesse, and that defended their fathers. Yet shall ye fle from Babylon, and departe oute of the lande of the Caldees, and ye shall be as the rammes that go before the flocke. * For lo, I will wake vp an hoost of people fro the northren land, and byynge them vpon Babilō: these shall lay sege to it, and wyne it: Theyr arrowes shall not misse, lyke as a connyng archer shutteth not wronge. And the Caldees shall be spoyled, and all they that spoyle them, shall be satisfiſed, sayeth the Lord: * because ye were so cherefull and glad, to treade down mine heritage, and fulfilled your pleasures, as the calves in the grasse: and triumphed ouer them like the bulles, when ye had gotten the victorie.

Your mothers shall be sore confounded, and they that bare you, shall come to shame. She shall be the leſt ſet by amonge the nacjons, voyde, waſte, and dried vp. No man shall be able to dwel there, for the feare of the Lord, but she shall be whole deſolate. * All they that go by Babilon, shall ſtande ſtill, and be abaſhed, and shall wondre at all her plagues.

Go forth in your aray agaynſt Babylon round about, al ye that can handle bowes: ſhote at her, ſpare no arrowes, for ſhe hath ſynned agaynſt the Lord. Crye oute: vpon her, vpon her, agaynſt her rounde about: ſhe ſhall yeld her ſelfe, her foundacions ſhall fall, and her walles ſhall come downe, for it ſhall be the vengeance of the Lord. Yea, vengeance ſhall be taken of her, * and as ſhe hath done, ſo ſhall ſhe be dealt wthall. They ſhall rote out the ſower from Babylon, and hym that handleth the ſickle in harueſt. For feare of y<sup>e</sup> ſword of the enemye, euery man ſhall get hym to his owne people, & euery mā ſhall fle to his owne lande. Iſraell is a ſcattered flocke, the Lyons haue diſperſed the.

* Iſraell the kynge of the Myrians deuoured them, * laſt of all this Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon hath broken all theyr bones.

Therefore thus ſayeth the Lord of hoostes the God of Iſraell: beholde, I will byſet the kynge of Babylon and his kyngdome, * as I haue byſited the kynge of the Myrians: and will byynge Iſraell agayne to hys pleaſaunte paſture, that he maye fede vpon Charinel and Baſan, and be ſatysfied vpon the mount of Ephraim and Gilead. * In thoſe dayes and at the ſame tyme (ſaith the Lord) y<sup>e</sup> the offence of Iſraell be ſought for, there ſhall none be found: Yf men enquire for the ſynne of Iuda, there ſhall be none: for I will be mercyfull vnto them, whome I ſuffre to remaine ouer.

Go downe (O thou auenger) into the enemyes lande, & byſet them that dwel therein: downe wth them, and ſmyte them vpon the backes, ſayeth y<sup>e</sup> Lord: do accordynge to all, that I haue commaunded the. There is gone about the lande a crye of a ſlaughter and greate murder, namely on this maner: Howe happeneth it, y<sup>e</sup> the hammer of y<sup>e</sup> whole worlde is thus broken and broſed in ſonder? Howe chaunceth it, that Babylon is become a wylderneſſe amonge the heathen on this maner? I my ſelfe haue layed wayte for thee, and thou arte taken: vnawares arte thou trapped and ſnared: for why, thou haſt prouoked the Lord vnto anger: The Lord hath opened hys houſe of ordynaunce, and brought forth the weapes of hys wrath. For the thyng that is done in the lande of the Caldees, it is the Lord of hoſtes worke.

Theſe thynges ſhall come vpon her at the laſt, they ſhall breake into her preuie chambres, they ſhall leaue her as bare as ſtones, that be layed together vpon heapes. They ſhall ſo deſtroy her, that nothyng ſhall be lefte. They ſhall ſlaue all theyr myghtie ſouldiers, and put them to death. No be vnto them, for the daye & tyme of theyr viſitacion is at hand. He thynke I heare all readye a crye, of them that be fled and eſcaped out of the land of Babilō, which ſhe w in Sion the vengeance of y<sup>e</sup> Lord oure God, the vengeance of his temple: yea, a voice of the, y<sup>e</sup> cry agaynſt Babilō: Cal vp al y<sup>e</sup> archers agaynſt Babylon, pitch your tētes rounde about her, y<sup>e</sup>

none escape. * Recompence her, as she hath deserued: and acording as she hath done, so deale with her agayne: for she hath * set vp her selfe agaynst y<sup>e</sup> Lord, agaynst the holy one of Israell. Therfore shall her yonge men fall downe in the stretes, and all her menne of watte shall be rooted out in that daye, sayeth the LORDE. Beholde, I speake vnto the (O thou proude) sayeth the Lord God of Hostes: for thy daye shall come, euen the tyme of thy vysitacion. And the proude shall stumbe and fal, and no man shall helpe hym vp. The swearde shall come vpon the Caldees, saith y<sup>e</sup> Lord, vpon theym that dwell in Babylon, vpon theyr prynces, and vpon theyr wyse men: The swearde vpon theyr sothesayers, as for those (they shall become fooles.) The swearde vpon theyr worthyes, so that they shall stande in feare: The swearde vpon their horsemen and charrettes, and vpon all the comen people that dwell vnder them: so y<sup>e</sup> they shall all become lyke women: The swearde vpon their treasure, so that it shall be stollen away: The sweard vpon theyr waters, so that they shall be dried vp: for the lande worshypeth ymagines, and delpteth in straunge wondrefull thynges. Therefore shall wyld beasts, Apes, and Estriches dwell therein: for there shall neuer man dwell there, neither shall any man haue hys habitacion there for euermore. Neuertheles, the porcyon of Jacob is none suche: but he that made all thynges, whose name is the Lord of Hostes, he is the rodde of his enheritaunce. One pursuauant shall mete another, yea, one poste shall come by another, to bryng the kynge of Babilon tydynges: þ his citie is taken in on euery side, þ foordes occupied, the fenns bzēt bp, & þ souldiers sore afrated.

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell: the doughter of Babylon hath bene in her tyme lyke as a thzelsyng flooze, but thortlye shall her haruest come. Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon hath deuoured and destroyed me, he hath made me an empty vessel. He swallowed me vp lyke a dragon, & fylled his belly w my delicatēs: he hath cast me out, he hath taken my substance away, and the thing that was left me hath he caried vnto Babylon, sayeth the doughter that dwelleth in Sion: yea, and my bloude also vnto the Caldees, sayeth Jerusalem. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll defende thy cause, & auenge thee: I wyll drynke vp her sea, and drye vp her water springes.

* Babylon shall become an heape of stones a dwelling place for dragons, a fearfulnesse and a wondryng, because no man dwelleth there. They shall roare together lyke Lyons, and as þ yong Lyons when they be angrye, so shall they bende theym selues. In theyr heate I shall set dryncke before them, & they shall be droncken for ioye: * Then shall they slepe an euerlastyng slepe, and neuer wake, sayeth the Lorde. I shall carie them downe to be flaine lyke shepe, lyke wethers and goates: O, how was Selach wonne: O, how was the glory of the whole lande taken: howe happeneth it, that Babilon is so wōdred at among the heathen: The sea is rylen ouer Babylon, and hath couered her w his great waues. Her cytyes are layed wast, the land lyeth vnbuilted & boide: it is a lande where no manne dwelleth, and where no man trauelēth thozowe.

Moreouer, * I wyll byset Bel at Babylon: and the thyng that he hath swallowed vp, that same shall I plucke out of his mouth. The Gentyles also, shall runne no more vnto hym, yea, and the O my people, * come out of Babylon, that euey man may saue hys lyfe, from the fearfull wyathe of the Lorde. Be not saynte herted, & feare not at euey rumoure that shall be hearde in the lande: for euery yeaere bryngeth newe tidinges, yea, straunge wyckednes and lordshyppe. And lo, the tyme commeth that I will byset the ymages of Babylon, and the whole land shall be confounded, yea, and her flayne shall lye in the myddest of her. Heauen and earth with all that is therein, shall reioyce ouer Babylon, when þ destroyers shall come vpon her from the North, sayeth the Lorde.

* Lyke as Babylon hath beatē downe and flayne many out of Israell, so shall there fall many, and be flayne in all her kyngdome. Ye that haue escaped the swearde, haste you, stande not styll, remembre the LORD a farre of: and thyncke vpon Jerusalem, for we were ashamed to heare the blasphemys: our faces were couered wth shame, because the straūge aleauntes came into the Sanctuary of the Lord. A pyteous crye shall be heard from Babylon, and a great mysery from the lande of the Caldees: when the Lorde destroyeth theim, and when he dryueth oute the hye stomacke and proude boasting, wherewyth they haue bene as suryous as the waues of greate water floudes, and made greate crackes with theyr wordes. For the destroyers shall come vpon her (euē vpon Babylon) whyche shall take her worthyes, and breake theyr bowes: for God is dysposed to auenge him selfe vpon theym, and sufficiently to recompence theym.

Yea (sayeth the LORD) I wyll make their Prynces, theyr wyle men, their chiefe rulers & al theyr worthyes, droncken: * so that they shall slepe an euerlasting slepe, and neuer wake: Thus sayeth the kynge, whose name is the Lorde Thys is the charge that Jeremy gaue vnto Saraiiah the sonne of Neriaiah, the sonne of Maasiah, whē he went toward Babylon with zedekiah y<sup>e</sup> king of Iuda, in the. iiii. yeaue of his raigne. Nowe this Saraiiah was a peaceable Prince. Jeremy wrote in a booke all the myserye that shoulde come vpon Babylon, yea, and all these sermons that bee wyrtten agaynst Babylon, and gaue Saraiiah this charge: Whē thou comest vnto Babylon, se that thou reade all these wordes, and saye: O Lozde, thou arte determined to roote oute this place, so that neyther people nor cattell shall dwell there anye more, but to lye waste for euer: and when thou haste redde oute the booke, bynde a stone to it, and caste it in the myddest of Euphrates, and saye: * Euen thus shall Babylon sincke, and be thrust downe with the burthen of trouble, that I wyll bringe vpon her: so that she shal neuer come bp againe. Thus farre are the preachinges of Jeremy.

The repeereth the takinge of zedekiah. Ierusalem is taken of the Chaldees, zedekiahs sonnes are kylled before hy<sup>s</sup> face, and his eyes put out. The cytie is burned. The temple is spoiled and robbed. They that were left in Ierusalem are carried to Babylon. Kyng Jehoakim is brought forth of prison, and fed by a kinge.

Zedekiah* was. xxi. yeaue old, when he was made king, and he raygned. xi. yeaue in Ierusalem. His mothers name was Hamutall, Jeremies doughter of Lob-

nah. He lyued wickedly before the Lozde euen as Jehoakim dyd. Wherefore the Lozde was angrie at Ierusalem and Iuda, so longe tyll he had caste them oute of his presence. And zedekiah fell from the kyng of Babylon. * But in the. ix. yeaue of his raygne in the tenth moneth, the tenth daye of the Moneth, it happened, that Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon with all hy<sup>s</sup> hoste came before Ierusalem, and beseged it, and made them bulworckes rounde aboute it. And thys beseyginge of the cytie endured vnto the. xi. yeaue of kyng zedekiah.

* And in the fourth Moneth, the. ix. daye of the Moneth, there was so great hunger in the cytie: that there were no more vitayles for the people C ylande. So all the souldyers brake awaye, and fledde oute of the cytie by nyghte thorow the waye of the porte betwene the two walles by the kynges garden. Now the Caldees had compassed the cytie rounde aboute, yet wente these men they<sup>r</sup> waye toward the wilderness.

And so the Caldees folowed vpon them, and toke zedekiah the kyng in the felde of Jerycho, when hy<sup>s</sup> hoste was runne frome him. So they carped the kyng awaye prisoner to Reblath, vnto the kyng of Babylon in the lande of Hemath, * where he gaue iudgemente vpon hym.

The kyng of Babylon also caused zedekiahs sonnes to be slaine before his face, yea and put all the princes of Iuda to deathe at Reblath. Moreouer he put oute the eyes of zedekiah, caused him to be bounde with cheynes, to be carryed vnto Babylon: and let him lye in prison, til he dyed.

Nowe the tenth daye of the fythe Moneth in the. ix. yeaue of Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babylon, Nabusardan the chefe captayne and the king of Babilons seruantes came vnto Ierusalem, and brent bp the house of y<sup>e</sup> Lozde. Beth.

Jerusalem sinned euer moze & moze, therfore is she come in decay. All they þe had her in honour, despise her: for they haue sene her fylthinesse. Yea, she sigh-eth, and is ashamed of her selfe.

Teth.

Her skyrtes are despyled, she remem-bred not what would folowe: therfore is her fal so greate, and there is no man to comfort her. O Lord, confidre my trouble, for mine enemye hath þe vpper hand.

Iod.

The encirye hath put his hand to al
 the precious thinges that she had, yea, euen before her eyes came the heathen in and oute of the Sanctuary: whome thou (neuertheles) haste forbidden to come within thy congregacion.

Caph.

* All her people leke their bread with heuynes, and loke what precyous thing euery manne hathe, that geueth he for meat, to saue his life. Considre, O Lord, and se, how byle I am become.

Lamed.

O ye all that go fore by, behold, and se, yf there be any sorow like vnto mine, wherwith the Lorde hath troubled me, in the daye of his fearful wraath.

Mem.

From aboue hathe he sente downe a fyze into my bones and chastened me: he hath lated a net for my fete, and throw-en me wyde open: he hathe made me desolate, so that I muste euer be mour-nyng.

Nun.

The yocke of my transgression is come at the last, with his hande hath he taken it vp, and put it about my necke.
 My strength is gone: the Lord hath delyuered me in to those handes wherout
 I can not quyte my selfe.

Samech.

The Lorde hathe destroyed all the mightie men, that were in me. He hathe proclaimed a feaste, to slaughter all my best men. The Lord hath troden downe the doughter of Juda, like as it were in a wyne presse.

Ain.

* Therfore do I wepe, and mine eyes gush out of water: for the comforter þe should quicken me, is far fro me. My chyldren are dryuen away, for why? the enemye hathe gotten the ouer hande.

He hath bent his bowe lyke an enemye, he hathe fastened his righte hande as an aduersary: and euery thyng that was pleasaunt to se, he hathe synptren is downe. He hathe poured out his wrath lyke a fyre, into the tabernacle of the doughter of Syon.

He.

The Lorde is become lyke as it were an enemye, he hathe caste downe Israel and all his places: yea, all his stronge holdes hath he destroyed, and fylled the doughter of Juda with muche sorowe and heynesse.

Wau.

* Her tabernacle (which was lyke a garden of pleasure) hathe he destroyed: her hye solempne feastes hathe he putte downe. The Lorde hath broughte it so to passe, that the hye solempne feastes and Sabbathes in Syon, are cleane forgotte. In hys heuy displeasure hath he made the kyng and prestes to bee despyed.

zain.

The Lorde hathe forsaken his owne aulter, and is wrothe with his owne Sanctuarie, and hathe geuen the walles of their towres into the handes of y enemye. Their enemies made a noyse in the house of the Lorde, as it had bene in a solempne feast daye.

Heth.

The Lorde thought to breake downe the walles of the doughter Syon, he spred out his lyne, and drew not in his hande, tyl he had destroyed them. Therfore moutne the turrets and the broken walles together.

Teth.

Her portes are casten downe to the ground, her barres are broken & synptren in sonder: * her king and princes are carped carried away to the gentyls. They haue nether lawe nor Prophetes, nor yet any vysion from the Lorde.

Jod.

The Senatours of the doughter Syon syt vpon the grounde in silence: they haue strowed ashes vpon their heades, and gyrded them selues with sacke cloth. The maidens of Ierusalem hang downe their heades to the ground.

Caph.

Myne eyes beginne to fayle me tho:
rowe weppinge, my body is disquieted my lyuer is poured vpon the earthe, for p great hurte of my people, seing p chil: dren & babes dyd swoone in the stretes of the cytie.

Lamed.

Euen when they spake to their mo: thers: where is meate and drinke: for whyle they so sayde, they fell downe in the stretes of the cytie, lyke as they had bene wounded, and some dyed in theyr mothers bosome.

Mem.

What shall I saye of thee, O thou doughter Ierusalem, to whome shall I lyken thee? To whome shall I compare thee, O thou doughter Syon, to comfort the withall? Thy hurte is like a mayne sea, who maye heale thee?

Nun.

* Thy prophetes haue looked out baine and soly the thinges for the, they haue not shewed the of thy wyckednesse, to kepe the from captiuite: but haue ouer:
laden the, and thowowe falslyd scatted the abrode.

Samech.

All they that go by the, clappe theyr handes at the: hissinge and wagginge their head vpon the doughter Ierusa:
lem, & say: is this the cytie that men cal so faire, wherein the whole lande reioy: seth?

Bin.

All thine enemyes gape vpon thee, whispering and bytinge their teth, say: ing: let vs deuoure, for the tyme that we looked for, is come: we haue founde & sene it.

Phe.

The Lorde hath fulfilled the thyng, that he was purposed to doo: and per:
fourmed that he had deuysed longe a go: he hathe destroyed, and no: spared.

He hathe caused thynne aduersarye to triumphe ouer the, and set vp the hozne of thynne enemye.

Zade.

* Let thine hert crye vnto p Lorde, O thou cytie of the doughter Syon: let thy teares runne downe lyke a ryuer daye and nyght: rest not, and let not the aple of thine eye leaue of.

Koph.

Stande vp and make thy prayer in the fyrste watche of the night, poure out thynne herte like water before the Lorde: lyfte vp thynne handes, for the lyues of thy yonge chyldren, that dye of hunger in the stretes.

Res.

Beholde, O Lorde, and conspyre, & why hast thou gathered me vp so clene: * Shal the women then eate their owne frute, euen chyldren of a spanne longe:
Shall the preestes and Prophetes bee slaine thus in p Sanctuary of p Lorde Syn.

Yonge and olde lye behynde the stre:
tes vpon the ground, my maydens and yonge men are slaine with the swearde:
whome thou in the day of thy wrathfull indynagyon haste put to deathe: yea, euen thou hast put them to deathe, & not spared them.

Chau.

My neyghbours that are rounde a: boute me, hast thou called, as it were to a feaste daye: so that in the daye of the Lordes wrathe none escaped, neyther was any left behinde. Those that I had brought vp & noyshed, hathe myne ene:
mye destroyed.

The Notes.

a. Some here signifyeth strength, power, nobly: tie and dominion: which al the Lorde by his iust auengement toke from the kingdome of the Jew es and from Ierusalem.

b. As carpenters spredde out their lyne to buylde walles, houses and other thinges: so hadde god spredde oute his lyne to destroye Ierusalem and Jermy, and to bringe them to perfect subiectio:
For that signifyeth the spreadynge oute of the lyne, as it is sayd. ii. Reg. viii. a. It is a bysimi: litude borrowed of carpenters.

c. Where the Iudges of Ierusalem were wonte

The .iii. Chapter.

Alph.

I Am the man, that (tho-row the rod of his wrath haue experience of mis-erye.

He droue me forth, & led me: yea, in to darcknesse, but not into light.

Against me only he turneth his hand, and layeth it euer vpon me.

Beth.

My fleshe and my skynne hathe he made olde, and my bones hathe he brused.

He hathe buylded rounde about me, and closed me in with a gall and trauaple.

He hath set me in darcknesse, as they that be dead for euer.

Gymel.

He hathe so hedged me in, that I can not get out, and hath lated heuy linckes vpon me.

Though I crie and cal piteously, yet heareth he not my prayer.

He hath stopped vp my wayes with four squared stones, and made my pa-thes croked.

Daleth.

He lateth wayte for me like a Beere, and as a Lion in a hole.

He hathe marred my wayes, and bro-

He hath bent his bowe, and made me as it were a marcke to shot at.

He.

The arrowes of his quiter hathe he shot, euen into my reines.

309. 22. d.

* I am laughed to scozne of all my people, they make songes vpon me all the daye longe.

He hathe fylled me with bytternesse, and geuen me wormwood to drinke.

Vau.

He hath smytten my teth in peces, &
coled me in the dust.

He hathe put my soule out of rest, I forget all good thinges.

I thought in my self: I am vndone,

O remembre yet my mysery and my trouble, the wormwood and the gall.

Yea, thou shalt remembre them, for my soule melteth away in me.

Whyle I consydre these thinges in my hert, I get a hope agayne.

Beth.

Namely, that the mercyes of the Lorde are not cleane gone, and that his louig kyndnesse ceaseth not.

His saythfulnes is greate, and re-moueth it selfe as the mournyng.

* The Lorde is my porcyon, sayeth psal. xvi. a. my soule, therefore wyll I hope in him.

Teth.

O how good is the Lorde vnto the,
that put their truste in hym, and to the soule that seketh after him.

O how good is it with stylnesse to wayte and tarpe, for the healthe of the Lorde.

O how good is it for a man, to take the yoke vpon him from his youth vp.

Jod.

He sitteth alone, he holdeth him styl, & dwelleth quyetly by him selfe.

He layeth his face vpon the earth, &

He offereth his cheke to the smyter, he wyll be content with reprobous.

Caph.

For the Lorde wyll not forsake for euer.

* But though he do caste of, yet ac- 11. b. cordinge to the multitude of his mer-cyes, he receaueth to grace againe.

For he doth not plage, and cast oute the chyldren of men from his hert.

Lamed.

To treade all the prisoners of the earthe vnder his fete.

To moue the iudgement of man befoze the moste hyghest.

To condemne a mā in his cause: The Lorde hath no pleasure in suche thinges

Mem.

What is he then that sayeth: there should somethyng be done without the Lordes commaundement.

Out of the mouth of the most highest goeth not euell and good.

Wherefoze then murmureth the synge maime: let him murmur at his owne synne.

Aun.

* Lette vs loke well vpon our owne wayes, and remembre oure selues, and turne agayne to the Lorde.

Let vs lyfte vp our hertes with our handes vnto the Lord that is in heauē.

We haue bene dyssemblers, and haue offended, wylt thou therefore not bee intreated?

Samech.

Thou hast couered vs in thy wrath, and persecuted vs, thou haste slayne vs without any fauoure.

Eccle. 35. b

* Thou hast hpd thy selfe in a cloud, that oure prayer should not go thorow.

Thou haste made vs outcastes, and to be dispised among the heathen.

Ain.

All our enemyes gape vpon vs.

Feare and snare is come vpon vs, yea dispite and destruction.

Chir. 1. d.

* Whole ryuers of water gush oute of myne eyes, for the great hurte of my people.

Phe.

Myne eyes runne, and can not ceasse, for there is no rest.

O Lord, when wylt thou loke downe from heauen, and conspyde?

Myne eye breaketh my herte, because of all the daughters of my cytie.

Zade.

Myne enemyes hunted me out that pelye, lyke a byrde, yea, and that with oute a cause.

They haue put downe my lyfe in to a pitte, and layed a stone vpon me.

They poured water vpon my head, then thought I: now am I vndone.

Koph.

I called vpon thy name, O Lorde, oute of the depe pytte.

Thou hast herde my voyce, and hast not turned away thine eares fro my sighinge and cryinge.

Thou haste enclyned thy selfe vnto me, when I called vpon the, and haste sayde: feare not.

Res.

Thou (O Lorde) haste mapntened the cause of my soule, and hast redeemed my lyfe.

O Lorde, thou haste sene my blasphemers take thou my cause vpon the.

Thou haste well conspyred how they go aboute to do me harme, and that all their councelles are against me.

Sin.

Thou haste herde their despytfull wordes (O Lorde) yea, and al their imaginations against me.

The lyppes of myne enemyes, and their deuises that they take agaynst me, all the daye longe.

Thou seyst also their sittinge downe and their risinge vp, they make theyr songes of nothing but of me.

Thau.

Reward them (O Lorde) according to the workes of theyr handes.

Geue them the thing, that their owne heart is afrayed of: euen thy curse.

Persecute them (O Lord) with thine indignacion, and rote the out from vnder the heauen.

The Notes.

a. Gal. for sorowfulness: as in the psalme. lxx. c. They gaue me gall to eate. &c. That is, they that shoulde haue comfort ed me byd me moste greefe, and agmented my sorowes, as yf one shoulde geue bitter meates to hym that is hungrye. How be it that prophcey was also fulfilled in oure sayour Christ, of whom Dauid was therein a figure, as. S. Mat. teacheth in the. xxvii.

b. By this it is manifest that al aduersity (which men call euell is sente of God: althoughe he suffer no suche euell (as we call it) but that whiche he knoweth to bee necessarye and needfull, and wherout he sucketh some good thing. That can he onely do, whiche only is thorowlye wise and perfect good. A like saying is ther in Amos. iii. b. Cometh there anye plage in a cytie.

The booke of the prophete Ezechiel.

The fyrste Chapter.

The tyme wherein Ezechiel prophesied, and in what place. Hys of spyng: and office. The bysson of the foure beastes. The bysson of the wheles. The bysson of the throne, and of the Image about the throne.

In the xxx. yere the fyfthe daye of the. iiii. Moneth, that I was amonge the prissoners by the ryuer of Cobar, where the heauens opened, and I sawe a bysson of God.

Nowe the fyfthe daye of the monethe made oute the fyfth yere of kyng Joas: cing captiue. At the same tyme came the worde of the Lorde vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Buzi the prieste, in y<sup>e</sup> lande of the Caldees by the water of Cobar, where the hande of the Lord came vpon hym.

B And I loked, and beholde a storme wynde came oute of the Northe with a great cloude full of fyre, which with his glystre lyghtened all rounde aboute. And in the myddest of the fyre it was alleate, and as it were the lykenesse of foure beastes, which were fashyoned like a man: sauynge, that euery one had foure faces and foure wynges.

Their legges were streyghte, but theyr fete were lyke bullockes fete, and they glystered, as it had bene fayre scoured metall. Under theyr wynges vpo al y<sup>e</sup> foure corners they had mennes hādes. Their faces & their winges were towarde y<sup>e</sup> foure corners: yet were y<sup>e</sup> wynges so, y<sup>e</sup> one euer touched another. Whē they wente, they turned the not aboute: echone wente streyghte forwarde.

* Upon the ryghte syde of these foure, theyr faces were lyke the face of a man, and the face of a Lyon: But vpon the lefte syde, they had the face of an ore, and the face of an Eggle. Their faces also and theyr wynges were sprede oute aboute: so that two wynges of one touched euer two wynges of another, and with the other they couered theyr bodye. Euery one when it wete, it wete streyght forwarde. Where as the spirite led them, thither they

Ezech. 2. they wente,* and turned not aboute in theyr gopnge.

D The fashyon and countenaunce of the beastes was lyke hoate coales of fyre,euene as thoughe burnynge cressets had bene amonge the beastes: and the fyre gaue a glystre, and oute of the fyre there wente lyghtenynge. When the beastes wente forwarde and backwarde, one woulde haue thoughte it had lyghtened. Nowe when I had well consydered the beastes, I sawe a worcke of wheles vpon the earthe with foute faces also lyke the beastes.

The fashyon and worcke of þ wheles was lyke the sea. The foute wheles were ioyned and made (to loke vpon) as it had bene one whele in another. When one wente forwarde, they went al foure, and turned them not about in their gopnge. They were large, greate and horryble to loke vpon. Their bodyes were full of eyes rounde aboute them all foure. When the beastes wente, the wheles went also with them: And when the beastes lyfte them selues vp from the earthe, the wheles were lyfte vp also. Whyther soeuer the spirite wente, thither wente they also, and the wheles were lyfte vp, and folowed them: for the spirite of life was in þ wheles. When the beastes wente forth, stode styll, or lyfte them selues vp from the earthe: the wheles also wente, stode styll, and were lyfte vp, for the bryth of lyfe was in the wheles.

A boue ouer the heades of the beastes there was a fyrmamente, whiche was fashyoned as it had bene of þ most pure Chrystal, and that was sprede out aboue vpon their heades: vnder þ same fyrmament were their wynges layed a bryde, one towarde another, and two wynges couered þ bodie of euery beast. I And when they wente forth, I hearde the noyse of theyr wynges, lyke þ noyse of great waters, as it had bene þ voyce of the greate God, and a rushynge together as it were of an hoolste of men. And when they stode styll, they let downe theyr wynges. Nowe when they stode styll, and had letten downe theyr wynges, it thondred in the fyrmamente that was aboue their heades. Aboue the fyrmamente that was ouer theyr heades, there was the fashon of a seate, as it had bene made of Saphir. Vpon the seate there sate one lyke a man. I behelde hym, and he was lyke a cleare lyghte, as it had bene all of fyre with in from his loynes vpwarde.

S And beneth when I looked vpon hym vnder the loynes, me thoughte he was lyke a shynynge fyre, that geneth lyghte on euery spde. Yea, the shyne and glystre that lyghtened rounde aboute, was lyke a raynbowe, whiche in a rayny daye appeareth in the cloudes. Euen so was the simplitude, wherin the glozpe of the Lorde appeared. When I sawe it, I fell vpon my face, & herkened vnto the voyce of hym that spake.

After this sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, * eate that, whatlocuer it be: yea, eate p closed boke & go thy waye, and speake vnto the chylzen of Israel.

So I opened my mouth, and he gaue me the boke for to eate, & sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thy belye shall eate, and thy bowels shall be fylled with the boke, that I geue the. Then dyd I eate the boke, * and it was in my mouth sweter then hony. And he sayde vnto me: thou sonne of man, * get the soone vnto p house of Israel, and shewe them the wordes, that I comaunde thee: for I sende p not to p people p hath a straunge, vnknewe, or harde speache, but vnto the house of Israel: Not to manye nacions, whiche haue dyuerse speaches and harde languages, whose wordes thou vnderstandest not. * Neuerthelesse, yf I sent the to those people, they woulde folowe the: But the house of Israel wyll not folowe the, for they wyll not folowe me: yea, all the house of Israel haue styfe foreheades and harde hertes. * Beholde therfore, I wil make thy face penyalye agaynste their faces, and harden thy foreheade against their foreheades: so that thy foreheade shalbe harder then an * Adamante or flynte stone: that thou mayest feare them the lesse, and be lesse afrayde of them, for they are a frowarde houtholde.

Echap. i. d

He sayde mozeouer vnto me: thou sonne of man, take dyligente hede with thine cares, to the wordes that I speake vnto the, fasten them in thyne hearte: and go to the prysoners of thy people, speake vnto them, and saye on this maner: Thus the Lord God hath spoken: whether ye heare, or heare not. Worthy that the spirite toke me bp. And I hearde the noyse of a greate russhynge and remouynge of the mooste blessed glozpe of the Lord oute of his place.

I hearde also the noyse of the wynges of the beastes, that russhed one agaynste another, yea, and the rarynge of the wheles, that are by them, whiche russhynge and noyse was very greate.

Ezech. viii. a and xi. d.

* Nowe when the spirite toke me bp, and carped me awaye, I wente with an heuye and a sorowfull mynde, but the hande of the Lord comforted me ryghte soone.

And so in the begynnynge of the moneth Abid, I came to the prysoners, * that dwelte by the water of Cobat, and remayned in that place, where they were: And so contynued I amonge them seuen dayes, beyng very sorre.

Isa. i. 37. a

And when the seuen dayes were expired, the Lord sayd vnto me: * Thou sonne of man, I haue made p a watchman vnto the house of Israel: therfore take good hede to the wordes, and geue them warnynge at my commaundes mente.

Ezech. iii. d

If I saye vnto the, concernynge the vngodly man, that (without doubt) he muste dye, and thou geueste hym no warnynge, nor speakest vnto him, that he maye turne from his euell waye, and so to lyue: Then shall the same vngodly man dye in hys owne vnyghteousnes: but his bloude wyll I requyre of thyne hande. Neuertheles, yf thou geue warnynge vnto the wycked, and he yet forsake not his vngodlynnesse: then shall he dye in his owne wickednesse, but thou hast discharged thy soule.

* Nowe ys a ryghteous man go fro his righteousness, & do the thyng that is euell: I wyl laye a stonblyng blocke before him, & he shall dye, because thou hast not geuen him warnynge: yea, dye shall he in hys owne synne, so that the vertue, whiche he dyd before, shall not be thoughte vpon: but hys bloude wyl I requyre of thyne hande.

Neuerthelesse, ys thou exhortest the ryghteous, that he synne not, and so the ryghteous do not synne: then shall he lyue, because he hath receaued thy warnynge, and thou hast discharged thy soule. And there came the hande of the Lorde vpon me, and he sayde vnto me: Stande vp, and go in to the felde, that I maye there talke with the.

So when I had rylen vp, and gone forth into the felde: Beholde, the glory of the Lorde stode there, * lyke as I saw it afore, by the water of Cobar.

Ezech. 11. a

* Then fel I downe vpon my face, and the spirite came in to me, which set me vp vpon my fete, and sayd thus vnto me: So thy waye, and sparre thy selfe in thyne house. Beholde, (O thou sonne of man) there shall chaynes be brought for the, to bynde the withal, so that thou shalt not escape oute of them. And I wil make thy tunge cleue so to the rofe of thy mouth, that thou shalt be domine, and not be as a chylder, with them: for it is an obstynate household.

But when I speake vnto the, then open thy mouth, and saye. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: who so heareth, let him heare: who so wil not, let him leaue: for it is an obstynate household.

The Notes.

a. By this watchman are figured byshoppes, priestes, and preachers, whiche must take the occasion of their speakynge and exhortynge at the mouth of God, and speake not in their owne, but in his name.

b. Somewhat: thou shalt hearken vnto the word of my mouth, and shalt monythe them from out of me.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The besege of the cite of Ierusalem is signified. The longe continuance of the captivitye of Israel. An hunger is prophesied to come in the captivitye.

Thou sonne of man: a take a tyll stone, and laye it before the, and describte vpo it the cite of Ierusalem, howe it is beseged, howe bulwarkes and stronge dyches are grauen on euery syde of it: describte also tentes, and an hooste of men rounde aboute it.

Moreover, take an yron panne, and set it betwyxte the & the cite, in steade of an yron wall. Then set thy face towarde it, besege it, and laye ordinaunce agaynste it, to wyne it. This shalbe a tokē vnto the house of Israel. But thou shalt slepe vpon thy left syde, and laye the synne of the house of Israel vpon the. Certayne dayes appoynted, thou shalt slepe vpon that syde, and beare theyr synnes. * Neuerthelesse, I wil appoynte the a tyme (to put of theyr synnes) and the nombze of the dayes: Thre hundred and .xc. dayes muste thou beare the wyckednesse of the house of Israel. When thou hast fulfilled these dayes lye downe againe, and slepe vpon thy ryghte syde. xl. dayes, & beare the synnes of the house of Iuda.

Ezech. 1. a

* A daye for a yeaere, a daye (I saye) for a yeaere, wyl I euer laye vpon the. Therefore set nowe thy face against that beseged Ierusalem, and dyscouer thyne arme, that thou mayest prophesye agaynste it.

Ezech. 14. a

Beholde, I wyl laye chaynes vpon thee, that thou shalt not turne y fro me one syde to another, tyll thou hast ended the dayes of thy sege.

Wherefore, take vnto the wheate, barleye, beanes, growel sede, Millium and fytyches: and put these together in a vessel, and make the loanes of breade therof, accordynge to the nombze of the dayes that thou must lye vpo thy side: that thou mayest haue breade to eate, for thre hundred and .xc. dayes.

And the meate that thou eatest, shalt haue a certayne wayght appointed: namely twentye sycles euery daye. This apoynted meate shalt thou eate daylye, from the begynnynge to the ende.

Thou shalt dryncke also a certayne measure of water: Namely, the fyrte parte of an hin shalt thou dryncke daylye from the begynnynge vnto the ende. Barlye cakes shalt thou eate, yet shalt thou fyrste strake them ouer with mans donge, that they maye se it. And with that sayde the LORDE: * Euen thus shall the chyldren of Israell eate their despyled breade in the myddest of the the Gentyles, amonge whome I wyll scatere them.

Then sayde I: Oh Lord God. Beholde, my soule was yet neuer stayned: for fro my youth vp vnto this houre I did neuer eate of a dead carcase, or of that whiche was slayne of wyld beasts, nether eā there euer any vncleane fleshe in my mouth.

Where vnto he answered me, and sayde: Well than, I wyl graunte the to take colwes donge, for y donge of a man, and to strake the bread ouer with al, befoze them.

And he sayde vnto me: Beholde, thou sonne of man, * I wyll mynyshe al y prouision of bread in Jerusalem, so y they shall weye their bread, and eate it with scarcenesse. But as for water, they shall haue a very lytle measure therof, to dryncke. And when they haue no more breade nor water, one shall be destroyed with another, and famyshe awaye for their wyckednesse.

The notes.

a. This is a prophete done by an outwarde sygne, as in Ieremye. xiii. a. When the people are unworthie of the worde of God, the are y prophetes commaunded to vse suche visyble sygnes: as here to paynte out Jerusalem and the besegynge therof in a style stone.

The. v. Chapter.

The epdole of the heartes, by whiche is signified the destruction of the people. The causes of the anger of God towards the people. The Lordes dyscloseth the epdole of the heartes.

Thou sonne of man, take the then a sharpe knyfe, namely, a raluore. Take that, and haue the heere of thy head and beerd:

Then take y scales and the waight, and deuyde the heere a sinder. And burne the thyrde parte therof in the fyze in the myddest of the cyrpe, and cut the other thyrde parte in peces with a knyfe. * As for the thyrde parte that remayneth, cast it in the winde, and then shewe the bare knyfe.

Yet afterwarde take a lytle of the same and bynde it in thy cote lappe.

Then take a curtely of it, and caste it in the myddest of the fyze: and burne it in the fyze. Out of the same fyze shal goe a flame, vpon the whole house of Israel. Moreover, thus sayde the Lord God: This same is Jerusalem. I set her in the myddest of the Heathen and naci-ons: that are rounde aboute her, but she hath despyled my iudgementes more then the Gentyles them selues, and broken my commaundementes more then the nations, that lye rounde aboute her: for they haue caste oute myne ordinaunces, & not walcked in my lawes. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: * For so muche as ye with poure wyckednesse farre excede the Heathen, that dwell rounde aboute you: (for ye haue not walcked in my lawes, nether haue ye kept myne ordinaunces.) Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God.

I wyl also come vpon the, for in the myddest of the wyll I syt in iudgement, in the syght of the Heathen, and wyll handle the of suche a fashion, as I neuer dyd befoze, and as I neuer wil do from that tyme forth, and that because of all thyne abominacions. * For in thee, fathers shall be fayne to eate theyr owne sonnes, & the sonnes their owne fathers. Suche a courte wyll I kepe in the, and the whole remnaunte wil I scatere in to al the wyndes.

Wherefoze as truly as I lye (saith the Lord God) seynge thou hast despyled my Sanctuarie, with all maner of abominacions and with al thy shamefull offenses: for this cause wyl I also destroye the. Myne eye shall not ouer se the, nether wil I spare the.

* One thirde parte within the, shall dye of the pestilence and of hunger: Another thyrde parte shall be slayne downe rounde aboute the, with the swearde: The other thyrde parte that remayneth, wyll I scatere abroade towarde all the wyndes, and drawe oute y swearde after them. Thus I wyl perfourme my indignacion and set my wraethe agaynst them, and ease my selfe. So that when I haue fulfilled myne anger agaynst them, they shall knowe that I am the Lord, whiche with a feruente gelousye haue spoken it. Moreover I wyl make the waste and abhorred, befoze all the Heathen that dwel about the, and in the syghte of al them, that go by the: so that when I punyshe the in my wraethe, in myne anger, and with the plage of my whote displeasure: thou shalt be a very abomination, shame, a gasynge and wondringe stocke, amonge the Heathen

Euen I the Lorde haue spokē it, and it shal come to passe, when I shute amonge them the perious darteres of hunger, whiche shalbe but death: Yea, therfore shal I shute them, because I wyll destroye you. * I wyll encrease hunger, and mynythe all the prouision of bread amonge you.

The. vi. Chapter.

The sheweth that the people shalbe plagued for synne of Idolatre. He prophesyeth the repentaunce of the reuolunte of the people, and their despuraunce. The destruction of the scowarde is prophesied.

AND the worde of y<sup>e</sup> Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face to the mountaynes of Israel, that thou mayest prophesye vnto them, and saye: Heare the word of the Lorde God, O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus hath the Lord God spoken to y<sup>e</sup> mountaynes, hylles, valleys and dales.

Beholde, I wyll brynge a swearde ouer you, and destroye your hye places: I wyll caste downe youre aulters, and breake downe youre temples. Your dayne men wyl I laye before your goddes, and the deade carcases of the chyldren of Israel wyl I caste before their ymages, youre bones wyl I destroye rounde aboute your aulters, and dwellynge places.

The cyties shalbe desolate, the hyl chapels layed waste: youre aulters destroyed, and broken: youre goddes caste downe, and taken awaye, youre sepels layde eauen with the grounde, youre owne workes cleane rotte oute.

Your dayne men shal lye amonge you, that ye maye learne to know, how that I am the Lorde. * Those that amonge you haue escaped the swearde, wyl I leaue amonge the Gentyles, for I wyll scatte you amonge the nacions. And they that escape from you, shal thyncke vpon me amonge the heathen, where they shalbe in captiuitie.

As for that worshyp and vsurpation full herte of theirs, wherewith they runne awaye fro me, I wyll breake it: yea, and put oute those eyes of theirs, that comynge fornicacyon with theyr Idols.

Then shal they be ashamed, and dyspleased with theyr selues, for the wyckednesses and abhomynacions, whyche they haue done: and shal learne to knowe, howe that it is not in vayne, that I the Lorde spake, to brynge suche myserye vpon them.

The Lorde sayde more ouer vnto me: Smyte thyne handes together, and stampe with thy fete, and saye: Wo worthe all the abominacions & wyckednesses of the house of Israel, for because of them, they shal perishe with the swearde, with hunger and with pestilence. Who so is farre of, shal dye of the pestilence: he that is nye at hande, shal perishe with the swearde: and the other that are beseged, shal dye of hunger.

Thus wyl I satisfye my wrothe full dyspleasure vpon them. And so shal ye learne to know, that I am the Lord, when youte dayne me lye among youre goddes, and aboute youre aulters: vpon all hye hylles and toppes of mountaynes, amonge all grene trees, amonge all thycke okes: euen in the places, where they dyd sacrifice to all their Idols. I wyll stretche myne hande oute vpon them, and wyl make the lande waste: So that it shal lye desolate and voyde, from the wyldernes of Desblathah forth, thoro we all theyr habitacions: to learne them for to know, that I am the Lorde.

The. vii. Chapter.

The. viii. Chapter.

In apperaunce of the sympletyude of God. Ezechiel is broughte vnto Jerusalem in the spiryte. The Lorde sheweth the prophete the Idolatries of the house of Israel, and cheafely of the Priestes.

It happened, that in the sixte yere the fift day of the sixte moneth I sat in my house, and the Lordes of the counsell of Iuda with me: and the hande of the Lorde God fell euen there vpon me. And as I looked vp, I sawe as it were a lycknesse of fyre from his loynes downwarde, and from his loynes vwarde it shyned maruelous cleare.

Ezech. i. c

* This sympletyude stretched oute an hande, and toke me by the heartye lockes of my heade, and the spirite lyfte me vp betwixte heauen and earth: and god broughte me in a bylion to Jerusalem, into the entrie of the inner porte that lyeth towarde the north: there stode an ymage, with whome he hath all thynges in his power, was very wrothe.

Ezech. iii. b
and. xi. d

And beholde, the glozy of the God of Israel was in the same place: euen as I had sene it afore in the felde. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, lyfte vp thyne eyes, and loke towarde the north. Then lyfte I vp myne eyes towarde the north, and beholde: besyde the porte northwarde, there was an aulter made vnto the ymage of prouocacion in the very entrynge in. And he sayde further moze vnto me: Thou sonne of man, seist thou what these do? Seist thou the greate abhomynacions that the house of Israel commytte in thys place: whiche oughte not to be done in my sanctuarie? But turne the aboute, and thou shalt se yet greater abominacions. And with that broughte he me to the courte gate: and when I looked, beholde, there was an hole in the wall.

Ezech. i. a

Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, dygge thow the wall. And when I dygged thow the wall, beholde, there was a doze. And he sayde vnto me: Go thy waye in, & loke what wycked abominacions they do there. So I wente in, and sawe: and beholde, there were al maner images of womes and beastes, all Idoles and abhomynacions

There stode also befoze the images. * Ixx. lordes of the counsell of the house of Israel: and in the myddest of them stode Iazaniah the sonne of Saphan: And euery one of them had a censoure in his hande, & out of the incense, there wente a smoke, as it had bene a cloude. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, hast thou sene what the Senatours of the house of Israel do secretly, euery one in his chambere? For they saye: Tush, the Lord seyth vs not, the Lorde regardeth not the worlde. And he sayde vnto me: Turne the yet agayne, and thou shalt se the greate abominacions that they do. And with that he brought me to the doze of the porte of the Lordes house, towarde the north. And beholde, there sat women mournynge for Thamuz. Then sayde he vnto me: Hast thou sene this, thou sonne of man? Turne the aboute, and thou shalt se yet greater abominacions. And so he broughte me in to the inwarde courte of the Lordes house: & beholde at the porte of the Lordes house, betwixte the fore entrie and the aulter, there were fyue and twentye men, that turned theyr backes vpon the temple of the Lorde, and their faces toward the east, and these worshipped the sunne.

The Notes.

a. The hill Sion was walled rounde aboute and that wall which compassed it was called the outwarde wal: Aboute the temple was there another wal, that was called the inwarde wall, whiche although it were outwarde from the temple, yet was it inwarde from the wal which compassed the hill. The space betwene the inwarde wall, and the temple, was called the inner courte. Therin were many portes, & in the north porte therof therof was Ezechiel set: for that place was holy, and therein dyd they vse to worship God: But the filthines of this hateful image of Baal (which the prophet here calleth y<sup>e</sup> ymage of prouocation, because it prouoked y<sup>e</sup> lord to vengeance) had they defyled it: as supersticion doeth commonlye defile euen the mooste holdest thinges, and suche as appeare most godlyest.

b. That is, after Sapient Hierome, Adonides, Anastasius, whiche was Venus fayrest soune, and whiche is fayned to haue risen from death to life, whiche fable the women of Jewrye dyd celebrate and holde solempne bothe with miche and teares. Some saye that it was an ymage, whiche was made to wepe by craft. Before this ymage dyd women also bewaile their separacion frome their louers, and reioyced when they obtayned them agayne.

The. ix. Chapter.

The destruction of Idolatres, and y<sup>e</sup> conuersacyō of the rzythous. They that shalbe saued are marked. They that are vnmarched are slayne. A complaynte of the prophete for the destruction of the people.

I cryed also wyth a loude voyce in myne eares, sayinge: Come here ye rulers of the ctyte, euerye man wyth hys weapened hande to the slaughter. Then came there syxe men oute of the strete of the vpper port towarde the North, and euerye man a weapon in his hande, to the slaughter. There was one amongst them, that had on hym a linnen raymente, and a wyrters yncke hozne by hys syde.

These went in, and stode belyde the brasen aulter: for the glorie of y<sup>e</sup> Lorde was gone awaye frome the Cherub, and was come downe to the thresholde of the house, and he called the man that had the linnen rayment vpon hym, and the wyrters ynckhozne by his syde, and the Lorde sayde vnto hym: Goe thy waye thorowe the ctyte of Ierusalem, and set thys marcke Chau vpon the foreheades of them, that mourne and are sorre for all the abhominacions, that be done therein. And to the other he sayde that I myght heare: Goe ye after hym thorow the ctyte, slaye, ouerse none, spare none: Kyll and destroye bothe olde men and younge, maydens, chyldren and wyues.

But as for those, y<sup>e</sup> haue thys marke Chau vpon them: Se that ye touche them not, and begynne at my Sanctuary. Then they beganne at the Elders, whych were in the temple, for he sayde vnto them: When ye haue despyled the temple, and fylled the courte wyth the slayne, then goe poure waye forthe. So they wente oute, and slewe downe thorowe the ctyte. Nowe when they had done the slaughter, and I yet escaped: I fell downe vpon my face, and cryed, sayinge: O Lorde, wilt thou then destroye all the resydue of Israell, in thy sore displeasure, that thou haste powred vpon Ierusalem? Then sayde he vnto me: The wyckednesse of the house of Israell & Iuda is very great: So that the lande is ful of bloude, and the ctyte full of vnsaythfulnesse: for they say: *Cush, the Lorde regardeth not the earthe, he seyth vs not. Therefore wyll I vpon them, myne eye shall not ouerle them, neither wyll I spare them, but wyll recompense their wyckednesse vpon their heades. And behold, the man y<sup>e</sup> had the linnen rayment vpon hym, and the wyrters ynckhozne by hys syde: Tolde all the matter howe it happened, and sayde: Lorde, as thou haste commaunded me, so haue I done.

The. x. Chapter.

Of the man that toke whote burnynge coales oute of the myde of the wheles and of the Cherubyns, in token of the burnynge of Ierusalem. A rehearsall of the vision of the wheles, of the beastes & of the Cherubyns.

As I looked, beholde, in the firmamente that was aboue the Cherubyns there appeared the similitude of a stole of Saphir vpon them: *Then sayde he that sate therein, to him that had the linnen rayment vpon him: Crepe in betwene the wheles that are vnder the Cherubyns, and take thynne hande full of hoate coles oute from betwene the Cherubyns, and caste them ouer the ctyte. And he crepte in, that I myght see.

Nowe the Cherubyns stode vpon y<sup>e</sup> ryghte syde of the house, when the man went in, and the cloude filled the innermer courte. *But the glorie of y<sup>e</sup> Lord remoued from the Cherubyns, & came vpon the thresholde of the house: So that the temple was ful of cloudes, and the courte was full of the hyne of the Lordes glozpe. Yea, and the sounde of the Cherubyns wynges was hearde into the fore courte, lyke as it had bene the voyce of the al myghty God, when he speaketh. Now when he had bydden the man y was clothed in linnen, to go and take the hoat coales from the myddest of the wheles, whiche were vnder the Cherubyns: he went & stode besyde the wheles. Then the one Cherub reached forth the hys hande frome vnder the Cherubyns, vnto the fyre that was betwene the Cherubins and toke therof, and gaue it vnto hym that had on the linnen raymente in hys hande: whiche toke it, and went oute. And vnder the wynges of the Cherubins, there appeared the lykenesse of a mannes hande: I sawe also foure wheles besyde the Cherubyns, so that by euerye Cherub there stode a whele. And the wheles were (to looke vpon) after the fashion of the precyous stone of Charlis: yet, (vnto the syghte) were they fashyoned and lyke, as yt the one whele had bene in another.

When they wente forth, they wente all foure together, not turnynge about in their goynge: But where the fyrste wente, thither wente they after also, so that they turned not aboute in their goynge. Their whole bodyes, their backes, their handes and wynges, yea, and the wheles also were all ful of eyes rounde aboute them all foure. And I hearde hym call the wheles, Galgall (that is) a rounde boule. * Euerye one of them had foure faces: So that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the seconde of a man, the thyrde of a Lyon, the fourthe of an Eggle, and they were lyfted vp aboue. Thys is the beast, that I saw at y water of Cobar. Now when the Cherubyns wente, the wheles wente wyth them, and when the Cherubyns shoke their wynges to lifte them selues vwarde, the wheles remayned not behynde, but were wyth them also. Shortely, when they stode, these stode also: And when they were lyfte vp, the wheles were lyfte vp also with them, for the spirite of lyfe was in the wheles.

* Then the glozpe of the Lorde was lyfte vp from the thresholde of the temple, and remayned vpo the Cherubins: And the Cherubyns flackered wyth theyr wynges, & lyft them selues vp fro the earthe: So that I sawe when they wente, and the wheles wyth them. And they stode at the East syde of the porte, that is in the house of the Lorde. So the glozpe of the Lorde was vpon the. Thys is the beast that I sawe vnder the God of Israell, by the water of Cobar. And I perceaued, that it was the Cherubyns. Euerye one had foure faces, and euerye one foure wynges, and vnder their wynges, as it were mennes handes. Nowe the fygure of their faces was, euen as I had sene them, by the water of Cobar, and so was the countenaunce of them: Euerye one in hys goynge wente straighte forwarde.

And behold, there were .xxv. me vnder the dore amonge whome I sawe Jaazaniah the sonne of Azur, and Sheltiah the sonne of Bananiah, the ruelars of the people. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Thou sonne of man: These men ymagyn mischiese, and a wycked counsell take they in thys ctyte, sayinge: Tush, there is no destruccion at hande, lette vs buylde houses: Thys Jerusalem is the cauldron, and we be the flesh. expoſition of the parable, by which the rakyng of Kynge Zedekiah is ſignified. Another parable wherby the dyſcreete of honzer and thys is ſignified.

He worde of the Lorde I came vnto me, ſayinge: Thou ſonne of man, I dwelleſt in the myddelt of a froward houſhold:
* Whyche haue eyes to and yet heare they not, for they are an obſtinate houſholde. Therefore (O thou ſonne of man) make thy gere redye to flytte, and goe forth by fayre daye lyghte, that they maye ſee. Yea, euen in their ſyghte ſhalte thou goe frome thy place to another place: If peraduenture they will conſider, that they be an vnbobediente houſholde. Thy gere that thou haſte made redye to flyt withall, ſhalte thou beare oute by fayre daye

C And in the mornynge, came the word of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, yf Israell that frowarde housholde aske thee and saye: What do-sayeth the Lorde: Thys punysh-

C Moreover, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man: with a fearfull tremblyng shall thou eate thy breade, with carefulnesse and sorowe. Shalte thou drinke thy water. And vnto the people of the land, speake thou on this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde God, to them that dwell in Jerusalem, and to the lande of Israell: Ye shall eate youre breade with so-rowe, and drinke youre water with heuynesse: Yea, the lande with the fulnes thereof shall be layde waste, for the wykednesse of them that dwell therein. And the cities that now be wel occupied, shall be voyde, and the lande desolate:
That ye may know, how that I am the Lorde.

Yet came the worde of the Lorde vnto me agayne, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, what maner of byworde is that, whiche ye vse in the lande of Israell, sayinge: Tushe, * seynge that the day-es are so slacke in comynge, all the visions are of none effecte: Tell them therefore: Thus saith the Lorde God:
I wyl make that byworde cease, so that it shall no more be commonly vsed in Israell.

But saye this vnto them: the dayes are at hande, that euerye thyng which hathe bene prophesied, shall be fulfilled.
There shall no vision be in vayne, neither anye propheeye fayle amonge the children of Israell: For it is I the Lorde, that speake it: And what soeuer
I the Lorde speake, it shall be performed, and not be slacke in comynge.

Yea, euen in youre dayes (O ye frowwarde housholde) wyl I deuyse some thinge, and bynge it to passe, sayeth the Lorde God. And the woorde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Beholde, thou sonne of man: The house of Israell saye in this maner: Tushe, as for the vision that he hathe sene, it wyl be manye a daye or it come to passe: Is it farre of yet, the thyng that he prophecyeth. Therefore saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: All my wordes shall no more be slacke: Loke what I speake, that same shall come to passe, sayeth the Lorde.

C The. xiii. Chapter.

The worde of the Lord agaynst the false prophetes, whiche teache the people the counselles of theyr owne heartes.

He woorde of the Lorde
came vnto me, sayinge: I Thou sonne of man, Speake, propheeye a-gaynst those prophetes, that preache in Israell:
and saye thou vnto them that prophethe worde of the Lorde, thus sayeth the Lorde God: * Wo be vnto those folish prophetes, that folowe their owne spi-rite and speake where they se nothyng.

* O Israell, thy prophetes are lyke the fores vpon the drye felde: For they they an hedge for the house of Israell, that

that men myghte abyde the parell in the day* of the Lorde. Wayne thynges they see, and tell lyes, to maynteyne their preachynges withall. The Lorde (saye they) hath spoken it, when in verye dede the Lorde hath not sent them. Wayne visions haue ye sene, and spoken false prophecies, when ye saye: The Lorde hath spoken it where as I neuer sayde it.

B Therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Bycause your wordes be vayne, and ye seke oute lyes: Beholde, I wyll vpon you, sayeth the Lorde. Myne handes shall come vpon the prophetes that loke out vayne thynges, and preache lyes: They shall not be in the counceyl of my people, nor written in the booke of the house of Israell, neyther shall they come in the lande of Israel: That ye maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde God. And that for thys cause:

Iere. viii. b They haue disceaued my people, * and tolde them of peace, where no was. One setteth vp a wall, and they dawbe it with lowse claye. Therefore tell them which dawbe it with vntempered morter, that it shall fall. * For there shall come a greate hower of rayne, greate stones shall fall vpon it, and a soore storme of wynde shall breake it, so shall the wall come downe. Shal it not then be sayde vnto you: Where is nowe the morter, that ye dawbed it withall? Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll breake oute in my wrathful displeasure with a storme wynde, so that in myne anger there shall come a mighty hower of rayne, and hayle stones in my wrath, to destroye withal.

C As for the wall, that ye haue dawbed with vntempered morter, I wyll breake it downe, make it euen with the grounde: So that the foundation thereof shall remoue, and it shall fall, yea, and ye your selues shall perishe in the midst thereof: To learne you for to knowe, that I am the Lorde. Thus wyll I perfourme my wrath vpon thys wall, and vpon them that haue dawbed it with vntempered morter, and then wyll I saye vnto you: The wal is gone, and the dawbers are a waye. These are the prophetes of Israell, whiche prophcie vnto the cite of Ierusalem, and looke oute bilsong of peace for them, where as no peace is, sayeth the Lorde God. Wherefore (O thou sonne of man) set thy face agaynste the daughters of thy people, whiche prophcie oute of their owne heartes: And speake thou prophcie agaynste them, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lord God: Wo be vnto you, that sowe pyllowes vnder al arme hooles, and bolsters vnder the heades both of younge & olde, to catche soules with al. * For when ye haue gotten the soules of my people in your captiuite, ye promysse them lyfe, and dishonoure me to my people, for an handfull of barley, and for a peece of breade: When ye kyll the soules of them, that dye not, and promysse life to them, that liue not: Thus ye dissemble with my people, & beleueth your lyes.

Wherefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll also vpon the pyllowes, wherewith ye catche the soules in slyenge: Them wyll I take frome your armes, and lette the soules goe, that ye catche in slyenge. Your bolsters also wyll I teare in peaces, and deliuer my people out of your hande: So that they shall come no moore in your handes to be spoyled, and ye shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. Seynge that with your lyes ye discomforte the hearte of the righteous, whome I haue not discomforted: Agayne: for so much as ye corage the hande of the wycked, so that he maye not tourne frome hys wycked waye, and lyue: Therefore shall ye spyce oute no moore vanite, nor prophcie your owne gessynges: For I wyll deliuer my people out of your hande, & ye maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Thou some of man, these men beate their Idols in their heartes, and goe purposly vpon the stonblyng blocke of their owne wyckednesse: howe darre they then aske counsell at me? Therefore speake vnto them, and saue: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Euerye man of the house of Israel that beareth hys Idols in his hearte, purposynge to stonble in hys owne wickednesse, and cometh to a Prophete, to enquire anye thyng at me by hym: Vnto that man wyl I the Lorde my selfe geue answere, accordynge to the multitude of hys Idols: that the house of Israell maye be snared in their own heartes, because they be cleue gone fro me, for their Idols sakes.

Wherefore tell the house of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * Be conuerted, forsake youre Idoles, and turne youre faces from all your abominacions. For euery man (whether he be of the house of Israell or a straunger, that sojourneth in Israell) whiche departeth fro me, and carpyeth Idoles in hys hearte, purposynge to goe styll stonblyng in his owne wyckednesse, and cometh to a Prophete, for to aske counsell at me thoroowe hym: vnto that man wyl I the Lorde geue answere, by myne owne selfe. If I brynge noysome beastes in to the lande, to wast it vp, and it be so desolate, that no man maye goe therein for beastes: If these thre men also were in the land, as truelye as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde God) they shall saue neither sonnes nor daughters, but be onelye deliuered them selues: and as for the lande, it shall be waste.

Or yf I brynge a swearde in to the lande, & charge it to go thoroow the land: so that I slaye downe man & beast in it, and yf these thre men were therein: As truelye as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde God) they shall deliuer neither sonnes nor daughters, but onelye be saued them selues. If I sende a pestilence into the lande, & power out my sore indignacion vpon it in bloude, so that I rote oute of it both man and beast, & if Noe, Daniel and Job were therein: as truelye as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde God) they shall deliuer neither sonnes nor daughters, but saue their owne soules in their reghteousnes. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Thoughe I sende my * foure troublous plagues vpon Jerusalem: The swearde, hunger, perious beastes and pestilence, to destroie man and beast oute of it: Yet shall there be a remnaunte saued therein, whiche shall brynge forth the their sonnes and daughters. Beholde, they shall come forth vnto you, & ye shal se their waye, & what they take in hande, and ye shalbe comforted, as touchynge all the plagues I haue broughte vpon Jerusalem. They shall comforte you, when ye see their waye and woorkes: And ye shall knowe, howe that it is not withoute a cause, that I haue done so agaynst Jerusalem, as I dyd, sayeth the Lorde God.

The. xvi. Chapter.

The Prophete entendynge to speake of the abhominacions of Jerusalem: doth first shewe the benefites of God towards it. Jerusalem is reproued of unkyndnes, for her fornicacion with Idoles. He iustifyeth the wyckednes of other people in comparyson of the synnes of Jerusalem. The cause of the abhominacions inses whych the God omptes selle. Where is promysed to the repentaunte.

I sayne,  $\text{p}$  worde of the Lorde spake vnto me, sayinge: thou sonne of man, shewe the citie of Jerusalem their abhominacions, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto Jerusalem: Thy progeny & kindred came oute of the lande of Canaan, thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Cethyte. In the daye of thy byrthe when thou wast bozne, the nrynge of thy nauell was not cut of: Thou wast not bathed in water to make the clene: thou wast neither rubbed with salt, nor swedled in clout: No man regarded the so much, as to do anye of these thinges for the, or to shewe the suche fauour, but thou wast vtterly cast out vpon the felde. yea, despised wast thou in the daye of thy byrthe.

Then came I by the, and sawe thee troden downe in thyne owne bloude, & sayde vnto the: Thou shalt be purged from thyne owne bloude, frome thyne owne bloude (I saye) shalt thou be cleansed. * So I planted the, as the blossome of thy felde: Thou arte growen vp, and wares greater: thou hast gotten a maruelous pleasaunt beutie, thy brestes are come vp, thy heere is goodlye growen, where as thou wast naked and bare afore.

Nowe when I went by the, & looked vpon the: beholde, thy tyme was come, yea, euen the tyme to bowe thee. Then spred I my clothes ouer thee, to couer thy dishonestie: yea, I made an othe vnto the, * and married my selfe with thee (sayeth the Lorde God) and so thou becamest myne owne. Then washed I the with water, and purged thy bloude from the. I anoynted the with oyle, I gaue thee chaunge of raymentes, I made the shues of Carus lether: I girted the about with white sylke, I clothed the with ketchues, I decked thee with costly apparell, I put ringes vpon thy fyngers: A chayne aboute thy necke, spanges vpon thy fore heade, earecynges vpon thyne eares, and sette a beutiful crown vpon thine head. Thus wast thou decked with siluer & golde, and thy raimet was of fine white sylke, of nedle worke and of diuers colours.

Thou diddest eate nothing but simnels, honte and oyle: Maruelous goodly wast thou a beutiful, yea, euen a very Quene wast thou. In so much, that thy beutye was spoken of amonge the heathen, for thou wast excellent in my beutye, whiche I put vpon thee sayeth the Lorde God. But thou hast put confidence in thyne owne beutye, & played the harlot, when thou haddest gotten the a name. Thou hast committed whoredome, with al that went by the, and hast fulfilled their desires: Yea, thou hast taken thy garmetes of diuers colours, and deckte thine aulters therw, wher vpon thou mightest fulfyl thyne whoredome, * of such a fashion, as neuer was done, nor shal be. * The goodly ornaments and Jewels whiche I gaue the of my owne golde and siluer, hast thou taken, and made thee mennes Images therof,

Thy garmentes of diuers coloures hast thou taken, and deckte them therewith: myne oyle & incense haste thou set before them. My meate which I gaue thee, as sinners, oyle & honye: (to fede the withall) that haste thou sette before them, for a swete sauoure. And thys came also to passe, sayeth the Lorde

GOD: * Thou haste taken thyne owne sonnes & doughters, whō thou haddest begotten vnto me: and these hast thou offered vp vnto thē, to be their meate. Is this but a smal whordome of thine (thinkest thou) that thou slayest my children, and geuest them ouer, to be brent vnto them? And yet in all thy abominacions and whordome, thou hast not remembred y dayes of thy youthe, howe naked and bare thou wast at that tyme, and troden downe in thyne owne bloude. After all these thy wyckednesses (wo, wo, vnto the, sayeth the Lorde) thou haste builded thy stewes and bryddell houses in euerye place: yea, at the heade of euery strete hast thou buylded the an aulter. Thou hast made thy beuetye to be abhorred, thou hast layed out thy legges to euery one that came by, & multiplied thyne whordome. * Thou hast comitted fornicacion with the Egyptians thy neigbours, whiche had much flesh, & thus hast thou bled thine whordome, to anger me.

Beholde, I will stretche oute myne hande ouer the, and * will minishe thy stoare of foode, and deliuer the ouer into the wylls of the Philistines thyne enemies, whiche are ashamed of thy abominable waye. * Thou haste played the whoore also wyth the Assirians, which might not satisfie the: yea, thou haste played the harlot, and not had ynoughe. Thus haste thou styl committed thy fornicacion fro the lande of Canaan vnto the Chaldees, & yet thy luste not satisfied. Howe shoulde I circumsise thyne heart (saith the Lorde GOD) seyng thou doest all these thynges, y precious whoze: building thy stewes at the heade of euery strete, and thy bryddell houses in all places? Thou haste not bene as another whoore, that maketh booste of her wynnyng, but as a wife that breaketh wedlocke, & taketh other in steade of her husbande. Gyftes are geuen to all other whoores, but thou geuest rewardes vnto all thy louers: and offerest them gyftes, to come vnto the out of all places, & to commit fornicacion with the. It is come to pas with thee in thy whordomes contraye to the vse of other women: Yea, there hath no suche fornicacion bene committed after the, seyng that thou profrest gyftes vnto other, and no rewardes geuen the: this is a contrary thinge.

Therefore heare the woorde of the Lorde, O thou harlot: Thus sayeth the Lorde GOD: For so muche as thou haste spent thy monye, and disconered thy shame, thorowe thy whordome with all thy louers, and with all the Idolles of thy abhomyacions in the bloude of thy children, * whome thou haste geuen them: Beholde therefore, I wyl gather together all thy louers, vnto whō thou haste made thy selfe common: Yea, and all them whome thou fauourest, and euerie one that thou hatest: And * will discouer thy shame before them, y they al maye see thy fylthynes.

* Moreover, I will iudge the as a breake of wedlocke and murtherer, & recompence thee thyne owne bloude in wrathe and gelousye. I will geue thee ouer into their power, that shal breake downe thy stewes, and destroy thy bryddell houses: They shal stripe thee oute of thy clothes, all thy fayre and beutyful Jewelles shal they take frome the, and so let the sit naked bare: yea, they shal bringe the comon people vpon the, whiche shal stone the, & slaye the downe with their sweardes. They * shal burne vp thy houses, and punishe thee in the sighte of manye women. Thus wyl I make thy whordome to cease, so that thou shalte geue oute no moe rewardes.

Should I make my wrach to be stil, take my gelousye from the, be content, and no more to be displeased? seyng y remembrest not the daies of thy youth, but haste prouoked me to wrathe in all these thynges? Beholde therefore, I wyl bringe thyne owne wayes vpon thyne heade, sayeth the Lorde GOD: Howe be it, I neuer dyd vnto thee, accordyng to thy wickednesse and al thy

But thy yongest sister that dwelleth on thy ryghte hande, is Sodoma, and her daughters. As truly as I lyue, sayth the Lord God: * Sodoma thy sister with her daughters, hath not done so euill, as thou and thy daughters. Behold, * the syns of thy Sodoma were these: pride, fulnes of meate, aboundaunce & pbelnesse: these thinges had she & her daughters. Belydes that they reached not their hande to the poore and neddy, but were proud, and dyd abhominable thinges before me: therefore I toke them awaye, when I had sene it. Neyther hath Samaria done halfe of thy synnes, yea, thou hast exceded theym in wyckednesse: In so muche that in comparyson of all thy abhomynacions which thou hast done, thou hast made thy sisters good women.

Thus thy sisters (namely) Sodoma and her daughters: Samaria and her daughters with thy selfe & thy daughters, shall be brought agayne to your olde estate. When thou wast in thy pryde, and before thy wyckednesse came to lyghte: thou wouldest not heare speake of thy sister Sodoma, vntill the tyme that the Syrians with all theyr townes, and the Phylis-tynes with all that lyc rounde aboute them, brought the to shame and confusion: that thou myghtest beare thyne owne fylthynes & abhomynacyon, sayth the Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lorde God: I shoulde (by ryghte) deale with thee, as thou hast done. Thou hast despyed the othe, and broken the couenaunt. Neuertheles, I wyl remembre the couenaunte that I made wyth the in thy youth, in so muche that it shall be an euerlasting couenaunt: so that thou also remembre thy wayes, & be ashamed of them: then shalt thou receaue of me thy elder & yonger sisters, whō I wyl make thy daughters, & that belyde thy couenaunt. * And so I wil renue my couenaunt with the, & thou mayest know that I am the Lorde: that thou mayest thincke vpon it, be ashamed, and excuse thyne owne confusion no more: when I haue forgeuen the, all that thou hast done, sayeth the Lorde God.

After the death of Ioseph, when Pharaon knewe them not. Exod. i. were they most abieted and byle, and no man had compassyon on them. Then was the dape of their byrth. And in lyke case after the destruction of Ierusalem and in their imprisonment at Babylon. At both these times were they motherles and helpelesse, concerning theyr owne strengthes: but were yet cared for of God and receyued by his mercy. The prophete boroweth his fashyon of speakynge of the manner of mothers, after the byrth of their chyldren, which first dresse theyr nauelles and washe them with salt, and then swaddle them. &c. Such helpe had Iſrael none in theyr aduersities in Egypt and Babylon, but lay ouerwhelmed in their fylthynesse & myseryes, and were regarded as bastardes and vnmotherly intreated of al men. # The Prophecie.

The parable of the two Eagles signifieth that Jeremia, which contrary to his othe had forsaken the frendshipp of Nabuchodonosor, turned himselfe to the kynge of Egypt, and therefore perished. An explication of the parable. A prophesie of Christ.

The word of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man: put forth a barcke speakynge a parable, vnto the house of Israel, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lord God: There came a greete eagle w great wynges, yea, with myghtie long wynges, and full of fethers of dyuerse colourres, vpon the mount of Libanus, and toke a braunche from a Cedar tre, and brake of the toppe of his twygge, & caried it into þ land of Canaan, & set it in a cytie of marchantes. He toke also a braunche of the lande, & planted it in a frutful ground, he brought it vnto great waters, & set it as a willye tree therby. Then dyd it growe, and was a greete bynestocke, but lowe by the ground: thus there came of it a byne, and it brought forth blossomes, and spred out braunches. But there was another eagle, a great one, which had great wynges, & many fethers: & beholde, þ rotes of this byne had an hunger after him, and spred out his braunches towarde him, to water his frutes: Neuertheles it was planted vpon a good ground besyde great waters: so that (by reason) it should haue brought out baunches and frute, and haue bene a goodly byne.

Speake thou therefore, thus sayth the Lord God: Shal this byne prosper? Shal not his rotes be plucked oute, his frute be broke of, his grene braunches wither and fade awaye: yea, wythoute eyther stronge arme or manye people, shall it be plucked vp by the rotes. Beholde, it was planted: shall it prosper therefore. Shall it not be dzyed vp and wythered, yea, euen in the shutyng oute of his blossomes, as soone as the easte wynde bloweth?

Moreover, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Speake to that froward housholde: know ye not, what these thynges do signyfy? Tell them: Beholde, the kynge of Babylon came to Jerusalem, and toke the kynge and his prynces, and ledde theym to Babylon.

He toke of the kynges sede, & made a couenaunt with him, and toke an othe of him: The prynces of the lande toke he wyth him also, that the lande might be holden in subiection, and not to rebell, but kepe the couenaunte, and fulfill it. But he fell from hym, and sente his Embassytours into Egypt, that he myght haue horses and muche people. Should he prosper? Should he be kepte safe, that doeth suche thynges? Or should escape, that breaketh his couenaunt? As truly as I lyue sayeth the LORD GOD: He shall dye at Babylon, in the place where the kyng dwelleth, that made him kynge: whose othe he hath despyled, and whose couenaunte he hath broken. Pether shall Pharao wyth his great host and multitude of people, maynteyne hym in the warre: when they caste vp dyches, and set vp bulwarkes to destroy much people. For seyng he hath despyled the othe, and broken the couenaunte (where as he yet gaue his hand there vpon) and done all these thynges, he shall not escape.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: As truly as I lyue, I will bring myne othe that he hath despyled, and my couenaunt that he hath broken, vpon his owne heade. I will cast my net about hym, and catche him in my parne. To Babylon will I carpe hym, there will I punyssh him, because of the greete offence that he made me. As for those that slye from him out of the host, they shall be slayne with the sword. The residue shall be scatred towarde all the windes: and ye shall knowe, that I þ Lord haue spoken it.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: I will also take a braunche from an hye Cedre tree, and wyl set it, and take the vppermost twygge, that yet is but tēdre, and plante it vpon an hye hyll: Name lye, vpon the hye hyll of Syon wyl I plante it: that it maye byngge forth the twygges, and geue fruyte, and be a greete Cedre tree: so that all maner of foules maye hyde in it, and make thei nestes vnder the shadowe of his braunches.

And all the trees of the felde shall knowe that I the Lord haue brought downe downe the hye tree , and sette the lowe tree vp: that I haue dyled by the grene

* Nowe ys this man get a sonne also, that seyth al his fathers synnes, which he hath done: and feareth, nether doeth such lyke: Namely, he eateth not vpon the mountaynes: he lyfteth not hys eyes vp to the Idols of Astrack: he defyleth not his neyghbours wyfe: he bereth no man: he kepeth no mans pledge: he neyther spoyleth, nor robbeth anye man: he dealeth his meate with the hungrye: he clotheth the naked: he oppresseth not the poore: he receaueth no vsury, nor anye thyng ouer: he kepeth my lawes, and walcketh in my commaundementes: This man shall not dye in his fathers synne, but shall lyue wythout fayle. As for his father: because he oppressed and spoyled his brother, and dyd wyckedly among his people: lo, he is dead in hys owne synne. And yet saye: Wherfore shal he should not this sonne beate hys fathers synne. Therfore: because the sonne hath done equite and ryght, hath kepte all my commaundementes, and done them: therfore shal he lyue in dede. ### The Notes.

a. Shall not be thought vpon. The Sophysters haue a propre solucio for this text, and such like which testifie that god so forgueyth that he wyl not after call agayne his forguenes and punish. True it is (saye they) God forgueyth the synne, but not the punishment due vnto synne. Seven yeaeres punishment (as they prate) must we abide in purgatory for euery synne, when it is forgueu. If this be not to mocke wyth God and his holy word, I wote not what is mockage. If God ca, and do (as the apostle saith) geue me punishment due vnto my syn, so þe neither geue me to muche nor to lytle payne therfore, and yet not once thynke on my synne, surely he hath a wonderfull remembrance. And that he wyll not thynke on it, the scripture doeth here openly affirme. By this sophystrye myghte the kynge geue a man his pardon for theste, and after hange him vp. For he might say: Syr I forgave you your theste, but not your hangyng which is due vnto your theste. Suche pardon woulde they be lothe to haue that synne imagined it. If the kynge which is but a man, be more saythfull, then to deale so with his prisoners, whome he forgueyth. Howe shoulde God then which is our heuynly father, & which is euen goodnes it selfe, haue suche a sortell sayned, and vnperfect forguenes, that shoulde after punish. But hereof wyll I nowe speake no more, lest ye shoulde happily smel that this solucio were ymagined, to picke mens purses, thorow Masse pence, Dirige grotes, Trentalles, yeaer mindes, moneth mindes. &c. Because that although God can and may forgue the synne, yet muste suche thynges obtayne the forguenes of the punishment due therunto: Or that the Priestes benefytes were not sufficient for them to lyue on, wyth out suche pyllage, or yet that the poore people could by any other meane be milched from that thyng, wherwith they, theyr wyues, their household and Children shoulde lyue.

The xix. Chapter.

The captiuitie of Jehoahaz: of Jehoacin (is signified by þe lions whelpes, & by the lyb. The scripture out the prosperite of the cite of Ierusalem that is past, and the miserie thereof that is present.

BUt mourne þe for þe princes of Israel, and saye: Wherfore laye thy mother that lyoness among the lyons, and nourished her yonges among the lions whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vp, and it became a lion: it lerned to spole, and to deuout folke. The heathen heard of hym, and toke him in theyr nettes, and broughte him in chaynes vnto þe land of Egypte.

Nowe when the damme saw, that al her hope and conforth was awaye, she toke another of her whelpes, & made a lion of hym: which went among þe lyons, and became a scarce Lyon: learned to spole and to deuout folke: he destroyed their palaces, and made theyr cyties waste. In so muche that the whole land and euery thinge therein, were bitterlye desolate, thorowe the very voyce of his roaringe.

Then came the heathen together on euery syde out of al countrees agaynst hym, layed their nettes for hym, and toke him in their pytte. * So they bounde him with chaines, and brought him to the kynge of Babylon: whiche put him in pryson, that his voyce shuld no more be hearde vpon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy mother, she is lyke a hyne in thy bloud, planted by the water syde: her frutes and braynches are growen out of manye waters, her stalckes were so stronge, that men might haue made stauces therof for officers: she grewe so hye in her stalckes.

So whan men sawe that she exceaded the heigth & multitude of her brau-ches, she was roted out in displeasure, and cast down to the ground. The East wynde dyed vp her frute, her stronge stalkes were broken of, wythered and brent in the fyre. But now she is planted in the wyldernes, in a drye and thurstye ground. And there is a fyre gone out of her stalkes, whiche hathe brente vp her braunches and her frut:
so that she hath no mo strong stalkes, to be staves for offycers. This is a pyreous and myserable thynge.

The .xx. Chapter.

The Lorde denieth that he will answer the whiche they pray, for the offence of unkyndnes whiche he here objecteth. He promyseth that his people shall returne from captivite. By the word he shoulde be

The Notes.

a. By the greene trees vnderstande the sayntes and holy ones, and by the drye, synners: so that the godly shall by death escape captiuite, and the wicked be sente vnto euercastyng payne.

b. From the south to the north, that is, from Jerusalem to Babylon.

The. xxi. Chapter.

He threatneth the sweard, that is to say, destruction to the cytie of Jerusalem. He beweth the fall of kynge zedekiah. He is commaunded to prophesye the destruction of the chyldren of Ammon. After the slaughter of other, at the laste the Lord threatneth death vnto Nabuchodonosor him selfe.

In the worde of the Lord came to me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face toward Jerusalem, speake agaynst the Sanctuary, and prophesye agaynst the lande of Israel, saye to the lande of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, I wyll vpon the, and will drawe my sweorde out of & sheath, and rote out of the both the ryghtuous & & wicked. Seyng then that I wyll rote out of the both the ryghtuous & wicked, therfore shall my swearde go out of his sheath agaynst all fleshe from the north to the south: that all fleshe may knowe, howe that I the LORD haue drawen my swearde out of & sheath, and it shall not be put in agayne.

Mourne therfore (O thou sonne of man) that thy loynes cracke wythall, yea, mourne bitterly for theym: and ye they saye, wherefore mourest thou? Then tell them: for the tydynge that cometh, at the whiche all hertes shall melt, all handes shall be letten downe, all stomackes shall faynte, and all knees shall waxe feble. Behold, it cometh & shall be fulfilled, sayeth the Lord God.

Agayne, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, prophesye, and speake: Thus sayeth the Lord God: Speake, the swearde is sharpened and wel scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, and scoured that it maye be dryght. O, the destructione * staffe of my sonne, shall bringe downe all woode. He hath put his sweard to the dryghting, that good hold maye be taken of it. This swearde is sharpened and dryght, that it may be geuen into the hande of the manslayer.

Crye (O thou sonne of man) a howle, for this swearde shall smyte my people, and all the rulers in Israel, which with my people shall be slayne downe to the grounde thorow this sweerde. Smyte & vpon thy thyghe, for wherefore should not the plage and staffe of iudgemente come? Prophecye thou sonne of man, and smyte thyne handes together: make the swearde two edged, yea, make it thre edged, that manslayers swearde, that swearde of the great slaughter, whiche shall smyte them, euen in theyr preuye chambres: to make them abashed and faynte at the hertes, and in al gates to make some of the fall. O howe brighte and sharpe is it, howe well dryghte and mete for the slaughter. Set the to some place alone, eyther vpon the right hāde or on the left, whither so euer thy face turneth. I wyll smite my handes together also and satisfye my wrothfull indignacyon: Euen I the Lord haue sayde it.

The worde of the Lord came yet vnto me agayne, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, make the two stretes, that the swearde of the kynge of Babylon may come. Both these stretes shall go oute of one lande. He shall sette hym vp a place, at the heade of the strete shall he chose hym out a corner. Make the a strete, that the sweard maye come to warde Babath of the Ammonites, and to the stronge cytie of Jerusalem. For the kynge of Babylon shall stande in battelammes agaynste the gates, to graue vp dyches, and to make bul-

Neuerthelesse, as for the sothesaying, they shall holde it but for vanitie, euen as though a test were tolde them:
yea, and they the selues remembre their wickednes, so that by ryght they muste workes men maye se your synnes: yea, haue made mencyon thereof ye shall be taken by violence.

O thou shamefull wicked gide of Is-that wyckednesse shall haue an ende: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: take awaye the myrre, and put of the crowne, and so is it awaye: the humble is exalted, and the proude brought lowe. Punyshe, punyshe, yea, punyshe them wyll I, and destroye them: and that shall not be fulfilled vntyll he come, to whome the Iudgement belongeth, and to who I haue geuen it. And thou (O sonne of man) prophesye, & speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God to the childe of * Ammon, & to their blasphemy, speakethou:

The swearde, the swearde, is drawen forth alreedy to the slaughter, and scoured that it glysteth (because thou hast loked the out vanyties, and prophesed lyes) y it may come vpon thy necke, lyke as vpon the other vngodly, which be slayne: whose dawe came, whan their wickednes was full.

Though it were put bp agayne in to the sheath, yet wyll I punyshe thee, in the lande where thou wast noryshed and bozne, and powze my indignacyon vpon the and wyll blowe vpon the in y fyrze of my wraath, and deliuer the vnto cruell people, whiche are learned to de-stroye. Thou shalt fede the fyre and thy bloude shall be shedde in the lande, that thou mayest be put out of remembraunce.

Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

and I am vnhalowed among them. Thy rulers in the are lyke rauynynge wol-

for thy prophetes they dawbe with vntempered claye, they se banntyes, and prophecie lyes vnto them, sayinge: the

Therefore will I poure oute my cruell they both were despyled a lyke. But she increased styll in whordome: for when she saw men paynted vpon the wall, the ymages of the Caldees sette forth with freshe colours, with sayre girdles about them, and goodlye bonettes vpon theyr

Therefore (O Dholibah) thus sayeth the Lord God. I wyll rayse vp thy lo-thy luste) againste the, and gather them together rounde aboute thee: namelye, the Babylonians, and all the Caldees: Becod, Schoa and Coa, with all the Assirians: al younge and sayre louers:

princes and lordes, knyghtes and gen-

These shal come vpon the with horses, charettes, and a greate multitude of people: whiche shalbe harnesssed aboute the on euery side, with brestplates, heldes and helmettes. I wyll punyche the fall thorowe the swerde. They shal cary away thy sonnes and daughters, and the residue shalbe bzent in the fyre.

They shal strype the out of thy clothes, and carye thy costlye Jewelles awaye

Thus wyll I make an ende of thy fylthynesse and whordome, which thou haste broughte oute of the lande of Egypt: so that thou shalte turne thine eyes nomore after them, and caste thy mynde nomore vpon Egypt. For thus sayeth the Lord: beholde, I wyll delithou haste despyled thy selfe. Thou haste walcked in the waye of thy syster, therefore wyll I geue the her cuppe in

Thus sayeth the Lord God: Thou shalte dryncke of thy sisters cuppe, how

Sama: Thou shalt bee laughed to scozne, and had as greatpe in derision, as is possible. Thou shalt bee full of dronckenness and sorowe, for the cuppe of thy sister Samaria is a cup of destruction and wastynge: the same shalt thou dryncke, and suppe it oute euen to the dregges, yea, thou shalt eate by the broken peeces of it, and so teare thyne owne breestes: for euen I haue spoken it, sayeth the Lorde God.

I Therefore thus sayth the Lorde God: For so much as thou hast forgotten me, and caste me asyde, so beate now thyne owne fylthynesse and whoredome. The Lorde sayde moreouer vnto me: Thou sonne of man wilt thou not reprove Dholah and Dholibah: Shew them their abhomynacions: namelpe, that they haue broken their wedlocke, and staped theyr handes with bloude: yea, euen with theyr ydoles haue they commytted aduoutry, and offered them their owne chyldren (to bee deuoured) whome they hadde borne vnto me. Yea, and this haue they done vnto me also: they haue despyled my Sanctuarpe in that same daye, and haue vnhalowed my Sabboth. For when they hadde slayne theyr chyldren for their Idols, they came the same daye into my Sanctuary to defile it. Lo, this haue they done in my house. Beside al this, thou hast sent thy messengers for men out of far countrees: and when they came, thou hast bathed, trimmed and set forth thy selfe of the best fashyon: thou sattest vpon a goodly bed, and a table spread before the: where vpon thou hast sette myne incense and myne oyle.

When was there greate cheate with her, and the men that were sent from far countrees ouer the deserte, vnto these they gaue bracelettes vpon theyr handes, and set gloriuous crownes vpon theyr heades: then thought I: no doute, these wil vse their harlotry also with ponder olde whoze. And they wente in to her, as vnto a comen harlot: Euen so went they also to Dholah and Dholibah those filthy women.

Ope all that loue vertue and righteousness, iudge them, punish the: as aduouters and murtherers ought to be iudged and punished. For they are breakers of wedlocke, and the bloud is in their handes. Wherefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: bynge a greate multitude of people vpon them, and make them be scatted and spoyled: these shall stone them, and goze them with theyr swordes. They shall slaye their sonnes and daughters and burne vp their houses with fyre.

Thus wyl I destroye all suche fylthynes out of the lande: that all women maye learne, not to do after youre uncleynesse. And so they shall laye youre fylthynesse vpon your owne selues, and ye shall bee punished for the synnes, that ye haue commytted with youre Idols: and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

The proueth the synginge of Jerusalem by a parable of a seethinge pot. The parable of Ezechiel's wyfe beinge deyd, which he after expoundeth.

In the ix. yeaere, in the x. Moneth, the x. daye of the Moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: O thou sonne of man, wyrt thou the name of this day, yea, euē the houre of this present daye: when the kynge of Babylon set him selfe agaynst Jerusalem. Shew that obstinate houtholde a parable, and speake vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Get the a pot, set it on, and poure water in to it: put all the peeces together in it, all the good peeces: the loyne and the shoulder, and fylle it with the best bones. Take one of the best shepe, and an heape of bones with all: let it boyle well, and let the bones sethe well therein.

With that sayde the Lorde God on this maner: Mo be vnto þe bloudy cratie of the pot, where vpon the rustynesse hangeth, and is not yet scoured awaye. Take oute the peeces that are in it, one after another: there nede not lottes be caste therfore, for the bloude is yet in it. Vpon a playne dyse stone hath she poured it, and not vpon the grounde, that it myghte bee couered with duste. And therfore haue I fletten her poure her bloude vpon a playne dyse stony rocke, because it should not be hyd, and that I myght byng my wrothfull indignacion and vengeaunce vpon her.

Wherefore, thus sayth the Lorde God:

¶ Who be vnto that bloud thursty cytie, for whome I wyll prepare a heape of wodde: beate thou the bones together, kyndle thou the fyre, seeth the fleshe, let all be well sodden, that the bones maye be sucked out. Moreouer, set the pot emptye vpon the coales, that it maye bee warme & the metall hote: that the fylthe and rustynesse may be consumed. But it wyll not go of there is so muche of it: the rustynesse must be brent out. Thy filthynesse is abhominable, for I wolde haue clesed thee, but thou wouldest not be clesed. Thou canst not be purged from thyne uncleynesse, tyl I haue poured my wrothfull indignacion vpon the. Euen I the Lorde haue so deuised: Yea, it is come therto already, that I wyll do it. I wyl not go backe, I wil not spare, I wyll not be intreated: but accordyng to thy wayes and ymagynacions, thou shalte bee punished, sayeth the Lorde God. And the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sone of man, beholde, I wyll take away the pleasure of thine eyes with a plague: yet shalte thou neyther mourne, nor wepe, nor water thy chekes therfore: þu mayest mourne by thy selfe alone, but vse no deadlye lamentacion. Holde on thy bonnet, and put on thy shues vpon thy fete, couer not thy face, and eate no mourners breade. So I spake vnto the people by tymes in the moornyng, and at euen my wyfe dyed: then vpon the next morow, I dyd as I was commaunded. And the people sayde vnto me wylt thou not tell vs, what that sygnifyeth, whiche thou doest? I answered them, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Tell the house of Israel, thus sayeth the Lorde GOD: beholde, I wyll suspende my sanctuarie: euen the gloze of youre power, the pleasure of youre eyes, and the thyng that ye loue: youre sonnes and doughters whome ye haue lefte, shall fall thorowe the swerde.

¶ Lyke as I haue done, so shall ye do also: Ye shall not hyd your faces, ye shal eate no mourners breade: your bonnetes shal ye haue vpon your heades, and shues vpon your fete. Ye shall neyther mourne nor wepe, but in youre synnes ye shal bee sorowfull, and one repent with another. Thus Ezechiell is your shewtoken. For loke as he hath done, (so when thys cometh) ye shall do also: that ye maye lerne to knowe that I am the Lorde God. But beholde, O thou sonne of manne: In the daye when I take from them their power, theyr ioye and honoure, the lust of theyr eyes, the burthen of theyr bodyes: namely, theyr sonnes and doughters: Then shal ther one escape, and come vnto thee, for to shewe the. In that daye shal thy mouth bee opened to hym, whiche is escaped, thou mayest speake, and bee no more domine. Yea, and thou shalte see theyr shew token, that they may knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

¶ The worde of the Lorde vpon the sonnes of Ammō, which reioyced at the fel of Jerusalem. Agaynst Moab and Seir. Agaynst Idumea. Agaynst the Philistines.

¶ The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face agaynst the Ammonites, prophesy vpon them, and saye vnto the Ammonytes: heare the worde of the Lord God. Thus sayth the Lord God: for so muche as thou speakest ouer my Sanctuarie. Aha, I trow it be now suspended: and ouer the lande of Israel, I trow it be nowe desolate: yea, and ouer the house of Iuda, I trowe they be now led awaye prysoners: Beholde, I wyll deliuer the to the people of the caste, that they maye haue the in possession: these shall sette their castels and houses in the. They shall eate thy frute, and dryncke by thy mylke. As for Rabath, I wyl make of it a stal for camels, and of Ammon a shepesholde: & ye shal knowe, that I am the Lorde.

¶ For thus sayth the Lord God: In so muche as thou hast clapped with thyne handes, and stamped with thy fete, yea, reioyced in thyne herte ouer the lande of Israel with despite: beholde, I wyll stretche oute myne hande ouer the also, and deliuer thee, to bee spoyled of the heathen, and rote the out froin amonge the people, & cause thee to be destroyed oute of all landes: yea, I wyll make the be layed waste, that thou maist knowe, that I am the Lorde.

for the house of Juda, it is but lyke as all other Gentils be: Therfore beholde, I will make the cyties of Moab wea- penlesse, and take away their strength: their cyties and chese coastes of their lande, whiche are the pleasures of the countre: As namely, Bethiesimoth, Ba- alimeon and Cariathaim: these wyll I open vnto them of the easste, th at they may fall vpon the Ammonites: and wil- gene it them in possession: so that the Ammonites shall no more be had in re- membraunce among the heathen. Eue- thus wyll I punyssh Moab also, that they maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

Moreover, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Because that * Edom hath auen- ged and ealed him selfe vpon the house of Juda, therfore thus sayth the Lord: I wyll reach out myne hande vpon E- dom, and take awaye manne and beast out of it. Frome Cheman vnto Dedan wyll I make it desolate, they shall bee slayne with the swearde. * Thowowe my people of Israell wyll I auenge me a- gayne vpon Edome: they shall handle him, accordyng to my wra- the and in- dygnacion, so that they shall knowe my vengeance sayeth the Lorde God.

The xxviii. Chapter.

The worde of God agaynst the kynge of Tyre for his byde. Wenyll, the prophete is moued to bewalle the kyng of Tyre. The worde of the Lord agaynst Sa:

the chyldren of Israel.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne

Therfore thus sayeth the Lord God:
For so much as thou hast lyfte by thine hearte, as though thou were God: be:
holde, I wyll byng enemyes vpon the, euen the tyrauntes of the heathē: these shall drawe oute theyr swordes vpon thy beuty and wysdome, and shall deile thy glory. They shall caste the downe to the pytte, so that thou shalt dye in the myddest of the sea, as they that be slaine.
Let se, yf thou wilt save thyselfe (before the that slay the) I am God: where as thou

C I my selfe haue made it. Beholde therefore, I wil vpon the, and vpon thy waters: I wyll make the lande of Egypte waste and desolate, from the towre of Syenes vnto the borders of the Mozi-ans lāde: so that in .xl. yeares there shal no fote of man walcke there, nether fote of cattel go there, nether shall it be inhabited. I wyll make the lande of Egypte to be desolate, amonge other wast countrees, and her cyties to lye boyde .xl. yeares, amonge other boyde cyties: And I wyll scatre the Egyptians amonge the heathen and nations.

Agayne, thus sayeth the Lord God:

* Jer. xlv. c. When the .xl. yeares are expyred, I wyll gather the Egyptians together againe, oute of the nations; amonge whome they were scatred, and wil bring the pylsoners of Egypte againe in to the lande of Pathures their owne natyue countre, that they maye be there a lowlye smal kyngedome: yea, they shal be the smallest amonge other kyngedomes, lest they exalte them selues aboue the heathen: for I wil so monysh them that they shall no more rule the heathen. They shall no more be an hope vnto y<sup>e</sup> house of Israel, nether prouoke them any more to wyckednesse, to cause them turne backe, and to folowe them: and they shal know that I am the Lord God.

D In the .xxviii. yeare, the fyrste daye of the fyrste moneth, came the worde of the Lord vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon hath made his hooſte, with great trauayle and labour to come before Tyre: that euery heade maye be balde, and euery shoulde bare. Yet hath Tyre geuen nether hym nor hys hooſte any rewarde, for the greates trauayle that he hath taken there. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: beholde, I wyll geue the lande of Egypte vnto Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, that he may take awaye al her substance, robbe her robberyes, & spoyle her spoyles, to paye his hooſte theyr wagyes withall. I wyll geue hym the lande of Egypte for hys labour, that he toke for me before Tyre. At the same tyme wyll I cause the b<sup>e</sup> horne of the house of Israel to growe forth, and open thy mouthe agayne among them: that they maye knowe, howe that I am the Lord.

The Notes.

a. The propertye of dragons is to haunte where aboundaunce of waters are: Therefore is y<sup>e</sup> kynge of Egypte here called a dragon, because of the aboundaunce of waters that are in Egypte, where he ragyned. So is Ierusalem called a Queene, because of her hauntyng of Idolatrye: as before in the fol. c. d.

b. Some for glorie and power.

The .xxx. Chapter.

The destruction of Egypte and of hys cyties is bewailed.

The worde of the Lord came moreouer vnto me, sayinge: thou sonne of man, propheticke & speake: thus saith y<sup>e</sup> Lord God: * Mourne, wo worthe this daye, for the daye is here, the daye of the Lord is come: the darcke daye of the heathen, the houre is at hande, the swerde cometh vpon Egypte. When the wounded men fall downe in Egypte, when her people are taken awaye, and when her foundations are destroyed, the Moziens lande shall be afrayed, yea, the Moziens lande, Libia and Lidia, al theyr comen people, and Chub, and all that be confederate vnto them, shal fal with them thorow the swerde.

Thus sayeth the Lord: The maynteyners of the lande of Egypte shal fal, the pride of her power shal come downe: euē vnto the towre of Syenes shal they be slayne downe with the swerde, sayeth the Lord God: amonge other desolate countrees they shalbe made desolate, and amonge other waste cyties they shalbe wasted. And they shall knowe, that I am the Lord, when I kyndle a fyre in Egypte, and when all her helpers are destroyed. At that tyme, shall their messengers go forth fro me in shypes, to make the careless Moziens afrayed, and sorowe shall come vpon them in the daye of Egypte for doutlesse it shall come.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: I wil make an ende of the people of Egypte thorowe the hande of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon. He and hys people wyth hym, yea, and the cruell tyrantes of the heathen shall be brought brought to destroy the lande. They shal drawe out their swerdes vpon Egypt and fyll the lande full of slayne men. I wyl drye vp theyr floudes of water, and sell the lande in to the handes of wicked people. The lande and al that is therein, wyl I destroye thozow the enemyes. Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it.

D And thus saith the Lorde God: * I wyl destroye the Idols, and brynge the ymages of * Noph to an ende. There shall no more be a pryncce of Egypt, and a fearfulness wyl I sende in to the Egipcians lande. As for Pathures, I wil make it desolate, and kyndle a fyre in * * * * *

E Sin shalbe in greate heynesse, Alexandria shalbe rote oute, and Noph shall haue dayly sorowe. The best me of Heliopolis and Bubasto shalbe slayne with the swerde, and carryed away captiue. At Taphnis y daye shalbe darcke, when I breake there the scepter of the lande of Egypte, and when the pompe of her power shal haue an ende. A cloude shal couer her, and her doughters shalbe led awaye in to captiuitie. Thus wil I punyche Egypte, that they may know, how that I am the Lorde.

I It happened in the .xi. yeaere, vpon the seuenth daye of the fyrste Moneth, that the Lordes worde came vnto me, sayinge: Beholde, thou sonne of man, I wyl breake the arme of Pharaos kyng of Egypte: and lo it shall not be bounde bp to be healed, nether shal any playstre be laied vpon it, for to ease it, or to make it so stronge, as to holde a swerde.

Therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyl vpon Pharaos y kyng of Egypte, and bruse his stronge arme (yet is it but a broken one) & wil smyte the swerde out of his hande.

G As for the Egipcians, I wyl scatre them amonge the Heathen, and strowe them in the landes aboute. Agayne I wyl strength the arme of the kyng of Babilon, and geue hym my swerde in hys hande: but I wyl breake Pharaos arme so that he shall holde it before hym pyteouslye, lyke a wounded man.

Yea, I wyl stablyshe the kyng of Babilons arme, and the armes of Pharaos shall fall downe: that it may be knowen, that I am the Lorde, whiche geue the kyng of Babilon my swerde in his hande, that he maye drawe it oute vpon the lande of Egypte: and that when I scatre the Egipcians amonge the Gentyles, and strowe them in the landes aboute, they maye knowe, that I am the Lorde.

The .xxi. Chapter.

I comparison of the prosperitie of Pharaos with the prosperitie of the Assyrians. He prophesyeth a lyke destruction vnto them both.

Moreouer, it happened in the .xi. yeaere the fyrste daye of the thyrde Moneth that the word of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, speake vnto Pharaos the kyng of Egypte, and to all hys people: Whome arte thou lyke in thy greatnesse? Beholde Assur was lyke a Cedre tre vpon the mounte of Lybanus with fayre braunches: so thyrke, that he gaue shadowes and shot out very hye. His toppe reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made him greate, & the depe set hym vp an hye. Rōūde aboute the rotes of hym ranne there floudes of water, he sent out hys lytle ryuers vnto al the trees of the felde. Therefore was he hyer then all the trees of the felde, and thozowe the multitude of waters that he sent from hym, he optayned many longe braunches. All foules of the ayre made theyr nestes in his braunches, vnder his bowes gendered all these bestes of the felde and vnder his shadowe dwelte all people. Fayre & beutiful was he in his greatnesse and in the lēgth of hys braunches, for hys rote stode besyde greate waters, no Cedar tre myghte hyde hym. In the pleasaunte garden of God, there was no fyre tree lyke hys braunches, the playne trees were not lyke the bowes of hym. All the trees in the garden of God myght not be compared vnto hym in his beutye so fayre and goodly had I made him w the multitude of his braunches: In so much that al the trees in the pleasaunt gardē of god, had enuy at him.

Therefore,

D Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: Lord God.

for so muche as he hath lyfte hym selfe so hye, and stretched his toppes in to the cloudes, and seynge his herte is proude in his highnesse: I wil deliuer hym in to the handes of the mightiest amonge the heathen, which shall rote him oute.
Accordynge to his wickednes wil I cast him away, the enemies shall destroy him, and the myghtie men of the heathen shall so scatere him, that his braunches shall lye vpon al mountaynes and in al valleys: his bowes shall be broken downe to the grounde thorow oute the lade. The al the people of the lande shall go fro his shadowe, and forsake hym. When he is fallen, all the foules of the ayre shall flyt vpon hym, and all wyld beasts of the felde shall go aboute amonge his braunches: so that from hence forth, no tre in the water shall attayne to his highnesse, nor reache his toppes vnto the cloudes, nether shall any tre of the water stande so hye, as he hath done. For vnto death shall they all be deliuered vnder þe earth, and go downe to the graue, lyke other men.

I Moreover, thus sayeth the Lord God: In the daye when he goeth downe to the graue, I wil cause a lamentacion to be made, I wyll couer the depe vpon him, I wil staunche his floudes, and the great waters shall be restrayned. I shall cause Lybanus to be sorowfull for hys sake, & all þe trees of þe felde shall be smitten. I wyll make the heathen shake at the sounde of his fall, when I caste hym downe to * hell, with them that descende in to the pytte. All the trees of Eden, with all the chosen and best trees of Li-banus, yea, and all they that are planted vpon the waters, shall mourne with him also in the lower habitacions: for they shall go downe to hell with hym, vnto the that be slayne with þe swerde, which dwelt afore vnder the shadowe of his arme amonge the heathen. To whome shalt thou be lyckened, that art so glorious & great, amonge the trees of Eden? Yet art thou cast downe vnder the earthe (amonge the trees of Eden) where thou must lye amonge vncircumcysed, with them that be slayne with the swerde. Euen thus is it with Pharao and all hys people, sayeth the Lord God.

The prophete is commaunded to bewaile Pharao the kynge of Egypte. He propheseth that destruction shall come vnto Egypte thorow the kynge of Babilon

In the. xii. yeaere, the fyrst thou troublest the waters w thy fete, & stampst in their floudes. Thus saith the Lord God: * I wil sprede my net ou-people: these shall dyue the in to my pyne, for I wyl caste the vpon þe lande, and let the lye vpon the felde, that al the foules of the ayre maye flyt vpon the: I wil geue al þe beasts of þe felde inoughe of the. Thy fleshe wil I caste vpon the hilles, and fyl the valleyes with thy highnesse. I wil water the lande with the aboundaunce of thy bloude euen to the mountaynes, and the valleyes shall be full of the. When thou art put out, I wyl couer the heauen, and make hys starres dymme. * I wyl sprede a cloude ouer the Sunne, and the Moone shall not geue her lyghte. All the lyghtes of heauen wyl I put out ouer the, & bring darknesse vpon thy lande, sayeth the Lord God. I wil trouble the hertes of many people, whē I byynge thy destruc-

D This is the mourninge, that the daughters of the Heathen shal make: Yea, a sorowe and lamentacion shal they take vp, vpon Egypte & all her people, sayeth the Lord God.

In the .xii. yeare, the .xv. daye of the Moneth, came the worde of the Lord vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, Take vp a lamentacion vpon the people of Egypt, and caste them downe, yea, and the mightie people of the Heathen also, euen with them* that dwel beneth: and with them that go downe in to the graue. Downe (howe fayne so euer thou be) and laye the with the vncircumcised. Amonge those that be slayne with the swearde, shal they lye. The swearde is geuen all readye, he shal be drawen forth and all hys people. The myghty worthyes and his helpers, that be gone downe and lie with the vncircumcised and with them that be slayne with the swearde: shal speake to him oute of the hell.

E Asur is there also with his companye, and their graues rounde about, whiche were slayne and fel all with the swearde, whose graues lye besyde hym in the lowe pytte. His commens are buryed rounde aboute his graue: all together wounded and slayne wyth the swearde, which men afore time brought feare in to the lande of the luyng.

There is * Elam also with all hys people, and their graues rounde about: which al beyng wounded & slayne with the swearde, are gone downe vncircumcised vnder the earth, whiche neuertheles sometyme brought feare in to the lande of the luyng: for the which they beate their shame, with the other that be gone downe to the graue.

F Their burial is geuen them and all their people, amonge the that be slayne. Their graues are rounde aboute all them, whiche be vncircumcised, & with them that be slayne thowgh p swerde: for seynge that in tymes past they made the lande of the luyng afrayed, they must now beate their owne shame, with them that go downe to the pytte, and lie amonge them, that be slayne.

There is Meslech also and Tubal, and theyr people, & their graues rounde aboute. These al are amonge the vncircumcised, and them that be slayne with the swearde, because afore tyme they made the lande of the luyng afrayed.

Shoulde not they then lye also amonge the worthyes, and vncircumcised Gaiantes? whiche with their weapons are gone downe to hel: whose swerdes are laied vnder their heades, whose wyckednesse is vpon their bones: because p as worthies, they haue brought feare in to the lande of the luyng. Yea, amonge the vncircumcised shalte thou be destroyed, and slepe with them, that perished thowgh the swearde.

There is the lande of * Edom with her kynges & princes also, whiche with their strength are layed by them that were slayne with the swearde, yea, amonge the vncircumcised, and them which are gone downe in to the pytte. Moreouer, there be al the princes of the north, with all the Sidonians, whiche are gone downe to the slayne.

With their feare and strengthe they are come to the confusyon, and lye there vncircumcised, amonge those that be slayne with the swearde: and beate theyr owne shame, with them that be gone downe to the pytte. Nowe whan Pharaos seeth this, he shal be comforted ouer all hys people, that is slayne with the swearde: bothe Pharaos and all hys hooft, sayeth the Lord God. For I haue geuen my feare in the lande of the luyng. But Pharaos and all his people shal lye amonge the vncircumcised, and amonge them that be slayne with the swearde sayeth the Lord God.

The .xxiii. Chapter.

G He setteth oute the office of a curate that preacheth the Gospell. He strengtheneth them that despayre, and boldeneth them with the promes of mercye. As the former righteounes helpeth not the righteous, yf he geue hym selfe agayne to synne: so the synnes done before are not imputed to the wycked p amercy. The word of the Lord agaynst the remnaunte of the people. Agaynst the mockers of the wordes of the Prophete.

Agayne, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, Speake to þe chyldren of thy people, and tell them: Whan I sende a swearde vpon a lande, yf the people of the lande take a man of their countre, and set hym to be their * watchmā: the same man (whan he seeth the swearde come vpon the lande) shall blowe þe trom-pet, and warne the people.

If a man now heare the noyse of the trompet and wil not be warned, and the swearde come and take him awaye: hys bloude shall be vpon his owne heade:
for he hearde the sounde of the trompet, and woulde not take hede, therfore hys bloude be vpon hym. But yf he wyll receaue warnynge, he shall saue hys lyfe. Agayne, yf the watche man se the swearde come and shewe it not with the trompet, so that the people is not warned: yf the swearde come then, and take any man from amonge them: the same shal be taken awaye in his owne synne, but his bloude wyll I requyre of the watchmans hande.

* And now (O thou sonne of man) I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel: þe where as thou hearest any thyng oute of my mouthe, thou mayest warne them on my behalfe. If I saye vnto the wycked, thou wycked, thou shalt surely dye: and thou geuest him not warnynge, that he may beware of hys vngodly waye: then shall þe wycked dye in hys owne synne, but hys bloude wil I requyre of thy hande. Ne-uerthelesse yf þe warne the wicked of his waye, to tourne from it, where as he yet wil not be turned fro it, then shal he dye becaule of his synne, but thou haste de-liuered thy soule.

Therefore (O thou sonne of man) speake vnto the house of Israel. Ye saye thus: Oure offences and synnes lye vpon vs, and we be corrupte in them: how shoulde we then be restored vnto lyfe?
Tell them: * As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lorde God, I haue no pleasure in the deathe of the wycked, but muche rather that the wycked turne from hys waye and lyue. Turne you, turne you from youre vngodly wayes, O ye of the house of Israel. Oh, wherfore wilt ye die?

Thou sonne of man, tell the chyldren of thy people: * The ryghteousnes of the righteous shal not saue him, whā so euer he turneth awaye vnfaithfully: Agayne, the wyckednesse of the wycked shal not hurte him, whan soeuer he conuerteth from his vngodlynesse.

And the righteousnesse of the rightesous shal not saue his lyfe, whan soeuer he synneth. If I saye vnto the ryghtesous, that he shall surely lyue, and so he truste to his owne ryghteousnesse, and do synne: then shall his ryghteousnesse be no more thought vpon, but in þe wyckednesse that he hath done he shall dye.

* Agayne, yf I saye vnto the wycked:
thou shalt surely dye: and so he turne from hys synnes, and do the thing that is lawfull and righte: In so muche that the same wycked man geueth þe pledge agayne, restoreth that he had taken awaye by robbery, walcketh in the commaundementes of lyfe, and dothe no wronge: Then shall he surely lyue, and not dye. Yea, the synnes that he hath done, * shall neuer be thought vpon:

For in so muche as he dothe nowe the thyng that is lawfull and ryghte, he shall lyue. And yet the children of thy people saye: Tush, the waye of the Lorde is not ryght, where as their owne waye is rather vnrighthe,

When the righteous turneth from his ryghteousnesse, and doeth the thing that is wycked, he shal dye therfore.

But yf the wycked turne from his wyckednesse, doynge the thyng þe is lawfull and right, he shal lyue therfore. Yet ye saye: the * waye of þe Lorde is not equal.
O ye house of Israel, * I wil iudge eue-ry one of you after his wayes.

In the .xii. yere, the .v. daye of the .x. moneth of oure captiuitie, it happened, that one whiche was fled oute of Ieru-salem, came vnto me, and sayde: the cy-tie is destroyed. Nowe the hande of the Lorde had bene vpon me the euerynynge afore this man (whiche was escaped) came vnto me, & had opened my mouth, vntyll the mornynge that he came to me: yea, he opened my mouthe, so that I was no more domine. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, and sayde:

in the wasted lande of Israel, saye: Abraham was but one man, and he had the lande in possession: nowe are we many, and the lande is geue vs to possesse

Also. And therfore tel them: Thus sayeth the Lorde: * In the bloude haue ye eaten, your eyes haue ye lyfte vp to Idoles, * and haue shed bloude: shall ye then haue the lande in possession?

Ye leane vpon your swerdes, ye worke abominacions, euery one defileth his neyghbours wyfe: and shall ye then possesse the lande? Saye thou these wordes vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * As truly as I lyue all ye that dwell in this wyldernesse, shall be slayne with the swerde: what so euer is vpon the felde, wyll I geue vnto the beastes to be deuoured: those that be in stronge holdes and denmes, shall dye of the pestilence. For I wyll make y<sup>e</sup> lande so desolate and waste, and the pompe of her strength shall come to an ende. The mountaynes in Israel shall be so waste: that no man shall trauaile therby.

* Then shall they learne to knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I make the lande waste and desolate, because of all their abominacions, that they haue wroughte. And thou sonne of man, the chyldre of thy people that talcke of the, by the walles and in the doores of theyr houses, sayinge one to another: Come, let vs heare, what worde is gone forth from the Lorde: These come vnto the, after the maner of a great people: yea, my people syt downe before the, and heare thy wordes, but they do not there after: * for in their mouthes they shewe them selues (as though they were feruente, but their hearte goeth after their owne couetous lucte. And as a bawle y<sup>e</sup> hathe a swete tune, and is pleasaunte to synge, so shalt thou be vnto them: thy wordes shall they heare, but they wyll not do thereafter. When this cometh to passe (for so, it cometh in dede) then shall they knowe, that there hath bene a prophet amonge them.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Agaynst the sheppes and shepherdes that despise the flocke of Christ, and seake theyr owne. The Lorde sayeth that he wyll vset his dysparpled flocke, and gather them together. He reproveth the malice of certayne of y<sup>e</sup> flocke. He promyseth the true shepherde Christe, and with hym peace.

Why shepe go wadinge vpon al mountaynes & vpon euery hie hil. Yea, they be scattede abrode in al felde, & there is no man, y<sup>e</sup> careth for the, or seketh after the. Therfore. O ye shepherdes, heare the word of y<sup>e</sup> lord. Thus saith y<sup>e</sup> lord god: As truly as I lyue, for so muche as my shepe are robbed, & deuoured of all the wilde beastes of y<sup>e</sup> felde, haunge no shepherde: & seyng y<sup>e</sup> my shepherdes take no regarde of my shepe, but fede the selues onely, & not my shepe: Therfore heare y<sup>e</sup> word of y<sup>e</sup> Lord, O ye shepherdes: Thus saith y<sup>e</sup> Lord God: Beholde, I my selfe wil vpon the shepherdes, and require my shepe fro their handes, & make the ceasse fro fedynge of my shepe: yea, y<sup>e</sup> shepherdes shall fede the selues no more: for I wil deliuer my shepe oute of their mouthes, so that they shall not deuoure them after this. For thus sayeth the Lorde God: * Beholde, I wyll loke to my shepe my selfe, & seke the. Lyke as a shepherde amonge the flocke seketh after y<sup>e</sup> shepe that are scatered abroade, euen so wyll I seke after my shepe, and gather them together out of all places, where they haue bene scattede in y<sup>e</sup> cloude & darcke day. I wil bryng the out fro all people, & gather the together out of all lades. I wil bryng the in to their owne lande, & fede them vpon the mountaynes of Israel, by the ryuers, and in all the places of the countre, I wyll fede them in ryghte good pastures and vpon the hye mountaynes of Israel shall their foldes

(O my shepe) sayeth the Lord God: \* I wyl put a differece amog  $\text{p}$  shepe, amog the withers & the goates. Thus my shepe muste be fayne to eate the thyng that ye haue troden downe with youre fete, and to dryncke it, that ye with youre fete haue despyled. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God vnto them: Beholde, I wyll seuer the fat shepe from the leane: for so muche as ye haue shot the weake shepe vpon the sydes and shoulde, and runne vpon them with youre hornes, so longe tyll ye haue vtterly scatted them abrode. I wyl helpe my shepe, so that they shal no more be spoyled: yea, I wyll dyscerne one shepe from another. I wyll rayse vp vnto the one onely shepherde: eue my seruaunte Dauid, he shal \* fede them, and he shal be theyr shepherde. They shal no more be spoyled of the heathen, nor deuoured with the beastes of the lande: but safely shal they dwell, and no man shal fraye them. Thus shal they vnderstande, that I the Lord their God am with them, and that they (euen the house of Israel) are my people, sayeth the Lord God. The destruction that shal come on the hyll Seir, that is, on the Idumians, because they troubled the people of the Lord.

Moreover, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face toward the mounte, \* Seir, it, prophesye vpo it, and say vnto it: Thus sayeth  $\text{p}$  Lord God. Therfore, thus sayeth the Lord God: As truly as I lyue, I wyl handle the accordyng to thy wrauth and gelousy, lyke as thou hast dealte cruelly with them: that I maye be known among them, how I haue punished the. Yea, & thou also mayest be sure, that I the Lord haue hearde al thy despyteful wordes, whiche thou hast spoken against þ mountaines of Israel, saying: Lo, they are made waste, and geuen vs to deuoure. Thus with youre mouthes ye haue made youre booste agaynst me, yea, and multiplied youre proude wordes agaynst me, whiche I haue hearde al together. Where vnto, thus sayeth the Lord God: when the whole worlde is in wealth, then wil I make the wast. \* And lyke as þ (O mouñte Seyr) wast glade, because the heretage of the house of Israel was destroyed: euen so wyl I do vnto the also, that thou and whole Edom shall be destroyed, & knowe, that I am the Lord.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

The promyseth deliuerance from the Gentyles vnto Israel. The benefytes done vnto the Jewes are to be ascribed to the mercede of God, not vnto their desertynge. God reuoceth oure heretes that we maye walke in his commaundementes.

A Thou sonne of man, prophesye vpon the mountaynes of Israel, & speake: * heare the worde of the Lord, O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lord God: Because youre enemye hath said vpon you: Aha, the hye euerlastyng places are now become ourg: prophesy therfore, & speake: thus sayeth the Lord God: Seynge ye be wasted and troden downe on euerye syde, and become a possession vnto þ residue of the Gentyles, whiche haue broughte you in to mens mouthes and vnto an euell name amonge the people: Therfore, heare the worde of the Lord God, O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lord God vnto the mountaynes and hylles, valleyes and dales, to the voyde wildernes and desolate cities, which are spoyled, and had in desolation on euery syde, among the residue of the Heathen: Yea, euen thus sayeth the Lord God: In the fyre of my gelously haue I taken a deuyce, agaynst the residue of the Gentiles, and against al * Edom: whiche haue taken in my lade vnto them selues for a possession: whiche also reioysed from theyr whole hearte with a dyspyteful stomacke, to waste it, and to spoyle it.

Prophecie therfore vpon the lande of Israel, speake vnto the mountaynes and hylles, to valleyes and dales, thus sayeth the Lord God. Beholde, thys haue I deuyled in my gelousye and terrible wrathe: for so muche as ye haue suffered reproche of the Heathen, therfore thus sayeth the Lord God: I haue swozne, that the Gentiles whiche lye aboute you, shall beate youre confusyon them selues. And as for you (O mountaynes of Israel) ye shall hute out your braunches, and byngge forth your frute to my people of Israel, for it is harde by, that it wil come. Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you wyl I turne me, that ye maye be tyllled and sowed.

I wil sende you much people, which shalbe al of the house of Israel: the cyties shalbe inhabyted, and the decayed places shalbe repayred agayne. I wyl prouyde you with muche people & catel, whiche shall increase and byngge frute. I wyl restore you also to your old estate and geue you more kyndnes then euer ye had before: wherby ye shall knowe, that I am the Lord. Yea, people wyl I sende vnto you (O my folke of Israel) whiche shall haue the in possession, and thou shalt be theyr inheritaunce, so that thou shalt be no more withoute them. Agayne, thus sayeth the Lord God: for so muche as they saye vnto you: þ arte an eater vp of me, & a waster of thy people: therfore thou shalt eate no more men, nether destroy thy people any more, sayeth the Lord God. And I wyl not suffer the, for to heare thyne owne confusyon amonge the Gentiles from hensforth. Thou shalt beate the reproche of the nacions, nor caste oute thyne owne people any more, sayeth the Lord God.

Wherefore I poured my wrathfull displeasure vpon them, because of the bloude that they had shedde in the lande, and because of their Idolles, wherewith they had despyled them selues. Then spared I my holye name, whiche the house of Israel had dishonoured amonge the Gentyles, to whome they came. Therefore tell the house of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I doe not this for your sakes (O house of Israel) but for my holye names sake, whiche ye dishonoured amonge the heathen, when ye came to them. Therefore I wyll halowe my great name agayne, which amonge the Gentyles is euell spoken of: for ye youre selues haue dishonoured it amonge them. And so ye shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue to your forefathers, and ye shalbe my people, and I wyll be your God. I wyll helpe you out of al your vncleynesse. I wyll call for the corne, and wyll increase it, and wyll lette you haue no hunger. I wyll multiplie the fruytes of the trees and the increase of the felde for you, so that ye shall beare no more reproche of hongre amonge the heathen. Then shal ye remembre your owne wicked wayes, & your ymaginacions, whiche were not good: So that ye shall take displeasure at your owne selues, by reason of your synnes, & abominacions.

But I wyll not doe this for your sakes (saith the Lorde God) be ye sure of it. Therefore, O ye house of Israel, be ashamed of your synnes. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde God: What time as I shall cleanse you from all your offences, then wyll I make the cities to be occupied agayne, and wyll repayre the places that be decayed. The desolate lande shalbe builded agayne, whiche afore tyme laye waste in the sighte of al them that wente by. Then shal it be sayde: This waste lande is become like a garden of pleasure, and y<sup>e</sup> boydes, desolate & brokendowne cities, are now stronge, and fensed agayne. Then the residue of the heathen that lye rounde aboute you, shall knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche repayre that was brokendowne, and plante agayne, that was made wast. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, and wyll doe it in dede.

Thus saith the Lorde God: I wyll yet once be founde agayne of the house of Israel, and doe this for the: * I shal increase them as a flocke of men. Lyke as the holye flocke and the flocke of Ierusalem are in the hye solempne feastes: So shall also the wyld waste cities be fylled with flockes of men: and they shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

He hande of the Lorde came vpon me; and caryed me oute in the spirite of the Lorde, and let me down in a playne felde, that laye full of bones, and he led me rounde aboute by them: And beholde, the bones that laye vpon the felde, were verye manye; and maruelous dyde also. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man: thinkest thou that these bones maye lyue agayne? I answered: O Lorde God, thou knowest. And he sayde vnto me: Prophecie thou vpon these bones, & speake vnto them: Ye dyde bones, heare the woorde of the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto these bones: Beholde, I wyl put breath into you, that ye may lyue: I wyl geue you synowes, and make flethe growe vpon you, and couer you ouer with skinne: And so geue you * breathe, that ye maye lyue, and knowe, that I am the Lorde.

Gen. ii. b.

So I prophecied, as he had commaunded me. * And as I was propheciynge, there came a noyse and a great motion, so that the bones ranne euery one to another. Nowe when I had looked, beholde, they had synowes, and flethe grewe vpon them: And aboue they were couered w skinne, but there was no breathe in them. Then sayde he vnto me: thou sonne of man, prophecie thou towarde the wynde: prophesy, and speake to the wynde: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Come (O thou ayre) frome the soure wyndes, and blow vpon these dayne, that they maye be restored to lyfe. So I prophecied, as he had commaunded me: Then came the breath into them, and they receaued lyfe, & stode vp vpon their fete, a maruelous greatesorte.

Moreouer, he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israell. Beholde, they saye: Oure bones are dyed vp, oure hope is gone, we are clene cutte of. Therefore prophesye thou, and speake vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyl open youre graues (O my people) and take you oute of youre sepul-

My spirite also wyl I put in you, and ye shall lyue: I wyl set you agayne in youre owne lande, and ye shall knowe, & I am the Lorde, whiche haue sayde it, and fulfilled in dede.

The woorde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, take a stycke and write vpon it: Vnto Juda and to the children of Israell his companions. Then take another stick and write vpon it: Vnto Ioseph the stocke of Ephraim, and to all the houses holde of Israell hys companions. And then, take bothe these two together in thy hande, so shall there be one stick thercof. Nowe yf the children of thy people saye vnto thee: Wylte thou not shewe vs what thou meanest by these? Then geue them thys answer: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, * I wyl take the stocke of Ioseph, whiche is in the hande of Ephraim, and of the tribes of Israell his felowes, and wyl putte them to the stocke of Juda, and make them one stocke, and they shalbe one in my hande. And the two styckes where vpon thou writest, shalt thou haue in thyne hande, that they maye se, and shalt saye vnto them:

They shall no moore be two peoples frome hence forth, nether be deuided into two kingdomes: They shall also desile them selues no moze with the abominacions, Idolles, and al their wicked doynges. Yea, euen in the same lande shall they, their children, & theyr childrens children dwell for euer more: And my seruaunte Dauid shal be their everlastynge kynge. Moreover, I will make a bonde of peace wyth them, which shal be vnto them an everlastynge covenannt. I will sette them also, and multiplie them, my Sanctuarie will I sette amonge them for euermore. * My dwellinge shall be with them, yea, I wyl be their God, and they shall be my people. Thus the heathen also shall knowe, that I the Lorde am the holpe maker of Israell: When my Sanctuarie shall be amonge them for euermore.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

The propheth that Gog and Magog shall come wryn an appoynted hoste in to the lande of promyse, their current. He reherceth that the comynge of Gog was before propheted of the prophetes. The destruction of hym.

At the woorde of the Lorde, came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, tourne thy face toward Gog in the lande of Magog, whiche is the chiefe kynge at Mesech and Tubal: Prophecie agaynste hym, & save: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * O Gog thou chiefe kynge Mesech and Tubal: Beholde, I wyl vpon thee, and wyl turne the aboute, and putte a byt in thy chawes: I wyl brynge the forth and all thyne hoste, bothe horse and horse men, whiche be all weapened of the best fashion: A greate people, that handle altogether speares, shyldes, and swerdes: The Perles, Morsans and wyth them the Lybrans, whiche all beare shyldes and helmettes: Gomer and all his hostes: The house of Thogorma oute of the Northe quarters, and all his hostes, yea, and muche people w thee.

Therefore prepare the, set thy selfe in aray with all thy people, that are come vnto the by heapes, and be thou their defence. After manie dayes thou shalt be visited, and in y latter yeaeres thou shalt come in to the lande, that hath bene destroyed with the swerde, and nowe is replenished agayne w diuerse people vpon y mountaynes of Israell, which haue longe lye waste. Yea, they be broughte oute of the nacjons, and dwel all safe. Thou shalt come vp like a storme wether, to couer the lande, and as it were a darcke cloude: Thou with al thyne hostes, and a great multitude of people with the.

Moreover, thus sayeth the Lorde God: At the same tyme shall manie thynges come into thy mynde, so that thou shalt ymagyn mischiese, and say: I wyl bp to yonder playne lande, seeinge they syt at ease, and dwel so safely (for they dwell all without any walles, they haue neither barres nor doores) to spoyle them, to robbe them, to lape hande vpon their so well inhabited wildernesses: Agaynste that people, that is gathered together fro among y heathen, which haue gottē catel and good, and dwell in the middest of the lande. Then shal Saba, and Dedan, and the marchauntes of Charlis with all their worthyes, saye vnto thee: Arte thou come to robbe? Hast thou gathered thy people together, because thou wylte spoyle to take syluer and golde: to carye away catel and good? And to haue a great praye.

Therefore, O thou sonne of man, thou shalt prophecie, and save vnto Gog: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: In that daye thou shalt knowe, that my people of Israell dwelleth safe: And shalt come from thy place oute of the Northe partes: Thou and muche people with the, whiche ryde vpon horses, whereof there is a greate multitude & an innumerable sorte. Yea, thou shalt come vpon my people of Israell, as a cloude to couer the lande. Thys shall come to passe in the latter dayes: I wyl brynge the vp into my lande, that the heathen maye knowe me, when I gette me honour vpon the O Gog, before their eyes.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Thou arte he, of whome I haue spoken afore tyme, by my seruauntes the prophetes of Israell, whiche propheted in those dayes and yeaeres, that I should brige the vpon them. At the same tyme, when

The xxxix. Chapter.

He sheweth the destruction of Gog & Magog. The graue of Gog and of his host. He prophesyeth that Gog and his company shall be deuoured of byrdes & beasts. Wherefore the house of Israel is walled. Their byrds shal agayne from captiuyte is promysed.

Herefore O thou sonne of man, prophesye a gaynste Gog, & speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, * O Gog: thou chiefe prince at Melech and Tuball, I wyll vpon the, and turne the aboute, and cary the forth, and leade the frome the Northe partes, and bringe the vp to the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy bowe, I wyll smite it out of thy lefte hande, and caste thyne arrowes out of thy righte hande. Thou with al thyne heape, & all the people that is with thee, muste fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Then wyll I geue thee vnto the foules and wyld beasts of the felde, to be deuoured: there must thou lye vpon the felde: for euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

sayeth the Lorde God.

In to Magog, and amonge those that lyt so carelesse in the fles: wyll I sende a fyre, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. I wyll make also the name of my holynesse to be knowen amonge my people of Israel: And I wyll not lette my holpe name be euell spoken of anye moze: But the verpe heathen also shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, the holy one of Israel. Beholde, it cometh, & shall be fulfilled in dede, sayeth the Lorde God. This is the day wherof I haue spokē: They that dwel in the cities of Israel, shall goe forth and sette fyre vpon the weapens, and burne them: Shyldees and speares, bowes and arrowes, bylles and clubbes: Seuen yeaeres shall they be buryng therof, so ythey shal els brige no stickes from the felde, neither haue nede to hew downe anye out of the wodde. For they shall haue weapens ynowe to burne. They shall rob those y robbed the, and spoyle those that spoyled them sayeth y Lorde God.

At the same tyme wyll I geue vnto Gog a place to be buryed in, in Israel: euē the valley, where thorow men goe from the East to the sea warde. Those that trauayle thereby, shall abhorre it. There shall Gog & al hys people be buryed: And it shall be called the valley of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes longe shall the house of Israel be buryng of them that they maye cleanse the lande. Yea, all the people of the lande shall hurpe them. O it shall be a glorious daye, when I get me that honour, sayeth y Lord God. They shall ordeyne me also to be deadburyers, euē goyng thorowe the lande, and appoynte them certayne places to burye those in, whiche remaine vpon the felde, that the lande maye be cleansed. Frome ende to ende shall they seke, & y seuen monethes longe. Nowe those that goe thorowe the lande, where they see a mans bone, they shall sette bp a token by it, tyll the deadburyers haue buried it also, in the valley of the people of Gog. And the name of the Cytie shall be called * Harmonah: Thus shall they make the lande cleane.

And thou sonne of man: Thus saith the the Lorde God: Speake vnto all the foules and euery byrde, yea, & to al the wyld beasts of the felde: Hape you together and come, gather you rounde about vpon my daughter, that I haue sayne for you: Euen a greate daughter vpon the mountaynes of Israel: eate fleshe, and dryncke bloude. Ye shal eate the fleshe of the worthyes, and dryncke the bloude of the Prynces of the lande: Of the wethers, of the Lambes, of the Goates, and of the Oxen that be all sayne at Basan. Eate the fatte pource belye ful, and dryncke bloude, tyll ye be droncken of the daughter, whyche I haue sayne vnto you. I fill you at my table, with horses and stronge horsmen: with captaynes & all men of warre, sayeth the Lorde God.

I wyll bringe my glorie also amonge the Gentiles, that all the heathen maye see my iudgemente, that I haue kept, and my hande which I haue layed vpon them: That the house of Israel maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde their God, frome that daye forth. And the heathen shall knowe, that where as the house of Israel were ledde in to captiuitie: It was for their wyckednesse sake, because they offended me.

For the whiche cause I hyd my face from them, and deliuered them into the handes of their enemyes, & they myght all be sayne wth the swearde. Accordyng to their vncleennesse and vnfaithfull dealinges, so haue I entreated them, and hyd my face fro them. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Now wyll I bringe agayne the captiues of Jacob and haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israel, and be gelous for my holpe names sake. All their confusion and offence & they haue done agaynst me, shal be taken awaye: And so safelye shall they dwell in their lande, that no man shall make them afraied: And when I haue broughte them agayne from amonge the people, when I haue gathered them together out of their enemies landes, and am prayled in them before manye heathen: Then shal they knowe, that I am the Lord their God, whiche suffered them to be led into captiuite amonge the heathen, but nowe haue broughte them agayne into their owne lande, and not lefte one of them yonder.

After that, wyll I hyd my face no more from them, * but wyll poure oute my spirite vpon y house of Israel, sayeth the Lorde God.

Eze. 36, 9

The .xl. Chapter.

The restoringe of the cytye and of the temple that was to come is shewed vnto the prophete.

In the .xxv. yeare of our captiuite, in the begynnyng of the yeare, the .x. daye of the moneth: That is the .xiii. yeare, after that the cite was smitten downe: The same daye came the hand of the Lorde vpon me, and carryed me forth: Euen into the lande of Israel broughte he me in the visions of God: And set me downe vpon a marvelous hie mountayne, wher vpon there was a buildinge (as it had bene of a cite) towarde the north.

Thither he carryed me, and beholde, there was a man, whose sympletyude was lyke brasse, whiche had a threde of flaxe in hys hande, and a meete rodde also. He stode in the doze, and sayde vnto me: Marcke well with thyne eyes, herken to with thyne eares, and fasten it in thyne hearte, whatsoeuer I shall shewe thee, for to the entente that they myghte be shewed the, therefore art thou broughte hither. And whatsoeuer thou seyst, thou shalt certifie the house of Israel therof.

Beholde, there was a wall on the outside rounde about the house: The meet rodde that he hadde in his hande, was fyve cubytes longe and a spanne. So he measured the breadeth of the buildinge, which was a meet rodde, and the height also a meet rodde. Then came he vnto the East dooze, and wente vp the steares, and measured the postes of the doze: Whereof euerye one was a meete rodde thyeke. Euerye chambze was a meet rodde longe and brode: Betwene y chambzes were fyue cubytes. The post of the doze within the porche, was one meet rodde. He measured also y porche of the inner dooze, whyche conteyned a meet rodde. Then measured he the entree of the dooze, that conteyned eyght cubytes bites, and his pylles two cubites: and this entrie stode inwarde.

The chambers of the doze eastwarde, were thre on euery syde: A lyke brode and longe. The pylles also that stode of bothe the sydes, were of one measure. After thys, he measured the wydenesse of the doze, whych was tenne cubites, and the heyghte of the dooze. xiii. cubytes. The edge before the chambers was one cubyte broade vpon bothe the sydes, & the chābers syre cubytes wyde of either syde. He measured the dooze frome the rydge of one chambze to another, whose wydenesse was. xxv. cubytes, and one dooze stode agaynste another. He made pylles also. lx. cubytes hye, rounde aboute the courte dooze. Before the inwarde parte vnto the fore entre of the innermer doze, were. l. cubytes. The chambers and their pylles within, rounde aboute vnto the dooze, had syde wyndowes: So had the fore entres also, whose wyndowes wente rounde aboute within. And vpon the pylles there stode date trees.

Then broughte he me in to the fore courte, where as were chambzes and paued woorkes, made in the fore courte rounde aboute. xxx. chambzes vpon one paued woorkke. Howe the paued woorkke was a longe besyde the doozes, and that was the lower paued woorkke. After thys, he measured the breadeth frome the lower dooze, vnto the innermer courte of the outsyde, whiche had an hundred cubites vpon the East and the Northe parte. And the dooze in the vttermost courte towarde the Northe, measured he after the length and breadeth: Hys thre chambzes also on either syde, with hys pylles and fore entres: which had euen the measure of the first doze. Hys heyghte was fyfthe cubytes, the breadeth. xxv. cubytes: Hys wyndowes & porches w hys date trees, had euen lyke measure as the doze towarde the east: There were. vii. steppes to goe vp vpon, and their porche before them. Howe the dooze of the innermer courte stode streyghte ouer agaynste the doze, that was towarde þ northe east. Frome one doze to another, he measured hundred cubites.

After that, he broughte me to the southsyde, where there stode a doze towarde þ south: whose pylles & porches he measured, these had þ first measure, and w their porches they had wyndowes rounde aboute, lyke the first wyndowes. The heyghte was. l. cubites, the breadeth. xxv. with steppes to goe vp vpon: His porche stode before him, with hys pylles & date trees on either syde. And the dooze of the innermer courte stode towarde the south, & he measured fro one doze to another an. c. cubites, So he broughte me into the innermer courte, thorow þ doze of the south syde: which he measured, and it had the measure afore sayde. In lyke maner, hys chambzes, pylles, and fore entres, had euen the fore sayde measure also. And he had with his porches rounde about, wyndowes of fyfthe cubytes heyghte, and. xxv. cubites brode. The porches rounde aboute were. xxv. cubites longe, and. v. cubites brode: And his porche reached vnto the vttermost courte: vpon hys pylles there were date trees, and. viii. steppes to goe vp vpon.

He brought me also into the inmost court vpon the east syde, and measured the doze, accordeinge to the measure afore sayde. His chambzes, pylles, and porches had euen the same measure, as the firste had: and with hys porches he had wyndowes rounde about. The height was. l. cubites, the breadeth. xxv. cubites: his porches reached vnto þ vttermost courte: his pylles also had date trees on ether side, &. viii. steppes to goe vp vpon. And he broughte me vnto the northe dooze, & measured it, whiche also had the foresaid measure. His chābzes, pylles and porches had wyndowes rounde aboute: whose heyghte was. l. cubites, and the breadeth. xxv. Hys pylles stode toward the vttermost court, and vpon them bothe were date trees, & viii. steps to goe vp vpon. There stode a chambze also, whose inraunce was at the doze pylles, and there þ burnt offerpnynges were washed.

In the doze porch, there stode on either syde two tables for þ slaughtinge: To sleve the burnt offerpnynges, synneofferpnynges and trespace offerpnynges there vpon. And on the out syde as men goe forth to the northe doze, there stode two tables.

tables. foure tables stode on ether side of the doore, p is. viii. tables, wherevpon they slaughted. foure tables were of hewen stone for the burnt offerings, of a cubite & a halfe longe and broade, and one cubite hye: Wherevpon were layde the vesselles and ozna mentes, whiche were vsed to the burnt & dayne offerynges when they were slaughted. And within there were hokes foure fingers brode, fastened rounde aboute, to hang fleshe vpon, and vpon the tables was layde the offerynge fleathe. On the oute syde of the innermer doore were there singers chambers in the inwarde court belyde the North doore ouer agaynst p South. There stode one also, belyde the east doore northwarde.

E And he sayde vnto me: This chamber on the south syde belongeth to the priestes, that kepe the habitation: And this towarde the North, * is the priestes that wayte vpon the altar: whiche be the sonnes of * Sadoch, that doe seruyce before the Lorde in stede of the children of Levi. So he measured the fore court, whiche had in lengthe an hundred cubites, and as muche in breadeth by the foure corners. Nowe p altar stode before the house: & he brought me to the foore entyre of the house, and measured the walles by p entyre doore: which were fyue cubites longe on ether syde. The thickenesse also of the doore on ether syde, was thre cubites. The length of the porche was. xx. cubytes, p breadeth. xi. cubites, and vpon steppes went men vp to it: By the walles also were pylers, on ether syde one.

The. xli. Chapter.

The disposicion and deuyce of buyldynge agayne the temple, and of the other thynges thereto belongynge.

After this he brought me to p temple, & measured p postes: whiche were of both p sides. vi. cubites thicke, accordyng to the wydenesse of the tabernacle. The breadeth of the doore was ten cubytes and the walles of the doore on ether side fyue cubytes. He measured the lengthe therof, whiche conteyned. xl. cubites, and the breath. xx. Then went he in, and measured the doore postes, which were two cubytes thicke: But the doore it selfe was fyue cubites, and the breath deeth of the doore was. vii. cubytes. He measured the length & breadeth therof, whiche were euerye one. xx. cubytes, befoze the temple.

And he sayde vnto me: this is the holpest of al. He measured also the wal of the house, whiche was fyue cubites. The chambers that stode rounde about p house, were euerye one foure cubytes wide, and one stode hard vpon another, wherof there were. xxxiii. And there stode pooles benethe by the walles rounde about the house, to beate them vp: But in the wall of the house they were not fastened: The syde chambers were the hyer the wyder, & had steppes thowse them rounde about the house. Thus was it wyder aboue, that frome the lowest men myght go to the hyest & mydde chambers. I sawe also that the house was very hye rounde about. The foundation of the syde chambers was a meet rod (that is fyue cubites) broade. The thickenesse of the syde wall with oute, conteyned fyue cubytes, and so vnd the out wall of the chambers in the house

Betwene the chambers, was the wydenes. xx. cubites rounde about the house. The chamber doores stode ouer agaynst the out wall, the one doore was towarde the North, the other towarde the South: And p thickenes of the out wall was. v. cubytes rounde aboute. Nowe the buyldynge that was separated toward p west, was. lxx. cubites wide: p wal of p buylding was. v. cubytes thicke rounde aboute, and p length foure scoze cubytes and ten. So he measured the house whiche was an. C. cubites longe, and the separated buyldynge with the wall were an. C. cubytes longe also. The wydenes before the house and of it that was separated toward the East, was an. C. cubites.

And he measured the length of the buylding before and behinde with the chambers vpon both the sydes: And it conteyned an. C. cubites. The innermer temple, the porche of the fore court, the syde postes, these thre had side wyndowes, and pylers rounde aboute ouer agaynst the postes, from p grounde vp to the wyndowes: The wyndowes them selues were syled ouer wyth boz des: And thus was it aboute the doore, vnto the inmoste house, and withoute alio: Yea, the whole wall on euerye syde bothe within & without was syled ouer with great bordes. There were Cherubins and Date trees made also, so that one Date tree stode euer betwixte two Cherubyns: One Cherub had two faces, the face of a man lokynge asyde toward the date tree, and a Lyons face on the other syde. Thus was it made rounde aboute in all the house: Yea, the Cherubins & date trees were made from the grounde vp aboute the doore, & so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

Ezech. 1. e
Exo. 25. c

The bypotes of the temple were foure squared, and the fashyon of the Sanctuarie was * euen as it appeared vnto me afore in the vision. The table was of wod, thre cubytes hye and two cubytes longe: thys corners, the length and the walles were of wodde. And he sayde vnto me: Thys is the table, that shal stande before the Lorde. The temple and the holpest of all had either of them two doores and euerye doore had two lytle wyckettes which were folden in one vpon another, on euerye syde two. And vpon the doores of the temple there were made Cherubyns and date trees, like as vpon the walles: & a great thycke balcke of wodde was before on the out syde of the porche. vpon bothe the sydes of the walles of the porche, there were made depe wyndowes and date trees, hauninge beames & balkes, lyke as the house had.

The .xlii. Chapter.

Of the chambers of the temple for the priestes, and the holpe thynges.

Shen carped he me oute in to the fore court toward the North, and brought me into the chamber & stode ouer against the backebuldyng Northwarde, whiche had the lengthe of an hundred cubytes whole doore turned toward & north. The widenes conteyned .l. cubytes: ouer agaynst the .xx. cubytes of the innermost court, and agaynst the paued worke that was in the fore court. Besyde all these thre, there stode pylers, one ouer agaynst another: And before this chamber there was a walckynge place of ten cubytes wide, and within was a waye of one cubite wyde, and their doores toward the north. Thus the hyest chambers were alway narrower then the lowest and the myddlemoste of the buyldynge: for they bare chamber vpon chamber, and stode thre together one vpon another not haunying pylers lyke the fore court: the fore were they smaller then those beneth and in the myddest, to taken frome the grounde vwarde.

The wall withoute that stode by the chambers toward the vttemost court vpon the fore side of the chambers, was fiftie cubites longe: for the length of & vttemost chambers in & fore court, was fiftie cubites also: But the length thereof before the temple was an hundred cubites. These chambers had vnder the an intraunce of the East syde, wherby a man might go into them out of the fore court, thorowe the thycke wall of the fore court toward the East, ryght ouer against the separated buyldinge. Before the same buyldynge vpon thys syde, there were chambers also whiche had a way vnto them, like as & chambers on & north syde of the same length and wydenesse.

Their intraunce, fashon and doores were also of the same maner. Yea, euen lyke as the other chamber doores were, so were thole also of the Southe syde. And before the way toward the singers steppes on the East side, there stode a doore to go in at. Then said he vnto me: The chambers toward the north & the southe whiche stande before the backebuldyng: Those be holpe habitacions, wherin the priestes that do seturce before the Lorde, muste eate the moste holpe offerpuges: And there must they lay the most holp offerpuges: meate of ferynges, sunneofferpuges and trespass offerpuges, for it is an holy place. wher the priestes come therein, they shal not ent into & fore court: but (seyng they be holpe) they shal leaue & clothes of their ministracion, & put on other garments, when they haue any thyng to do wyth the people.

Now when he had measured all the innermost house, he brought me forth thorow the East porche, and measured the same rounde aboute. He measured the easie syde with the meetrodde, whiche rounde aboute conteyned fyue C. meetrodde. And the northside measured he, whiche conteyned rounde aboute euen so muche. The other two sydes also towarde the south and the west (whiche he measured) conteyned ether of them. v. C. meetrodde. So he measured al the. liii. sydes where there went a wall rounde aboute. v. C. meetrodde longe, and as brode also which separated the holy from the unholy.

The. xliii. Chapter.

He seyth the glory of God goyng into the temple, from whence it had before departed. He mencyneth the Idolatry of the chyldren of Israel, for which they were consumed & brought to nought. He is commaunded to call theym agayne to repentance.

S He brought me to y<sup>e</sup> dore, that turneth towarde y<sup>e</sup> east. Beholde, then came the glory of the God of Israel from out of the east, whose voyce was lyke a great noise of waters, and y<sup>e</sup> earth was lightened with his glory. His syghte to loke vpon, was * lyke the first, that I sawe, when I went in, what tyme as the cytye should haue bene destroyed, * and lyke the vision that I saw by the water of Cobar. Then fell I vpon my face, but the glory of the Lord came in to the house thorow the east dore. So a wynde toke me vp, and broughte me into the ynnertmost court: and beholde, the house was full of the glorye of the Lorde.

Ezech. xli. a

B I heard one speakyng vnto me out of the house, and there stode one by me, that said vnto me: O thou sonne of mā, * this towne is my scate, and the place of my footestepes: where as I wyll dwell amonge the chyldren of Israel for euermore: so that the house of Israel shall no more defyle my holpe name: nether they, nor their kynges, thorowe their whoredome, thorowe their hye places, and thorowe the dead bodies of their kynges: which haue builded their thersholdes in maner harde vpon my thersholdes, and their postes almost at my postes: so that there is but a bare wal betwixte me and them.

Thus haue they defyled my holpe name with their abhomyneacions, that they haue commytted. Wherefore I haue destroyed them in my wrath: But now they shall put away their whoredome and the deed bodies of their kynges out of my syght, that I may dwell among them for euermore. * Therefore (O thou sonne of man) shewe thou the household of Israel a temple, that they may be ashamed of their wyckednesse, and measure theym selues an example therat.

sacha. ii. a.

And when they be ashamed of all theyr woorkes, then shewe theym the fourme and fashyon of the temple: the comynge in, the goynge oute, all the maner and descripcyon thereof, yea, all the bles and ordynaunces of it, y<sup>e</sup> they maye kepe and fulfill all the fashyons and customes therof.

This is the descripcyon of y<sup>e</sup> house: About vpon the mount round about al the corners, it shall be the holiest of al. Beholde, that is the descripcyon and fashyon of the house. This is the measure of the aulter (after the true cubite: which is a spanne longer then another cubyte) his botome in the midst was a cubyte long and wyde, and the ledge that went round about it, was a spanne brode. This is the heygth of the aulter: from the grounde to the lower stepes, the length is two cubytes, and the bredth one cubite: and from the lower stepes to y<sup>e</sup> higher are foure cubytes, and the bredth but one cubyte.

* The aulter was four cubites hie, and from y<sup>e</sup> aulter vaward stode foure hornes, and it was. xii. cubytes long & xii. cubytes brode, vpon the foure corners: the couerynge of the aulter was xiii. cubites longe and brode vpon the four corners, and the ledge that wente rounde aboute, had halfe a cubite: and the botome thereof rounde aboute one cubyte: hys stepes stode towarde the East. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thus saith the Lord God: these are the ordynaunces and lawes of the aulter, & in the daye whē it is made to offre burnt offrynges, and to sprenckle bloud therupon. To the prestes, to the Leuites that be of the seide of * Sadoch, and treade before me to me seruice, sayeth the Lord God: Unto these geue thou a yonge bullocke for a

Leuit. xxi. c. Leuit. xi. b. The nexte daye, take a goatbuck wythout blemish for a synofferpng, to reconcyle the aulter withall: lyke as it was reconciled with the bullocke. Now when thou hast made it cleane, then offre a yong bullock without blemish, and a ram oute of the flocke: withoute blemish also: Offre theym before the Lorde, and let the priest cast * salt ther vpon, and geue them so vnto the Lorde for a burnt offerpnge. Seuen dayes shalt thou bynge, euerye daye a goat- buck. A yong bullocke and a ramme of the flock (both without blemish) shall they offre. Seuen dayes shall they re- concyle and clense the aulter, & offre vpon it. When these daies are expired, the vpon the viii. day and so forth, the prie- stes shall offre their burnt offerings and health offerpnges vpon the aulter: so will I be mercyfull vnto you, sayeth the Lorde God.

The xliiii. Chapter.

He sheweth what doze of the temple is shut. He is commaunded to upbraid & people with their offence. The vncircumcised in hert, & in the flesh. Who are to be admitted to the seruice of the temple, & who to be refused. He sheweth what prie- stes he would haue admitted into the holy place, and also their office.

After this, he broughte me a- gayne to the outward doze of the Sanctuary on the East syde, and that was shut. The sayd the Lorde vnto me: This doze shall be styll shut, and not opened for any man to go thorow it, but onely for the LORDE GOD of Israell: yea, he shall go thorow it, els shall it be shut styll. The pryncce him selfe shall come thorow it, that he maye eate bread be- fore the Lorde. At the porche shall he come in, & there shall he go oute agayne. Then brought he me to the doze, vpon the Northsyde of the house. And as I looked about me, beholde, * the glory of the LORDE filled the house: and I tell downe vpon my face. So the Lorde spake vnto me: Thou sonne of man, * fasten this to thyne hert, beholde, and take diliger hede to al that I wil say vnto the, concernyng all the ordynaunces of the Lorde and all his lawes: pondre wel with thyne hert the commynge in of the house, & the goyng forth of the Sanc- tuary: and tell that obstinate household of Israell: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: O house of Israell, ye haue nowe done ynoughe with all youre abhomynacy- ons, seynge that ye haue broughte in to my Sanctuary straungers, haunyng vncircumcised hertes and flesh, where thorow my Sanctuary is defiled, whe ye offre me bread, fat, and bloude.

Thus with all youre abhomynacy- ons ye haue broken my couenaunt, and not kepte the holpe ordynaunces of my Sanctuary: but let keepers of my sanc- tuary, euen after your owne mynde. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Of al the straungers that dwell amog the chyldren of Israell, no straunger (whose hert and flesh is not circum- cised) shall come within my Sanctu- ary: No, nor the Leuites that be gone backe fro me, and haue dysceaued the people of Israell with all erroures, go- ynge after their ydoles: therefore shall they beate their owne wickednesse.

Should they be set and ordened to mi- nistre vnder the dozes of the house of my Sanctuary? And to do seruice in the house: to stave burnt offerpnges and sacrifices for the people: to stande be- fore the, & to serue them: seynge the ser- uice that they do them, is before their i- doles, and cause the house of Israell to stumbe thorow the wyckednes: * for which cause I haue pluckt out mine hande ouer them (sayeth the Lorde) so that now they must beate their own ini- quite, and not to come nye me, to serue me with their priesthode, in my Sanc- tuary, & most holpest of all: & they maye beate their own shame and abhomyna- cyons, which they haue done. Should I vse them to be porters of the house, & to all the seruice that is done therein? But the Priestes the Leuites the son- nes of * Sadoch, that kepte the holpe ordynaunces of my Sanctuary, when the

And when he is clenfed, there shall be rekened vnto him. vii. dayes: and yf he go into the Sanctuarie agayne to do seruice, he shall bring a synofferynge sayeth the Lorde GOD. * They shall haue an herytage, yea, I my selfe wil be their herytage: els shall ye geue them no possession in Israell, for I am their possession. The meatofferynge, synof-ferynge and trespassofferyng shall they eate, and euery dedycate thyng in Israell, shalbe theirs. The fyrstlynges of all the fyrst frutes, and all the wyl offerynges shalbe the pryestes.

Ye shall geue vnto the priestes also the fyrstlynges of your dowe, that GOD maye prospere the resydue. * But no deade caryon shall the priest eate, nor suche as is deuoured of wyld beasts, foules or catell.

G The sacrifices of the Sabbath & of the new moones. Whowse whiche dozes they make go in, or come out of the temple &c.

Hus sayeth the Lorde God: the doze of the ynnertier court towarde the East, shall be shut the. vi. worke dayes: but in the Sabbath and in the daye of the newe Moone, it shall be opened. The shall the prince come vnder the dooze porche, and stande styll without by the doze cheke. So the priestes shall offre vpon his burnt and healthofferynges. And he shall worshyp at the doze poste, and go his waye forth agayne: but the dooze shall no moze be shut tyl the euenyng.

On the same manner shall the people of the lande also do their worshipp before the Lorde, without this doze vpon the Sabbathes and newe Moones. B This is nowe the burntofferynge, that the prince shall byngge vnto the Lorde vpon the Sabbath: fyre lambes without blemyshe, and a ram without blemyshe, and an Ephah for a meatofferyng, with the ram. the prynce cometh, he shall go vnder the doze porche, and euen there departe forth agayne. But when the people of the lande come before the Lorde in the hye solempne feast, as manye as come in by the north doze to do worshyp, shal go out agayne at the south doze. And they that come in at the south doze, shal go forth agayne at the north doze.

There shall none go oute at the dooze where he came in, but shall go forth ryghte ouer on the other syde, and the prynce shall go in and oute amonge

D Upon the solempne and hye feast dayes, this shalbe the meatofferyng: An Epha to a bullock and an Epha to a ram, and to the lambes: as manye as he wyl, but euer an Hin of oyle to an Ea burnt offering or an health offering wyth a frewyl vnto the LORD, the East dooze shall be opened vnto hym, that he maye do wyth hys burnt and health offeringes, as he doeth vpon the Sabboth, and when he goeth forth, the dooze shall be shutte after hym agayne, he shall daylye byringe vnto the Lorde a lambe of a yere olde wythoute ble-mythe for a burnt offering: this shal he do euery moynynge. And for a meatof-Efering he shall geue the lyxt part of an Epha, and the thyrde part of an Hin of oyle (to myngle with the cakes) euery mournynge. Yea, this shal be a daylye meatofferyng vnto the Lord, for an euerlastyng ordynauce: and thus shal y lambe be the meatofferyng and oyle be geuen euery moynynge, for a daylye burnt offeringe.

Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde God: If the prynce geue a gyft vnto a-nye of hys sonnes, then shall it be hys sonnes heritage perpetual, that he may posseste it. But yf he wyl geue one of hys seruantes some of his heritage, it shal be hys to the * free yere, and then to retorne agayne vnto y prynce: If for his heritage shalbe his sonnes only. * The prynce shall take none of y peoples enheritaunce, nor put theym from their possession: but to his owne sonnes shall he geue his possession, that my people be not scattered abroad, but that eue-ry man may haue his owne.

4. 13. 23. 24. 25

And he brought me thowme the entraunce at the syde of the doze to y hasbitacion of the Sanctuary, that belongeth to the Pryestes, and stode toward the north, & beholde, there was a place vpon the West syde, then sayde he vnto me: This is the place, where the priestes shall dight the trespace and synof-ferynges, and bake the meatofferynges:
that they nede not beare theym into the outwarde courte, and so to vnhalowe the people. So he brought me into the vntemost court, round about al the. iiii. corners. Beholde, in euery corner of the fore courte, there was yet a lytle courte. Yea, in all the foure corners of the court, there was made a lytle court of forty cubytes long, and thyrty cu-bites brode: these foure lytle courtes were of one lyke measure, and there wēt a rygge wall rounde aboute theym all foure, vnder the which there were hear-thes made rounde aboute. Then sayde he vnto me: This is the kechyn, where the mynisters of the house shall dight the dayne offeringes of the people.

the postes of the house eastwarde (for the house stode toward the East) that ranne down vpon the ryght syde of the forth the water vpon the ryght syde.

he brought me thorow the water, euen to the ankles: so he measured yet a thousande, and brought me thorow the water agayne vnto the knees: yet measured he a thousand, and brought me tho-row the water vnto the loynes. After this he measured a thousande agayne, then was it such a ryuer, that I might not wade thorowe it: The water was so depe, that it was nedefull to haue swymmed, for it myght not haue be waded ouer. And he sayed vnto me: haste thou selfe this, O thou sonne of man: & with that, he brought me to the ryuer bancke agayne.

Now when I came there, there stode many trees vpon eyther syde of the ryuer banke. Then said he vnto me: This water that floweth out toward * p east, and runneth down into the playne feld, commeth into the sea: and from the sea, it runneth out, and maketh the waters whole. Yea, all that lyue and moue, wherunto this ryuer commeth, shal re-couer. And where thys water cometh, there shall be muche fylsh. For all that commeth to thys water, shall be lustye and whole. By this ryuer shall the fyschers stande from Engaddi vnto En Eglaim, and there spredde out their nettes: for there shall be greate heapes of fylsh, lyke as in the mayne sea. As for his clay & pytt, they shal not be whole, for why, it shalbe occupied for salt.

By this ryuer vpon both the sydes of the thore, there shall grow all maner of frutefull trees, * whose leaues shall not fall of, neyther shall their frute peryshe: but euer be rypp at theyr monethes, for their water runneth oute of their Sanctury. His frute is good to eate, and hys leafe profitable for medyccyne. Thus sayeth the Lord GOD: Let this be the border, wherein ye shall deuyde the land vnto the .xii. trybes of Israell, wyth the lyne. Parte it indyfe-rently vnto one as vnto another: * of the whiche land I swore vnto your fathers, that it shoulde fall to your enhe-ritance.

This is the border of the lande vpon the northsyde, from the mayne sea, as me go to Sadada: namely Hemath, Berotha, Sabatim: from the borders of Damascus & Hemath vnto Hazat

Tichon, & that lyeth vpon the coastes of Hauera. Thus p borders fro the sea forth, shall be Hazat Euan, the border of Damascus the North, and the borders of Hemath: that is p North part.

The east syde shall ye measure from Haueran and Damascus, from Gilead and the lande of Israell by Iordane & so forth, from the sea coast, that lyeth eastwarde: and this is the east part.

The southsyde is, fro Thamar forth to the * waters of Stryfe vnto Cedec, the ryuer, to the mayne sea: and that is the south part.

The west part: namely the great sea from the borders therof, tyl a ma come

& deuide it to be an herytage for you, & you, & beget children. For ye shall take the among the children of Israell, lyke as though they were of your own hou-

The booke of the prophete Daniel.

The fyrst Chapter.

The prophete sheweth the captiuitie of Jehoakim kyng of Iuda. Of þe sonnes þe were in captiuite, the kyng commaundeth to chose which of the shoulde be taught the lernynge & language of the Chaldees. They are allowed the kynges fedynge. Danuell absteyneth fro the meate of the kyng of Babylon. The science and instruction of these children.

4. 12. 24. a
11. par. 36. c

In the thyrd yere of the raigne of Jehoakim kyng of Iuda, came Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon vnto Ierusalē, and beseged it: and þe Lord deliuered Jehoakim the kyng of Iuda into his hande, with certayne ornamētes of þe house of God, whiche he caried away vnto the lande of Sennar, to the house of his god, and there he brought the into his gods treasury. And þe kyng spake vnto Alphanaz the chiefe chamberlayne, þe he shoulde bring him certayne of the children of Israell, that were come of the kynges seide, and of prynces, yong spryngaldes without any blemishe, but fayre and wel fauoured, instructe in all wysdome, conning and vnderstanding: whiche were able to stande in the kynges palace, to reade and to learne for to speake Chaldeish.

Unto these the kyng appoynted a certayne porcyon of hys owne meate, & of the wyne, which he dranke himselfe, so to nurysh the ym thre yere: that as warde they myght stande before the kyng. Amonge these were now certayne of the children of Iuda: namelye Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Vnto these the chiefe chamberlaine gaue other names, and called Daniel, Balthasar: Ananias, Sydrach: Misael, Misach: and Azarias, Abednago. But Daniel was at a poynt wyth hym selfe, that he would not be defiled thowhe the kynges meate, nor the wyne which he droncke. And this he despyed of the chiefe chamberlayne, lest he shoulde despyle hym self. So God gaue Daniel fauour and grace before the chiefe chamberlayne, that he sayde vnto him: I am afrayed of my lord the kyng, whiche hath appoynted you youre meate and dryncke: lest he spy your faces to be worse lykynge then the other spryngaldes of youre age, and so ye shall make me lose my head vnto the kyng.

Then Daniel answered Belassar, whom the chiefe chamberlayne had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael and Azarias, & sayde: Proue but ten dayes with thy seruantes, and let vs haue potage to eate, and water to dryncke: then loke vpon our faces, and theyr yere of the kynges meate. And as thou seest, so deale with thy seruantes. So he consented to them in this matter, and proued them. x. daies. And after the ten dayes, their faces were better lykynge and fatter, then all the yonge spryngaldes, which ate of the kynges meate.

Thus Belassar toke awaye theyr meate and wyne, and gaue the potage therfore. God gaue now these foure spryngaldes connyng and lernynge in all scripture and wysdome: but vnto Daniel specialllye, he gaue vnderstandynge of all visions and dreames.

Nowe when the tyme was expyred, that the kyng had appoynted to byrge in these yong spryngaldes vnto hym: the chiefe chamberlayne brought them before Nabuchodonosor, and the kyng communed with them. But amonge theym all were founde none suche as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Therfore stode they before the kyng, whiche in all wysdome and matters of vnderstandynge, that he enquired of them, found them ten tymes better, then all

Then the kynge commaunded to cal together al the soothsayers, charmers, witches and Caldees, for to shewe the kynge his dreame. So they came, and stood before the kyng. And the kyng sayde vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my spirite was so troubled therewith, that I haue clene forgotten, what I dreamed. Upon this the Caldees answered the kynge in the Syrians speache: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Shew thy seruantes the dreame, and we shall shewe the, what it meaneth. The kyng gaue the Caldees theyr aunswere, and sayde: It is gone fro me. If ye wyl not make me vnderstande the dreame with the interpretacyon therof, ye shall dye, and your houses shalbe pryed. But if ye tell me the dreame and the meanynge therof, ye shall haue of me gyftes, rewardes and great honoure: on lyf, shew me the dreame and the signyfycacion of it. They answered agayne, and sayde: the kynge must shew his seruantes the dreame, and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the kynge answered, sayinge: I perceaue of a truth, that ye do but prolong the time: for so muche as ye se, that the thyng is gone fro me. Therefore if ye wyl not tell me the dreame, ye shall al haue one iudgemente. But ye sayne and dyssemble with bayne wordes, whiche ye speake before me, to put of the tyme. Therefore tell me the dreame, and so shall I know, if ye canne shewe me, what it meaneth. Upon this, the Caldees gaue aunswere before the kynge, and sayde: there is no man vpon earth, that can tel the thyng, which the kynge speaketh of: yea, there is neyther kynge, prince nor Lord, that euer asked such thinges at a soothsayer, charmer or Caldeer: for it is a verye harde matter that the kynge requyrez. Nether is there any, that can certyfy the kynge therof, excepte the goddes: whose dwelling is not among the creatures.

For the whiche cause the kynge was wrothe with greate indignacion, and commaunded to destroye all the wyse men at Babylon: and the proclamacion wente forth, that the wyse men shoulde be slayne. They sought also to slay Daniell with his companions. Then Daniell enquired Arioch the kynges steward, of the iudgemente and sentence, & was gone forth the alreedy to kyl such as were wise at Babilon. He answered and sayde vnto Arioch beinge then the kynges debitor: Why hath the kynge proclaimed so cruell a sentence? So Arioch tolde Danyell the matter. Upon this, went Daniel vp, and despyred the king, that he myghte haue leysoure, to shewe the kynge the interpretacyon: and then came he home agayne and shewed the thing vnto Ananias, Misael and Azarias his companions: that they shoulde beseeche the God of heauen for grace in this secreete, that Daniel & his felowes with other suche as were wise in Babilon, perished not. Then was the mysterie shewed vnto Daniel in a vision by nyghte. And Daniel praysted the God of heauen. Daniel also cryed loude, and sayde: O that the name of God myghte be praised for euer & euer, for wisdom and strengthe are his owne: he chaungeth the tymes and ages: he putteth downe kynges, he setteth vp kynges: he geueth wisdom vnto the wyse, and vnderstandynge to those that vnderstande, he openeth the depe secretes: he knoweth the thinge that lyeth in darcknesse, & for the lyght dwelleth with him. Upon this wente Daniel in vnto Arioch, whome the kinge had ordeyned to destroye the wise at Babilon: he went vnto him, and sayde: destroye not suche as are wise in Babilon, but bringe me in vnto the kyng, and I shall shew the kyng the interpretacion. Then Arioch brought Daniel in to the kyng in al the haste, and sayde vnto him: I haue founde a man amonge the prisoners of Iuda, that shall shewe the kyng the interpretacion. Then answered the kyng, and sayde vnto Daniel, whose name was Balthasar: Art thou he, that canst shew me the dreame, whiche I haue sene, and the interpretacion therof? Daniel answered the kyng to his face, and sayd: As for this secreete, for the whiche the kyng maketh inquisition: it is nether the wise, the sorcerer, the charmer nor the deuell contiter, that can certifie the kinge of it: * Onely God in heauen can open secretes, and he it is, that sheweth the kyng Nabuchodonosor, what is for to come in the latter dayes.

The dreame, and that which thou hast sene in thyne head vpon thy bed, is this: O kyng, thou dydest caste in thy mynde, what shoulde come hereafter: So he that is the opener of mysteries, telleth thee, what is for to come. As for me, this secret is not shewed me, for any wisdom that I haue, more then anye other lyuyng: but onely that I myghte shewe the kyng the interpretacion, and that he myghte knowe the thoughtes of his owne hearte. the debytes and shreues, with all the rulers of the lande: that they myght come

Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.
So the dukes, lordes and nobles, the Nowe when they stode before the Im-

the bedel cried oute with al hys mighte,

O ye people, kynnedes and tinges, to you bee it sayde: that when ye heare the not downe and boweth him selfe, shal e-al kinde of Melody: then all the people, kynnedes and nations fell downe, and bowed them selues vnto the golden Im-

Nowe were there certayne menne of accused the Jewes, and sayde vnto the kynge Nabuchodonosor: O king, God saue thy life for euer. Thou beynge king

These men (O kynge) regarde not thy comaundement, yea, they wil not serue

Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell were broughte before the kynge. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them, and sayde: what? O Sidrach Misach and which I haue made. But yf ye worship it not, ye shall be caste immediatlye in to an hote burninge ouen. Let se, what God is there, that may deliuer you out of my handes: Sydrach, Misach and Abednago aunswered the kynge, and sayde: O Nabuchodonosor, we oughte not to consent vnto the in this matter, for why: our God whome we serue, is able to kepe vs from the hote burninge ouen (O kinge) and can right well deliuer vs out of thy handes. And thoughe he wyl not, yet shalt thou knowe (O kinge) that we wyl not serue thy gods, nor do reuerence to y Image, which thou haste set vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor full of indignacion, so that the countenance of his face chaunged vpon Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. Therfore he charged and commaunded, that the ouen should be made seuen tymes, hotter, then it was wont to be: and spake vnto the strongest worthies that were in his hoste for to binde Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, and to caste them in to the hote burnynge ouen.

So these men were bounde in their cottes, hosen, shues, wyth their other garments, and caste in to the hote burnynge ouen: for the kynges commaundement was so straye, and the ouen was exceedinge hote. As for the men that put in Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, the flame of the fyre destroyed them. And these thre men Sydrach, Misach and Abednago fell downe in the hote burnynge ouen, beinge faste bounde. Then Nabuchodonosor the kyng marueled, and stode vp in all haste: he spake vnto his counsell and sayde: dyd not ye caste these thre men bounde into fyre? They answered, and sayde vnto the kyng: Yea, O kinge. He answered and sayde: lo for all that, yet do I se foure men goynge lowse in the myddest of the fyre, and nothyng corrupte: and the fourth is lyke an angell to loke vpon. Upon this wente Nabuchodonosor vnto the mouth of the hote burnynge ouen: he spake also, and sayde: O Sydrach Misach and Abednago, ye seruantes of the hye God: go forth, and come hyther. And so Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago wente oute of the fyre. Then the dukes lordes and nobles, and the kynges counsell came together to se these men, vpon whome the fyre had no maner of power in theyr bodyes: In so much that the very hearte of their heade was not burnt, and their clothes vunchaunged: Yea, there was no smell of fyre felt vpon them.

Then spake Nabuchodonosor, and sayde: Blessed bee the God of Sydrach, Misach and Abednago: whiche hath sente his angell, and defended his seruantes, that put theyr truste in hym: that haue altered the kynges commaundemente: and ieoperd theyr bodies ther vpon: rather then they woulde serue or worshyppe anye other God, excepte theyr owne God only. Therefore I wyl and commaunde, that all people, kynredes and tungen, whiche speake anye blasphemie agaynste the God of Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago, shall die, and theyr houses shall be prised: Because ther is no God that may saue, as this. So the kinge promoted Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, in the lande of Babylon.

O howe greate are his tokens, and howe myghty are his wonders: *Hys kyngdome is an euerlastynge kyngdome, and his power lasteth for euer and euer.

I Nabuchodonosor beyng at rest in myne house, and flopyng in my palace, sawe a dreame, whiche made me afraied: and the thoughtes that I hadde vpon my bed, with the visions of mine heade, troubled me. *Then sent I oute a comynssyon, that all they which were of wysdome at Babylon shoulde be broughte before me, to tell me the interpretation of the dreame. So there came the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees and counters of deuils to whome I tolde the dreame, but what it betokned, they coulde not shewe me: tyl at the last, ther came one Daniel (otherwise called Balthasar, accorpyng to the name of my God) whiche hath the spirite of the holy goddes, in him: to whome I tolde the dreame, sayinge: O Balthasar, p prince of Southesapars: for so muche as I knowe that thou haste the spirite of the holpe Gods & no secret is hyd from the: tell me therfore, what the vylion of my dreame (that I haue sene) may sygnifie. I sawe a vylion in my heade vpon my bed: and beholde, there stode a tre vpon the ground, which was very hie, greate and myghtye: the height reached vnto the heauen, and the bredth extended to al the endes of the earth: his leaues wer sayre, he had very muche frute, so that euerie manne hadde ynoughe to eate therein.

That is,
an Angel after the Hebrew.

The bestes of the felde had shadowes vnder it, and the foules of the ayre dwelt in the bowes therof. Shortly, all creatures fed of it. I sawe in my heade a vylion vpon my bedde: and beholde, a watcher came downe from heauen, & cryed myghtely, sayinge. Hewe downe the tre, breake of his braunches, shake of his leaues, & scatce his frute abroad: that all the bestes maye gette them a waye frome vnder him, and the foules fro his braunches. Neuertheles leaue the grounde of hys roote styll in the earth, and bynde hym vpon the playne felde, with cheynes of yron and stele. Wyth the dew of heauen shal he be wet, and he shal haue his parte in the herbes of the grounde with other wylde bestes.

That mans hearte of his shalbe taken from him, and a bestes hearte shal be geuen him, tyll seuen yeaeres be come and gone vpon hym. This erande of the watcher, is a comaundement grounded and sought oute in the counsell of him, that is most holpe: to learne menne for to vnderstande, that the hyst hathe power ouer the kingdomes of men, and geueth them, to whome it lyketh hym, and bringeth the very oute castes of me ouer them. Thys is the dreame, that I kynge Nabuchodonosor haue sene. Therfore O Balthasar, tell thou me, what it signifieth: for so muche as al the wyse men of my kyngdome are not able to shewe me, what it meaneth. But thou canste do it, for the spirite of the holpe Goddes is in the.

Then Daniel (whose name was Balthasar) helde his peace by the space of an houre and his thoughtes troubled hym. So the kynge spake, and sayde: O Balthasar, let nether the dreame nor the interpretacion therof feare the. Balthasar answered, sayinge: O my Lorde, this dreame happen to thyne enemyes, and the interpretacyon to thyne aduersaries. As for the tree that thou sawest whiche was so greate and myghtye, whose heygthe reached vnto the heauen, and hys breadthe into all the worlde: whose leaues were sayre, and the frute muche: vnder the whiche the bestes of the felde had theryn habytacion, and hypon whose braunches the foules of the ayre dyd lyt.

Euen thou (O king) art y tre, great and stronge. Thy greatnesse increaseth, and reacheth vnto the heauen, so dothe thy power to the endes of the earth. But where as the kynge saw a watcher euen an holy aungell, that came downe from heauen, and sayde: hewe downe the tre, and destroye it: yet leaue the ground of the roote in the earth: and bynde hym vpon the playne felde with cheynes of yron and stele: He shal bee wete wyth the dew of heauen, and his parte shal be with the bestes of the felde, tyll seuen yeaeres be come and gone vpon him: Thys (O kynge) is the interpretacyon, yea, it is the verpe deuyce of him, that is hyst of all, and it toucheth my lorde the kynge.

Thou shalte be caste out fro men, and thy dwelling shalbe with the bestes of the felde: with grasse shalt thou be fed lyke an oxe. Thou must be wet with the dew of the heauen: yea, seuen yeaeres shal come, and goo vpon the, tyll thou knowe, that the hyst hathe power vpon the kyngdomes of men, and geueth them to whome he lyst. Moreover, wher as it was sayde, that the roote of the tre shoulde bee leste styll in the grounde: it betokeneth, that thy kyngdome shal remaine whole vnto the, after thou hast lerned to know, that the power cometh from heauen. Wherefore, O kynge, be

*and thine offēces with mercy to poore people: for such thynges shal prolonge thy peace. All these thynges touche the kyng Nabuchodonosor.

I So after. xii. Monethes, the kyng walked vp and downe in the palace of the kyngdome of Babylon, and sayde:
This is y<sup>e</sup> great cyty of Babilon, which I my selfe (with my power & strengthe) haue made a kynges courte, for the honour of my magestye. While these wodes were yet in the kynges mouth, there fel a voyce from heauen, saying: O king Nabuchodonosor, to thee be it spoken:
Thy kyngdome shal departe from the,
thou shalt be caste oute of mens com-panye: thy dwellynge shalbe with the beastes of the felde, so that thou shalt eate grasse lyke as an oxe, till seuen yea-res be come and gone ouer the: euen vntyll thou knowest, that the best hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, & that he maye geue them, vnto whome it pleaseth hym. The very same houre was this matter fulfilled vpon Nabuchodonosor: so that he was cast out of men-nes company, and ate grasse like an oxe.
his body was wet with the dew of heauen, tyll his heetes were as greate as Eagles fethers, and his nailles like byr-des clawes.

E When this tyme was past, I Nabu-chodonosor lyfte op myne eyes vnto heauen, and myne vnderstandyng was restored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thanckes vnto the hyghest. I magnifyed and prayled hym that lyueth for euer more, * whose power endureth alwaye, and his kyngdome from one generacyon to an other: in comparision of whome al they that dwell vpon the earth, are to be reputed as nothyng.

He handleth accordyng to his wil, among the powers of heauen and among the inhabitours of the earth: and there is none that maye resyste hys hande, or say: what doest thou? * At the same time was myne vnderstandyng geuen me agayne, and I was restored to the honour of my kyngdome, to my dygnite, and to myne owne shappe agayne. My greate estates and Princes fought vnto me, and I was sette in my kyng-

dome agayne, so that I had yet greater worthyppe.

Then dyd I Nabuchodonosor, loue, magnifye and prayse the kyng of heauen: for all his workes are true, and hys wayes ryghte. As for those that go on proude, he is able to bynge them downe.

The. v. Chapter.

As althazar kyng of Babylon, abusyng the vessels of the temple, seyth an hande wytyng on the wall. The forshapers called of the kyng, can not expounde y<sup>e</sup> wytyng Daniel is called, whiche readeth it, and interpre-teth it also. Balthazar beynge slayne, Darius succeedeth in hys rowme.

Yng Balthazar made a greate banckete to hys thousande Lordes: with al these thousand he made greate chere; and when he was droncke wth wine, he commaunded to bynge him the golden and siluer vessels, * which his father Nabuchodonosor had taken out of the temple at Jerusalem: that the king and hys lordes with his quene and concu-bynes myght drynke thereout.

So they broughte the golden vessel, that was taken out of the temple of the Lordes house at Jerusalem. Then the kyng and his lordes with his quene & concubynes droncke out of them. They droncke wyne, and prayled theyy idols of golde, syluer, copper, yron, wood and stone.

In the very same houre there appeared fingers, as it had bene of a mā's hande wytyng, right ouer agaynst the candelstycke vpon the playne wal in the kynges palace: and the kyng sawe the palme of the hande that wrote. * Then chaunged the kyng his countenance, and hys thoughtes troubled hym, so that the foyntes of hys body shoke, and hys knees smote one agaynst the other.
* Wherefore the kyng cryed myghtely, that they shoulde bynge hym the cha-mers, Caldees and confuters of de-uils. The kyng spake also to the wyse men of Babylon, and sayde: who so can reade thys wytyng, and shewe me the playne meanyng therof: shalbe clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde aboute his necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kyngdome.

Vpon thys, came al the kynges wyse men: but they coulde neyther reade the wyrtynge nor shewe the kynge. what it signified. Then was the kynge sore a-strayed in so muche, that hys coloure chaunged, and his lordes wer sore vexed. So by reason of thys matter, that

C had happened to the kyng & his lordes, the quene wente vp herselfe into y<sup>e</sup> ban-cket house and spake vnto the kinge, sayinge: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for e-uer: Let not the thoughtes trouble the,
and let not thy countenaunce be chaunged. For why: there is a manne in thy kyngdome, that hath the spirit of y<sup>e</sup> holy goddess within him, as it was sene in thy fathers dayes. He hath the vnderstandyng and wysdome lyke the gods. Yea, the kynge Nabuchodonosor thy father made this man chefe of the soothsayers, charmers, Caldees & deuell counters:
because that suche an aboundaunt spi-rite, knowledge and wysdome (to expounde dreames, to open secretes, and to declare harde dowtes) was founde in him: yea, euen in Daniel, whome the king named Balthazar. Let this same Daniel be sente for, and he shall tel, what it meaneth.

Then was Daniel broughte before y<sup>e</sup> king. So the kyng spake vnto Daniel, and sayd: arte thou that Daniel, one of the prisoners of Iuda, whome my father the kynge broughte out of Jewry?
I haue hearde speake of thee, that thou haste the spirit of the holpe god-des, experience and vnderstandyng, and that there hath bene greates wysdome founde in the. Nowe haue there bene
D broughte me wise and connyng charmers, to reade this wyrtynge, and to shewe me the meanyng therof: But they coude not tell me, what thys matter signified. Then heard I saye, that thou canste expounde darcke thynges, and declare harde dowtes. Well than, yf thou canste reade this wyrtynge, and shewe me the meanynge therof: thou shalt be clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of gold about thy necke, and rule the thirde parte of my kyngdome.

E Daniel answered, and sayde before the kynge: * As for thy rewardes, kepe them to thy self, or geue thy ryght gyfres to another: yet not the lesse, I will rede the wyrtynge vnto the kynge, and shew him the interpretaciō therof. * O king,

God the hyst gaue vnto Nabuchodo-nosor thy father, the dygnitie of a king, with worshyppe and honour: so that all people, kynteddes and tinges stode in awe and feare of hym, by reason of the hie estate, that he had lent hi. For why, he slewe whome he woulde: he smote, whom it pleased hym. Agayne: whome he woulde, he set vp: and whome he lyst, he put downe. * But because his herte was so proude, & his stomack set so fast vnto wylfulnesse: he was deposed from his kyngly trone, and his maiesty was taken from hym. He was shot oute from amonge men, his heart was lyke a beastes hearte, and hys dwelling was with the wylde asses: he was fayne to eate grasse lyke an oxe, and hys body was wet with the dew of the heauen: tyll he knew, that the hiest had power vpon the kyngdomes of menne, and setteth ouer them, whom he lyst.

Dan. iii. d.

And thou his sonne (O Balthazar) for all thys, haste not submytted thyne hearte, thoughe thou knewest all these thynges: but hast magnifyed thy selfe aboue the Lorde of heauen, so that the vessels of hys house were broughte before the: that thou, and thy lordes, wyth thy quene & concubines, myght drinke wyne thereout: And hast prayd, the ydoles of syluer and golde, copper and y-ron, of wode and stone: As for the god, in whose hande conspyketh thy brette and all thy wayes: thou haste not loued hym.

Isa. xlii. c.

G Therefore is the palme of thys hand sente hyther from hym, to token vp thys wyrtynge. And thys is the scripture, that is wyrtten vp: Mene, Thetel, Phares.
Nowe the interpretaciō of the thyng is thys: Mene, God hath nombred the kyngdome, and brought it to an ende: Thetel, thou arte weyed in the balaunce, and art founde to lyghte: Phares, thy kyngdome is delt in partes, and geuen to the Medes and Perses.

Then commaunded Balthazar, to cloth Daniel with purple, to hange a cheyne of golde aboute hys necke, and to make a proclamacyon concernynge hym: that he should be the ruler of the

The. vi. Chapter.

Daniell is made ruler ouer the lordes. The imagination of an acte against Daniel. The proclamation of the acte, wherof Daniel is accused vnto the kyng as a traungressour. He is put in to a denne of Lyons by the commaundement of the kyng. He is deliuered by sayth in god. Daniels accusars are put vnto the Lyons to be toren in sonder. Darius by the proclamation of a decree, magnifyeth the God of Daniel.

It pleased Darius to sette ouer this kyngdome an. C. x. Lordes, whiche shoulde be in all his kyngdome aboute. Aboue these he sette thre Princes ( of whome Daniell was one ) that the lordes myghte geue accounts vnto them, and the kyng to be vndiseased.

But Daniel excreaded all these Princes and lordes, for the spirite of God was plentuous in hym: so that the kyng was mynded to set him ouer the whole realme. Wherefore the Princes and Lordes soughte, to pycke out in Daniel some quarel againste the kyngdome, yet could they fynde none occasyon nor faute vpon hym. For why he was so saythfull, that there was no blame nor dyshonesty founde in him.

Then sayde these men: we wyll get no quarell agaynst this Daniel, except it bee in the lawe of his God. Upon this, wente the princes and lordes together vnto the kyng, and sayde thus vnto him: kinge Darius God saue thy lyfe for euer. All the great estates of the realme: as the Princes, Dukes, Senators and Judges, are determined to put out a commaundement of the kyng, and to make a sure statute: namely, that who so despyeth any petition, eyther of anye god or man ( within this. xxx. dayes ) excepte it be only of the, O king: the same person may be cast into the Lyons denne. Wherefore, O kyng, confirme thou this statute, and make a wytyng: that the thyng whiche the Medes and Perses haue ordered be not altered nor broken.

So Darius made the wytyng, and confirmed it. Now whē Daniel vnderstode that the wytyng was made, he wente into his house: and the windowes of his hall towarde Jerusalem stode open. There kneeled he downe vpon his knees, thre tymes a daye: there he made his petition, and prayled his God, lyke as his maner was to do afore tyme.

Then these menne made search, and founde Daniel making his petycyon, & prayinge vnto his God. So they came to the kyng, and spake before him concerning his commaundement, saying: O kyng, haste thou not subscribed the statute, that within. xxx. dayes who so requirerh his petition of anye god or man but only of thy selfe, O kyng: he shalbe cast into the den of y lions. The kyng answered, and sayde: yea, it is true. It muste be as a lawe of the Medes and Perses, that maye not be broken.

Then answered they, and sayde vnto the kyng: Daniell one of the prysoners of Iuda O kyng, regardeth neither the nor thy statute, that thou hast made, but maketh his petition thre tymes a daye. When the king heard these wordes, he was sore greued, and would haue excused Daniel, to deliuer hym, & put of the matter, vnto y Sunne wente downe, to the intent that he myght saue hym.

These men perceauynge the kinges mynde, sayde vnto him: knowe this ( O kyng ) that the lawe of the Medes and Perses is, that the commaundement & statute which the king maketh, may not be altered. * Then the kyng bad them byynge Daniel, and they caste him in to the Lyons denne.

The kyng also spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: thy God, whome thou alway seruest, euen he shall defende the. And there was broughte a stone, and layed vpon the hole of the denne: this the kyng sealed with his owne rynge, and with the spgnet of his prynces: that the kinges commaundement concernynge Daniel, should not be broken.

So the kyng wente into his palace, and kept him sober al night, so that there was no table spred before hym, neither coulde he take any slepe. But by tyme in the mornyng at the bryake of y daye, the kyng arose, and wente in all hast vnto the denne of the Lyons.

Now as he came nye vnto the denne, he cried with a piteous voyce vnto Daniel: yea, the kyng spake, and sayde vnto

unto Daniel: O Daniel, thou seruaunt of the lyving God, is not thy God (whō thou alwaye seruest) able to deliuer the from the Lyons? Daniel sayd vnto the kynge: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. * My God hath sent his angel, & whiche hath shut the Lyons moun-thes, so that they might not hurte me.
For why? myne vngyltynesse is founde out befoze him. And as for the, O king, I neuer offended the.

Then was the kynge exceadyng glade, and commaunded to take Daniel out of the denne. So Daniel was broughte out of the denne, and no maner of hurte was founde vpon him. For he put his truste in his God. And as for those men whiche had accused Daniel, the kynge commaunded to bring them, and to caste them in the Lyons denne:
them, their chyldren and theyr wyues.

* So the Lyons had the mastery of the,
and brake all their bones asunder, or e-uer they came at the grounde.

* After this, wrote kynge Darius vnto al people kynteddes, and tinges, that dwelte in all landes: peace be multiplied with you: My commaundement is, in all my dominyon and kyngdome, that men feare & stande in awe of Daniels God.

* For he is the lyving God, whiche abydeth euer: his kyngdome shall not fayle, and his power is euerlastyng.

* It is he that delpuereth, and saue-th: he doth wōders and maruelous wor-kes, in heauē and in earth: he hath preserued Daniel from the power of p̄ Lyons. This Daniel prospered in the reygne of Darius & Citrus of Persia.

The. vii. Chapter.

A vision of. iiii. beastes is shewed vnto Daniel.
The vision is interpreted of. iiii. kyngdomes of the worlde. Of the power and increase of Antychriste. Of the euerlastyng kyngdome of Christ.

In the fyrst yere of Balthazar kynge of Babylon, sawe Daniel a dreame, and a vy-sion was in his heade vpon his bedde. Whiche dreame he wrote, and the summe of the matter is this: Daniel spake, and sayd: I sawe in my vision by nyght, and beholde: p̄ foure wyndes of the heauen stroue vpon the sea, and foure great beastes came vp from the sea, oge vnylike another.

The fyrste was a * Lyon, and yet had he * Eagles wynges. I sawe, that his wynges were plucte from him, and he taken awaye from the carthe: * that he stode vpo his fete as a man, and that there was geuen him a mans hearte.

Beholde, the seconde beast was lyke a * Beer, and stode vpon the one syde. Amonge his teeth in his mouth he had. iiii. greate longe teeth, and it was sayde vnto hym: Arise, eate vp mouches fleshe. Then I looked, and beholde, there was another like vnto a Leopard: this had wynges as a foule, euen * foure vp-on the backe. This beast had foure hea-des, and there was power geuen hym.

After this I sawe in a vision by night, and beholde, the fourth beast was grymme and horrible, and maruelous stronge. It had greate yron teeth, it deu-oured and destroyed, and stamped the residue vnder his fete. It was farre vnylike the other beastes that were be-foze it: for it had * ten hornes, where of I toke good hede.

And beholde, there came vp amonge them, another lyke horne, befoze whome there were thre of p̄ first hornes pluckte awaye. Beholde, this horne had eyes lyke a mā, and a mouth speakyng presumptuous thynges. * I looked till the seates were prepared, and tyll the olde aged sat him downe. His clothynge was as whyte as snowe, and p̄ heetes of his heade lyke the pure woll. His trone was lyke the fyre flame, and his wheles as the burnyng fyre. There drew forth a fyre streame, and wente out from hym. * A thousande tymes a thousande serued him. x. M. tymes ten thousande stode befoze hym. The iud-gement was set, and the booke opened.
Then toke I hede there vnto, because of the voyce of p̄ proude wordes, which that horne spake. I behelde, tyll the beaste was slayne, and his bodye destroyed, * and geuen ouer to be brente in the fyre.

As for the power of the other beastes also it was taken awaye, but they lyues were prolonged for a tyme & season. I sawe in a vision by night, and beholde, * there came one in the cloudes of heauen lyke the sonne of a man, whiche wente vnto the olde aged,

Then gaue he him * power & dignitie regall, that all people, trybes & tinges shoulde serue him. * His power is an euertlasting power, whiche shall neuer be put downe: * and his kyngdome endureth vncorrupte. My hearte was vexed, and I Daniel had a troubled spirite within me, and the visions of my heade made me afraide: tyll I gat me vnto * one of them that stode by, to knowe the trueth, concernynge all these thynges. So he tolde me, and made me vnderstande the interpretacion of these thynges.

These foure greate beastes, are foure kynges whiche shall aryse out of the earth. These shall take in the kyngdome of the sainctes of the moste hyst, and possesse it styll more and more for a longe season. After this I requyred diligently to knowe the trueth, concernynge the fourthe beast, which was so farre vnylike the other beastes, & so horrible: whose teeth were of yron, and hys nayles of brasse: whiche deuoured and destroyed, and stamped the resydue vnder hys fete. I desyred also to knowe the trueth, as touchynge the * ten hornes that he had vpon his heade, and this other whiche came vp afterwarde, before whose face there fell downe thre: whiche horne had eyes and a mouthe that spake presumptuous thynges, and looked with a grimmer bysage then his felowes. I behelde, and the same horne made batayle agaynste the sainctes, yea, and gat the vycorie of them: vntyll y tyme that the olde aged came, that the iudgemente was geuen to the chiefeest saynctes: and tyll the tyme, that the saynctes had the kyngdome in possession. He gaue me this answere: That fourthe beast shall be the fourthe kyngdome vpon earth: it shall deuoure, treade downe, and destroye all other landes.

* The ten hornes, are ten kynges, that shall aryse out of that kyngdom, after whome there shall stande by another, which shall be greater then the fyrste. He shall subdue thre kynges, & shall speake wordes agaynste the hyst of al: he shall destroye the saynctes of the moste hyst, * and thyncke, that he maye chaunge tymes and lawes. They shall be geuen vnder his power, * vntyll a tyme, two tymes, and halfe a tyme.

But the iudgemente shall be kepte, so that his power shall be taken fro him, for he shall be destroyed, and peryshe at the laste. As for the kyngdome, power, and al myght that is vnder the heauen: it shall be geuen to the holy people of the moste hyst, * whose kyngedome is euertlasting, yea, all powers shall serue and obeye him. Thus farre extende y wordes. Neuerthelesse, I Daniel was so vexed in my thoughtes, that my countenance chaunged) * but the wordes I kepte styll in my herte.

The. viii. Chapter.

A byspon of a stryfe betwene a ramme & an he goate. The vnderstandynge of the vision is of the batel betwene the kynges of Persia and y kyng of the Greciens. Of the Hamellec kyng Antychriste.

In the thyrde yere of the raigne of kyng Balthazar, there appeared a visio vnto me Daniel, after that I had sene the * first. I sawe in a vision (and when I sawe it, I was at Susis in the chiefe cytie, whiche lyeth in the lande of Elam) and in the vision, me thoughte I was by the ryuer of Ulai.

Then I looked vp, and sawe: and beholde, there stode before the ryuer, a ramme, whiche had hornes: and these hornes were hys, but one was hyer then another, and the hyst came vp laste. I sawe that this ramme pushed with hys hornes, agaynste the west, agaynste the north, and agaynste the southe: so that no beastes myghte stande before hym, nor defende the from his power: but he dyd as him lysted, & waxed greatly. I toke hede vnto this, and then came there an he goate from the west ouer the whole earth, and touched not the grounde.

This goate had a maruelous goodly horne betwixte his eyes, and came vnto the rāme, y had the two hornes (whome I had sene afore by y riuer side) & ranne fearcelly vpon him w his myght. I saw him drawe nye vnto y rāme, being verye feerce vpon him: yea, he gaue him such a stroke, that he brake his two hornes: Nether had the ramme so much strenght as to stande before hym: but he cast him downe, trodde hym vnder his fete: & no ma was able to deliuer the ramme oute of his power.

The goate waxed excedynge great, and when he was at the strongest, hys greate horne was broken also. Then grewe there other foure such like in the steade, towarde the. iiii. wyndes of the heauen. * Yea, oute of one of the lesse of these hornes, there came vp yet another horne, which waxed maruelous greate; towarde the southe, towarde the east, and towarde the sayre pleasaunt lande. It grewe vp to the hooft of heauen, wherof it dyd caste some downe to the grounde, and of the starres also, & trode them vnder fete.

Yea, it grewe vp vnto the prynce of the hooft, from whome the daylye offeringe was taken, and the place of his Sanctuarie casten downe. And a certayne season was geue vnto it, against the daylye offeringe (because of wyckednesse) that it myght cast downe the veryte to the groude, and so to prospere in all thynges, that it wente aboute.

D Upon this I herde one of þe sayntes speakeynge, whiche saynte sayde vnto one that asked this question: Howe longe shall this vision of the daylye sacrifice and of the wastynge abhominacion endure: that the Sanctuarie and the power shal so be troden vnder fete. And he answered him: Vnto the eueninge and the moorninge, eue two thousande and thzee hundredeth dayes: then shall the Sanctuary be clesed againe.

Now when I Daniel had sene this vision, and soughte for the vnderstandynge of it: beholde, there stode before me a thyng like vnto a man. And I herde a mans voyce in the ryuer of Ulai, which cryed, and sayde: O Gabriel, make this man vnderstande the vision. So he came, and stode by me. But I was afrayed at his comynge, and fel downe vpon my face.

Then sayde he vnto me: O thou sonne of man, marcke well, for in þe laste tyme shall thys bysion be fulfilled.

Now as he was speakeynge vnto me, I waxed faynte, so that I suncke downe to the grounde. But he toke holde vpon me, and set me vp agayne, sayinge: Beholde, I wyll shewe the, what shall happen in the laste wrathe: for in the tyme appoynted it shalbe fulfilled.

The ramme whiche thou sawest with the two hornes, is the kinge of the Medes and Perses: but the goate is the kynge of Greke laude: the greates horne that stode betwyte his eyes, that is the principall kynge. But where as it brake, and foure other rose vp in the steade: it signifieth, þ out of this people shall stande by foure kyngdomes, but not so mightie as it.

After these kyngdomes (whyle þe bygodlinesse is a growynge) there shal arysen a kynge of an vnschamefast face, whiche shalbe wyse in darcke speake kynges.

He shalbe myghtye and stronge, but not in his owne strength. He shal destroye aboute measure, and all that he goeth about shal prospere: he shal slaye the stronge and holy people. And thorow his craftynes, falschod shal prospere in his hande, hys hearte shalbe proude, and manye one shall he put to death in his welchynesse. He shal stande by agaynst þe Prince of Princes, * but he shalbe destroyed without hande. And this bysion that is shewed vnto the, is as sure as the eueninge and the moorninge. * Therefore wyte thou by thys syghte, for it wylbe longe or it come to passe.

Upon this was I Daniel verie faynte, so that I laye sycke certen dayes: but when I rose vp, I went aboute the kynges busynesse, and marueled at the vision, neuerthelesse no man knewe of it.

The. x. Chapter.

There appeareth vnto Daniel a man clothed in lynes, whiche sheweth hym wherefore he is sente.

In the thyrde yere of kyng Cirus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniel (other-wyle called Balthasar) a matter, yea, a true matter, but it is yet a longe tyme vnto it. He vnderstode the matter well, and perceaued what the bysion was. At the same tyme, I Daniel mourned for the space of thre wekes, so that I had no luste to eate breade: as for fleshe and wyne there came none within my mouth: No, I did not ones anoynte my selfe, til the whole thre wekes were oute.

Upon the. xliiii. daye of the fyrste moneth, I was by the greate floude, called * Tigris: I lyfte vp myne eyes, and loked: and beholde, a man clothed in ly-nen, whose loynes were gyrded vp with fyne golde of Araby: hys body was lyke the Chrysolite stone, his face (to loke vp-on) was lyke lyghtenynge, hys eyes as the flame of fyre, his armes & fete were lyke fayre glysternynge metal, but the voyce of his wordes was lyke the voyce of a multitude. * I Daniel alone sawe this vision, the men that were with me, sawe it not: but a greate fearfulness fel vpon them, so that they fled awaye, and hyde them selues. I was lefte there my selfe alone, and sawe this greate bys-sion, so longe till there remayned no more strengthe within me: yea, I losse my coloure clene, I wasted awaye, and my strength was gone. Yet hearde I the voyce of hys wordes: and as soone as I hearde it, sayntnesse came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the grounde vpon my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, whiche set me vp vpon my knees and vpon the palmes of my hand-des, sayinge vnto me: * O Daniel, thou well beloued man: take good hede of the wordes, that I shall saye vnto thee, and stande ryght vp, for vnto the am I now sente.

And when he had sayde these wodes, I stode vp tremblyng. Then said he vnto me: feare not Daniel: for whysence the fyrste daye that thou set thyne hearte to vnderstande, and dydest chasten thy selfe before thy God: thy wordes haue bene hearde. And I had come vnto the, when thou begandest to speake had not the prynce ouer the kyngdom of the Perses withstande me. xxi. dayes.
But lo, * Michael one of the chiefe pry-nces, came to helpe me, hym haue I lefte by the kyng of Persia, and am come to shewe the, what shall happen vnto thy people in the latter dayes: for it wylbe longe yet or the bysion be fulfyllled.

Howe when he had spoken these wordes vnto me, I cast downe my heade to the grounde and helde my tunge.
Beholde, there touched my lippes one very lyke vnto a man. Then opened I my mouth, and sayde vnto hym, I stode before me: O my Lorde, my ioyntes are loosled in the vision, & there is no more strengthe within me: Howe maye my Lordes seruante then talke with my Lorde: seyng there is no strengthe in me, so that I cannot take my bzeath. Upon this there touched me agayne, one muche lyke a man, and * comforted me, sayinge:

sayinge : O thou man so well beloued, feare not: be contente, take a good heart vnto the, & be stronge. So when he had spoken vnto me, I recouered, and sayd: Speake on my Lorde, for thou haste refreshed me. Then sayd he: knowest thou wherfore I am come vnto thee: now wil I go agayne to fyghte with the prynce of the Perses. As soone as I go forthe, lo, the prynce of Greke lande shal come. Neuertheles, I wyl shew thee þe thyng, that is faste noted in þe scripture of trueth. And as for al yonder matters, there is none that helpeth me in the, but Michaell your prynce.

The .xi. Chapter.

In prophecye of the kynges of Persia. Of the kyngdome of Grece. Of the kyngdome of Egypte, and of the bondethereof, and of the battell with the kyngdome of Siria. Of the Jewes that spe vnto the kyng of Egypte, whome Antiochus the kyng of Siria persecuteth, whiche figureth vnto vs. Antichriste. The pryde of Antiochus.

And in the fyrste yere of Darius of Medea, I rode by him, to comforte him, and to strenghten him, and nowe wyl I shewe thee the trueth. Behold, there shal stande vp yet thre kynges in Persia, but the fourthe shalbe farre richer then they all. And when he is in the chetefest power of his riches, he shal prouoke euery man agaynst the realme of Grekelande. * Then shal there arys yet a myghtie kyng, that shal rule with greate dominion, and do what him list. * And as soone as hys kyngdome cometh vp, it shalbe destroyed, and deuoyded towarde the foure wyndes of the heauen. They that come after him, shal not haue suche power and dominion as he: but his kyngdom shalbe scatted, yea, euen amonge other then those. And the kyng of the southe shalbe myghtyer, then hys other prynces. Against hym there shal one make hym selfe stronge, and shal rule hys dominion with greate power.

But after certayne yeres they shalbe ioyned together, and þe kynges doughter of the southe shal come to the kyng of the North, for to make frendshipp, but she shal not optayne the power of that arme, nether shal she be able to endure thorow hys myghte: but she, and such as broughte her (yea, and he that begat her, and comforted her for hys tyme) shal be deliuered vp. Out of the braunches of her rote, there shal one stande vp in hys steade: which with power of armes shal go thorow the kynges lande of the north, and handle hym accordyng to his strength. As for their Idols & prynces, with their costlye Jewels of golde and syluer, he shal carie them away captiues into Egypte, and he shal preuaile agaynst the kyng of the north certayne yeres. And when he is come into the kynges realme of the southe, he shalbe fayne to turne agayne in to hys owne lande. Wherfore his sonnes shalbe dyspleased, & shal gather together a myghty greate hoooste of people: and one of them shal come, and go thorowelyke a water flowed: then shal he returne, and go forthe with despyng and boastynge vnto his owne lande.

Then the kyng of the south shal be angry, and shal come forthe to fight against the kyng of the north: yea, he shal bynge a great multitude of people together, and a greate heape shalbe geuen in to his hande: these shal he carie awaye with great pryde, for so much as he hath cast downe so many thousandes, neuertheles he shal not preuaile. For the kyng of the north shal gather (of the new) a greater heape of people then afore, & come forthe (after a certayne time and yeres) with a myghtie hoooste and excedyng greate good.

At the same tyme there shal many stande vp against the kyng of þe south, so that the wycked chyldren of thy people also shal exalte them selues (to fulfill the bysion) and then fall. So the kyng of the north shal come to laye sege, and to take the stronge fenced citises: And the power of them of the southe shal not be able to abyde hym, and the best mē of þe people shal not be so stronge, as to resist hym. Shortely, when he cometh, he shal handle hym as he list, and no man shalbe so hardye as to stāde against him. He shal stande in the pleasaunte countre, which thorow him shalbe destroyed. He shal set his face with al hys power to optayne his kyngedome, and to be lyke it. Yea, that shal he do, and geue hym vnto the doughters amonge women, to destroye him. But he shall sayle, neither shall he optayne his purpose. After this shall he set his face vnto the Isles, and take many of them. A pryncce shall stoppe hym, to do hym a shame, belyde the confusion that els shall come vnto him. Thus shall he tourne agayne to his owne lande, to trouble, and fall, and be no more founde: so he that came vpon hym and did hym violence, shall stande in his place, & haue a pleasaunte kyngedome: and after few dayes he shall be destroyed, & that nether in wrath, nor in battell. In his steade there shall aryse a byle person, not holden worthy of a kynges dygnytie: this shall come in craftely, and optayne the kyngedome with fayre wordes: he shall fyght against the armes of the mightie (and destroye them) yea, and against the pryncce of the couenaunte.

So after that he hath taken truce with him, he shall handle dysceatfullie, that he may get vp, and ouercome him with a smal flocke: & so with craftynesse to get him to the fattest place of his lande, and to deale otherwys, then ether his fathers or graundfathers dyd. For he shall destroye the thyng, that they had robbed and spoyled, yea, and all theyr substance: ymagynynge thoughtes agaynst the stronge holdes, and that for a tyme. His power and herte shall be stirred vp with a greate armie against the kyng of the south: where thorow the kyng of the southe shall be moued then vnto battell, with a great and myghtie hoost also. Neuerthelesse, he shall not be able to stande, for they shall conspyre agaynst him. Yea, they that eate of his meate, shall hurte him: so that his hoost shall fall, and manie be slayne downe.

These two kynges shall be mynded to do myschefe, and talke of dysceate at one table: but they shall not prospere: for why, the ende shall not come yet, vnto the tyme apoynted. * Then shall he go home agayne into his owne lande with great good, and set his heart agaynst the holy couenaunte, he shall be busy agaynst it, and then retorne home. At the tyme apoynted he shall come agayne, and go towarde the southe: So shall it happen otherwys then at the fyrste, yet ones agayne. And why, * the sheppes of Cyprius shall come vpon hym, that he maye be smytten and turne agayne: that he maye take indignacion agaynst the couenaunte of holynesse, to medle agaynst it. Yea, he shall turne hym, and drawe suche vnto hym, as leaue the holy couenaunte.

He shall set myghtie men to inhabytw the Sanctuary of strength, to put downe the daily offeringe, and to set vp the abhominable desolacion. And suche as breake the couenaunt shall he flatter with fayre wordes. But the people that wil know their God, shall haue the ouerhande and prospere. Those also that haue vnderstandynge among the people shall enfourme the multytude: and for a longe season, they shall be persecuted with swearde, with fyre, with captiuite and with the takynge away of theyr goodes. Nowe when they fall, they shall be set vp with a lytle helpe: but many shall cleue vnto them faynedlye.

Yea, some of those whiche haue vnderstandynge shall be persecuted also: that they maye be tryed, purifyed and clenched, tyl the tyme be oute: for there is yet another tyme appoynted. The kyng shall do what hym lyst, * he shall exalte and magnifye him selfe agaynst al, that is God. Yea, he shall speake maruelous thinges agaynst the God of al goddes, wherin he shall prospere, so longe tyl * the wrath be fulfilled, for the conclusion is deuyfled alreadye. He shall not regard the God of his fathers, but his luste shall be vpon women: Yea, he shall not care for any God, for he shall magnifye hym selfe aboue all. In his place shall he worshippe the myghtie Idols: and the God whome his fathers knewe not, shall he honoure with golde and siluer, with precious stones and pleasaunte Jewels.

This shall he do, sekyng helpe and succoure at his myghtie Idols & straunge Goddes. Suche as wyll receaue hym, and take him for God, he shall geue them greate worshippe and power: yea, and make them lordes of the multitude, and geue them the lande with rewardes. In the latter tyme shall the kyng of the southe stryue with him: and the kyng of the northe in lyke maner shall come agaynst hym with charrettes, horsemen and with a greate nauy of sheppes.

The .xii. Chapter.

The prophesie of the resurrection of the dead. The darknesse of the prophesie of Daniel.

The tyme wyll come also, that the greates prince * Michael, which standeth on thy peoples syde, shall aryse vp, for * there shall come a tyme of trouble, such as neuer was, sence there beganne to be any people, vnto that same tyme. Then shall thy people be deliuered, yea, all those that be founde wyrtten in þe boke, * Many of them that slepe in the duste of the earth, shall awake: some to the uerlastynge lyfe, some to perpetuall shame and reprofe. * The wyse (suche as haue taught other) shall glyster, as the shynnyng of heauen: and those that haue instructe the multitude vnto godslynnesse, shall be as the starrs, wylde
without ende.

And thou O Daniel, shut vp these wordes, and seale the boke tyll the laste tyme. Many shall go aboute here and there, & then shall knowledge increafe.
So I Daniel looked, and beholde, there stode other two: one vpon this shore of the water, the other vpon yonder side.
And one of them sayde vnto him, which was clothed in linnen, & stode aboue vpon the waters of the floude: howe long shall it be to the ende of these wonderous workes?

* Then herde I the man with the linen clothes, whiche stode aboue vpon the waters of the floude: when he helde vp his ryght and lefte hande vnto heauen, and swate by hym whiche lyueth for euer that * it shall tarpe for a tyme, two tymes and halfe a tyme: and when the power of the holy people is cleane scattered abroad, then shall all these thyn-ges be fulfilled.

I herde it well, but I vnderstode it not. Then sayde I: O my lord, what shall happen after that? He answered: Go thy way Daniel, for these wordes shall be closed vp and sealed, tyll the last tyme: and many shall be purged, clea-sed and tryed. But the vngodly shall lyue wyckedly, * and those wicked (as many of them as they be) shall haue no vnderstandynge. As for suche as haue vnderstandynge, they shall regarde it.
And from the tyme forth that the daylie offerynge shall be put downe and the abominable desolacion set vp, there shall be a thousande two hundred and
xx. dayes. Well is him, that wapyeth, and cometh to the thousande. iii. C.
and. xxxv. dayes. Go thou thy way now, tyll it be ended: take thy rest, and abyde in thy lot, til the dayes haue an ende.

The ende of the Prophecie of Daniel.

The boke of the prophet Oseas.

The fyrste Chapter.

The tyme wherein Oseas propheseth. Oseas by takynge an harlot to his wyfe, signifieth the Idolatry of the people. The destruction of the offsprynge of Iehu, and of the Israelites, is prophesied.

This is the worde of the Lorde, þe came vnto Oseas þe sone of Beery, * in þe dayes of Oseas, Joas thā, Achas & Jere-kiah kynges of Iu-
da: & in the tyme of Jeroboā þe sonne of Joas kyng of Israel.

Fyrste, when the Lorde spake vnto Oseas he sayde vnto him: * Go thy way, take an harlot to thy wyfe, and get chyliden by her: for the lande hath committed committed greate whordome agaynst the Lorde. So he went, and toke <sup>a</sup> Go-met the daughter of <sup>b</sup> Deblaim: which conceaued, and brought forth a sonne.

And the Lorde sayde vnto hym: call hys name <sup>c</sup> Istraell, for I wyll shorte-lye <sup>a</sup> auenge the bloude of <sup>d</sup> Istraell by on the house of Iehu, & wyl brynge the kyngdō of <sup>e</sup> house of Israel to an ende.
Then wyl I breake the bowe of Israel in the valley of Istraell.

She conceaued yet agayne, and bare a daughter. And he sayde vnto him: Call her name <sup>d</sup> Lozruhamah (that is, not optaynyng mercy) for <sup>e</sup> I wyll haue no pitie vpon the house of Israel, but forget them, and put them cleane out of remembraunce. <sup>a</sup> Neuerthelesse, I wyll haue mercy vpon the house of Juda, and wyl saue them, euen thorow the Lord their God. But I wyl not de-liuer them thorow any bowe, swearde, batell, horsen or horsmen.

Nowe when she had weaned Loruhamah, she conceaued agayne, and bare a sonne. Then sayde he: Call hys name <sup>c</sup> Loamy. For why? Ye are not my people, therfore wyl not I be you-res. And though the numbze of the children of Istraell be <sup>a</sup> as the sande of the sea, which can neither be measured nor tolde: Yet in the place where as it is sayde vnto them, <sup>b</sup> ye be not my people: Euen there shall it be thus reported of them: <sup>c</sup> They be the chyldzen of the luyng God. <sup>d</sup> Then shall the children of Juda and the chyldzen of Israell be gathered together agayne, and chose the selues one head, & then depart out of the lande: for great shalbe <sup>e</sup> day of Istraell.

The Notes.

a. That is, consumacion: because the kyngdome of Istraell and Juda shoulde shortlye be consumed.

b. That is, scaple of sygges: bycause of the great delectuousnesse and voluptuousnesse, that Juda and Istraell were in.

c. That is, the seade of god.

d. That is, hauinge no mercy.

e. That is, not my people.

The. ii. Chapter.

The people is called vnto repentaunce.

Tell youre brethren, that they are my people: And youre sistre, that they haue optayned mercy.

As for youre <sup>a</sup> mother, ye shall chide with her, and reprove her. <sup>b</sup> For she is not my wyfe, neither am I her husband, vnlesse she put away her whordome oute of my syghte, and her aduoutre from her breastes. If no I shall strippe her naked, and sette her, <sup>c</sup> euen as she came into the worlde: Yea, I shall laye her waste, and make her lyke a wyldernesse, and slaye her for thyrste. I shall haue no pytpe also vpon her chyldren, <sup>d</sup> for they be the chyldzen of forni-cacyon.

Their mother hath broken her wed-locke, and she that bare them, is <sup>e</sup> come to confusio. For she sayde: I wyl goe after my louers, that geue me my water and my breade, my woll and flaxe, my oyle and my dzycke. But I wyl hedge her awaye wyth thornes, and stoppe it, that she shall not fynde her fotesteppes: And though she runne after her louers, yet shall she not gette them: She shall seke them, but not find them. Then shall she say: Well, I <sup>a</sup> wyl go turne agayne to my first husbāde, for at that tyme was I better at ease, then now. But thys woulde she not knowe, where as I yet gaue her corne, wyne, oyle, syluer, & golde, <sup>b</sup> whiche she hath hanged vpon Baal.

Wherfore nowe wyl I go take my corne and wyne agayne in their season, and set agayne my woll and my flaxe, whych I gaue her, to couer her shame.
<sup>c</sup> And nowe wyl I discouer her fooly-nesse, euen in the syghte of her louers, and no man shall delyuer her out of my handes. Moreover, I wil take away al her <sup>d</sup> myrrh, her holye dayes, her newe moones, her Sabbothes and all her solempne feastes: I wyl destroye her vineyardes and sygge trees, thowghe she sayeth: Lo, here are my rewarde that my louers haue geuen me. I wyl make it a wodde, and the wyld beasts shall eate it vp: I wyl punyssh her also for the dayes of Baal, <sup>e</sup> wherin she censed hym, deckyng hym with her eare-rynges and cheynes: When she folowed her louers, and forgot me (sayeth the Lorde).

Wherfore beholde, I wyl call her agayne, brynge her into a wyldernes-se, and speake freudelye vnto her: There

D wil I geue her her vineyardes agayn, yea, and * the valley of Achor also to thewe her hope and comforte. Then shall the synges there * as in the tyme of her yowth, and * lyke as in the daye when she came oute of the lande of Egypte. Then (sayeth the Lorde) she shall saye vnto me: O my husbände, and shall call me no more Baall: for I wyll take awaye those names of Baall frome her mouth, yea, she shall neuer remembre their names anye more. * Then wyll I make a couenaunte wyth them, wyth the wyld beasts, with the foules of the ayre, & with euerye thinge that crespeth vpon the earth.

* As for bowe, swerde and battell, I wyll destroye suche out of the lande, and wil make the to slepe safely. * Thus wyll I marye thee vnto myne owne selfe for euer more: Yea, euen vnto myne owne selfe wyll I marye the, in righteousness, in equite, in lounge kyndnes and mercye. In saye also wyll I marye the vnto my selfe, and thou shalt knowe the Lorde. At the same tyme wyll I thewe my selfe frendelye and gracypus vnto the Heauens sayeth the Lorde: And the heauens shall helpe the earth, and the earth shall helpe the corne, wyne and oyle, and they shall helpe Israell. * I wyll sowe them vpon earthe, for a sede to myne owne selfe, * and wyll haue mercye vpon her, that was without mercye. And to them which were not my people, I wyll say: thou art my people. And he shall saye: Thou art my God.

The Notes.

a. Mother here signifieth the Synagog, of the Jewes, or the churche or congregaciō of the people, as in Esay. l. a

The.iii. Chapter.

Of the loue of God towards the people.

Ihen sayde the Lorde to me: * Goe yet thy waye and wolve an aduouters woman, whom thy neighbour loueth, as the Lorde doeth the chyldren of Israell: Howe be it they haue respecte to straunge gods, * & loue the wyne kannes. So I gat her for. xv. syluerlynges, and for an Homer and an halfe of barley, and sayd vnto her: thou shalte bide with me a longe season, but se that thou playest not the harlot, and loke thou medle with none other man, & then wyll I kepe my selfe for the.

* Thus the chyldren of Israell shal lytte a great while without kynge and prynce, withoute offerynge and aulter, withoute prieste and reuelacion. But afterwarde shall the chyldren of Israell conuerte, and seke the Lorde theyr God, and * Dauid their kynge: And in the latter dayes they shall wurthypppe the Lorde, and hys lounge kyndnesse.

The.iiii. Chapter.

A complaynte agaynste the people and the priestes of Israell.

Hate the woorde of the Lorde, O ye chyldren of Israell: for the Lorde must punish the, that dwell in the lande. And why? There is no faithfulness, there is no mercye, there is no knowledge of God in the lande: But swearynge, lyinge, manslaughter, thefte and aduoutrye haue gotten the ouerhande, and one bloude gyltynesse foloweth another. Therefore shall the lande be in a miserable case, and al they that dwell therein, shall mourne. The beasts in the felde, the foules in the ayre, and the fyshes in the sea shall dye. Yet is there none, that wyll chasten nor reprove another. The * priestes which should reforme other men, are become lyke the people.

Therefore stomblest thou in the daye tyme, and the prophete with the in the nyghte. I wyll brynge thy mother to sylence, and why? * my people peryphe, because they haue no knowledge. Seynge then that thou haste refused vnderstandynge, therefore wyll I refuse the also: so þ thou shalt be no more be my priest. And for so muche as þ haste gotten the lawe of thy God, I wyll also forget thy chyldren. The more they increased in the multitude, the moore they synned agaynste me, therefore wyll I chaunge their honoure in to shame. * They ate by the synnes of my people, and corage them in their wyckednesse. * Thus the priest is become lyke the people. Wherefore I wyll punyssh them for their wycked wayes, and rewarde warde them accordynge to their owne ymaginacions. * They shall eate, and not haue ynoughe: They haue a bled whoridome, therefore shall they not prosper: and why? They haue forsaken the Lorde, and not regarded hym.

Whoridome, wyne and drunkenesse, take the hearte awaye. * My people aske counsell at their stockes, their staffe muste tell them. For an whoridome mynde hath disceaued them, so that they commytte fornicacion agaynst their God. * They make sacrifices vpon the hye mountaynes, and burne their incense vpon the hylles, yea, amonge the okes, groues and bushes, for there are good shadowes. Therefore youre daughters are become harlottes, and youre spouses haue broken their wedlocke, I wyll not punyssh youre daughters for beyng despyled, and youre byrdes that became whores: * Seynge the fathers them selues haue medled wyth harlottes, and offered with vnchistnes: But the people that wyll not vnderstande must be punished.

Though thou b Israell arte disposed to play the harlot, yet shouldest not thou haue offended, O Juda: Thou shouldest not haue runne to Galgala, * nor haue gone vp to Bethauen, * nor haue sworne, the Lorde lyueth. For Israell is gone backe lyke a wanton cowe. The Lorde therefore shall make her fede, as the lambe that goeth astraye. And where as Ephraim is become partaker of Idolles, well, lette hym goe. Their drunkenesse hath putte them backe, and brought them to whoridome. Their ruelars loue rewardes, byynge (saye they) to their owne shame. Al wynde shall take holde of their fethers, and they shall be confounded in theyr offerynges.

The Notes.

a. To be whoridome or fornicacion thowt oute of prophetes, is, to take another God then the true God, and to serue ymages or to beleue in them.

b. Israell and Ephraim, for the most parte in the prophetes are taken for the ten tribes. Isalme. lxxviii. d. Ye reade in the. iiii. of the kynge. xii. c. that tenne tribes folowed Jeroboam, where as onelye Juda and Benjamin abode by Rehoboam. Those ten tribes are commonlye called Israell in the prophetes: And Benjamin is reckened with Juda.

The. v. Chapter.

Agaynst the priestes & ruelars of Israell. The helpe of man can do nothinge agaynst God.

O Ye Priestes: Heare this, take hede, O thou houtholde of Israell: Geue eare, O thou kynge of house: for thys punishment wyll come vpon you, that are become a snare vnto Mizpah, and a spredde net vnto the mounte of Chabor. They kyll sacrifices by heapes, * to begyle the people therewith: Therefore wyll I punyssh them all. * I knowe Ephraim well ynoughe, and Israell is not hyd from me: For Ephraim is become an harlot: and Israell is defiled. They are not mynded to turne to their God, for they haue an whoridome heart, so y they can not knowe the Lorde.

* But the pryde of Israell wyll be rewarded hym in his face, yea, both Israell and Ephraim shall fall for theyr wickednesse, and Juda wyth them also. * They shall come with their shepe and bullockes * to seke the Lorde, but they shall not fynde hym, for he is gone from them. As for the Lorde, they haue refused hym, and brought vp bastarde children. A moneth therefore shall deuoure them with their porcions. Blowe with the shawmes at Gibeon, and with the trompet at Ramah, crye out at Bethauen vpon the yowlyde of Benjamin. In the tyme of y plague shall Ephraim be layde waste, therefore dyd I saythful lyke warne the tribes of Israell. Yet are the prynces of Juda become like them, that remoue the landmarckes, therefore wyll I powze out my wrathe vpon the lyke water. Ephraim is oppressed, and can haue no right of the lawe: for why? They folowe the doctrynes of men. Therefore wil I be vnto Ephraim as a Mothe, and to the house of Juda as a Caterpyller.

When Ephraim sawe hys sycknesse, and Juda his disease: * Ephraim wente vnto Assur, and sent vnto kynge Jareb: Yet coude not he helpe you, nor ease you of youre payne. I am vnto Ephraim as a Lyon, and as a Lyons whelp to the house of Juda. Euen I.

I wyll spoyle them, and go my waye. I wyll take the with me, & no man shal rescue them. I wyll goe, and retorne to my place, tyll they waxe faynte, and seke me.

The. vi. Chapter.

¶ Affliction causeth a man to retorne to God. The wyckednes of the priestes.

In their aduersite they shall seke me, and saye: come, lette vs tourne agayne to the Lord: * for he hath smitten vs, and he shal heale vs: he hath wounded vs, and he shal bynde vs by a gayne: a After two dayes shall he quicken vs, in the thyrde daye he shal rayse vs, so that we shall lyue in hys syghte. Then shall we haue vnderstandynge and endeuoure them selues to knowe the Lorde. He shal go forth as y spryng of the daye, and come vnto vs * as the euenynge and morning rayne vpon the earth.

¶ O Ephraim, what shall I doe vnto the: O Iuda, howe shall I intreate thee: Seynge youre loue is like a moornyng cloude, and lyke a dewe that goeth earlye awaye. Therfore haue I cut downe the prophetes, and let them be slayne for my wordes sake: So that thy punishment shall come to lyghte. * for I haue pleasure in lounge kyndenes, and * not in offering: Yea, in the knowledge of God, moore then in burnt sacrifice. But euen lyke as * Adam dyd, so haue they broken my couenaunte, and set me at noughte. Gilead is a cite of wycked doers, of malicious people and bloudesthedders. The multitude of the Priestes is lyke an heape of theues, murtherers and bloudthirsty: for they haue wroughte abhominacion. * Horrible thynges haue I sene in the house of Israell, there playeth Ephraim the harlot, and Israell is defyled: But Iuda shal haue an haruest for hym selfe, when I retorne the captiuite of my people.

The Notes.

a. After two dayes shall he quicken vs, and in the thirde daye shall rayse vs vp. &c. That is, for a certayne space wyl he afflict and trouble vs, but he wyl heale vs agayne, and restore vs to soundenes. Therbynde daye, that is without longe delaye or longe tariaunce.

The. vii. Chapter.

¶ Of the vyces and wantonnes of the people.

When I vndertake to make Israell whole, the the vnglaciousnesse of Ephraim and the wyckednesse of Samaria commeth to lyght: then goe they aboute with lyes. At home, they be theues: And withoute they fall to tobbinge. They consider not in their heartes that I remembre all their wyckednesse. They goe aboute with their owne inuencions, but I see them well ynough. * They make the kynge and the prynces, to haue pleasure in their wyckednesse and lyes. All these butne in aduoutye, as it were an ouen that the baker heateth, when he hath lette knedynge, tyll the doue be leuened. ¶ Euen so goeth it thys daye with our kynges and prynces, for they begynne to be woode droncken thowowe wyne: they vse familiarite with suche as disceauce them. They with the ymaginacions of their hearte are like an ouen, their slepe is all y nyght lyke the slepe of a baker, in the moornyng is he as hote as the flame of fyre: They are all together as hote as an ouen.

They haue deuoured their owne iudges, all their kynges are fallen: yet is there none of them that calleth vpon me. Therfore muste Ephraim be mixte amonge the heathen. Ephraim is become lyke a cake, that no man turneth: Straungers haue deuoured his strength, yet he regardeth it not: he waxeth full of grave heeres, yet wyl he not knowe it: * And the pryde of Israell is caste downe before their face, yet wyl they not turne to y Lord their God, nor seke him for al this.

Ephraim is lyke a doue, that is begyled, and hath no hearte. * Nowe call they vpon the Egyptians, nowe goe they to the Assyrians: But whyle they be goynge here and there, I shal sprede my nette ouer them, and drawe them downe as the foules of the ayre: And accordynge as they haue ben warned, so wyl I punishe them. * Wo be vnto them, for they haue forsaken me. They muste be destroyed, for they haue sette me at noughte. * I am he that haue re-demed them, and yet they dissemble w me. * They call not vpon me with their heartes, but lye houlpyng vpon they beddes. Where as they come together, it is but for meate and dryncke, and me wyl they not obey. I haue taughte them, and defended their atime, yet doe they imagine mischiefe agaynst me.

They tourne them selues, but not a ryghte, and are become as a broken bowe. Their Prynces shall be slayne with the swerde, for the malice of their tongues, suche blasphemies haue they learned in the lande of Egypt.

and I muste not knowe of it. * Of their syluer and golde haue they made them Images, to bryng them selues to de struction. * Thy calfe, O Samaria, shall be taken awaye for my wrathfull indignacion is gone forth agaynst the.

How longe wyl it be, or they can be clen the workeman made it, therefore can it be no God; but euen to a spyders shall they reape a storme.

Theyr sede shall beate no corne, there shall no meell be made of their in crease: Though they reape, yet shall straungers deuoure it vp. Israel shall perishe, the Gentyles shall in treate hym as a foule vessell. Sence they wente vp to the Assyrians, they are become lyke a wyld Ass in the de serte.

The. ix. Chapter.

Of the hunger and captiuitie of Israel.

Do not thou tryumphe,
O Israel, make no boaz tyng moore then the heathen, for thou hast commytted aduoutrye agaynst thy God: strau
ge rewardes haste thou loued, moore then all the cornellores. * Therefore shall they no moore enioy the cornellores and wynepresses, and their swete wyne shall faple them. They wyl not dwell in the Lordes lande, but Ephraim tourneth agayne into Egypte, & eateth vncleane thynges amonge the Assyrians. They poure out no wyne for a dryncke offeringe vn to the Lorde, neither geue they hym their slayne offerings: but they be vn to them as mourners meates, wherein

The .x. Chapter.

Agaynst Israell and bys Idolles.

ISraell was a goodly byne, but he hath broughte forth the vnprofitable frut: yea, y<sup>e</sup> more frute he had, y<sup>e</sup> moe aulters he made: y<sup>e</sup> more good I did to their lade, the more frendshipp shewed they to their Images. Their hearte is deuided, therefore wyl they be destroyed. The Lorde shall breake downe their Images, he shall destroye their aulters. Then shall they say: we haue no king, for why? we haue not feared the Lorde. And what shall then the kynge doe to vs? They comen together, and sweare bayne othes: they be confederate together, therefore groweth their punishment, as the wedes in the forowes of the lande.

They that dwell in Samaria haue wurchypped the calfe of Bethauē: therefore shall the people mourne ouer them, yea, and the priestes also, that in their welthyngesse reioysed with them: And why? It shall passe awaye from them. It shall be broughte to the Affrican, for a present vnto kinge Jareb. Ephraim shal receaue full punishment: Israell shall be confounded for his owne ymagynacions, Samaria wyth bys kynge shall banyshe awaye, as y<sup>e</sup> scōme in the water. The hye places of Auen where Israell doe synne, shall be caste downe: thystles and thornes shall grow vpon their aulters: * Then shal they say to the mountaines: couer vs, and to the hylles: sal vpon vs.

O Israell, thou hast spynned, as Gibeā dyd afore tyme, where they reymayned: should not the batel then come vpon the wicked chyldezen, as wel as vpon the Gibeonites? I wyl chasten the, euen after myne owne desyre, the people shall be gathered together ouer them, when I punish them for their greate wickednesse. Lyke as the mornyng goeth away, so shall the kynge of Israel passe.

The. xi. Chapter.

Agaynst the unkindnes of Israell.

A When Israel was younge, I loued hym: And * called hym my sonne oute of the lande of Egypt. But the moore they were called, the moore they went backe, * offeringe vnto Idols, & censyng ymagis. I lerned Ephraim to goe, & bare the in myne armes, but they regarded not me, that woide haue helped them. I led them w coardes of frendshyppe, & with bandes of loue. I was euen he, that laied the yocke vpon their neckes. * I gaue them their fodder my selfe, that they shulde not goe agayne into Egypt. And now is Assur their kynge: for they wolde not turne vnto me. Therefore shall the swearde beginne in their cities, the stoate & they haue layed by, shall be destroyed and eaten: and that because of their owne ymagynacions. My people hath no luste to tourne vnto me, * they: Prophetes laye the yocke vpon them, but they ease them not of their burthen.

C What great thinges haue I geuen the, O Ephraim: howe faythfully haue I defended thee, O Israel: haue I dealt with the as with * Adama: Or haue I intreated the like Seboim: no, my hearte is otherwyle mynded. Yea, my mercy is to feruent: Therefore haue I not turned me to destroy Ephraim in my wrothfull displeasure. For I am God and no man, I am euen that holpe one in the myddest of thee, though he I came not within the citie.

The Lorde roareth lyke a Lyon, that they maye folowe hym: Yea, * as a Lion roareth he, & they maye be afrayed like & chyldren of & sca: that they may be scatred away fro Egypt, as men scatred byrdes: & frayed away (as doves vnto be) frome the Assirians lande: And that because I woulde haue them tarpe at home, sayeth the Lorde. But Ephraim goth about me with lyes, and the house of Israel dissembleth. Ouel ye Juda holdeth him with God, & with the true holy thinges.

The. xii. Chapter.

Agaynst the vayne trust of the people.

Ephraim kepeth the ayze, and coloweth attter the east wynd: He is euer encreasynge lyes & destruccio. They be confederate with the Assirians, * their oyle is caried into Egypte. The Lorde hathe a courte to holde wyth Juda, and wyll punysh Jacob: After their owne wayes and accordynge to their owne inuencions, shall he recompense them. * He toke hys brother by the hele, when he was in his mothers wombe: And in hys strength he wrestled w God. * He stroue with the Angel, and gate the victorye: so that he prayed and desired hym. He founde him, * at Bethel, and there talked with vs.

Yea, the Lorde God of Hostes euen the Lorde him selfe remembred hym: When turne to thy God, kepe mercede and equite, and hope styll in thy God. But the marchaūte hath a false weight in hys hande, he hathe a pleasure to occuppe extortion. Ephraim thinketh thus: * Cusse, I am ryche, I haue good ynoughe: In all my woorkes shall not one faute be founde, that I haue offended. Yet am I the Lorde thy God, euen as when I brought the out of the land of Egypt, and set the in thy tentes, & as in the hye feast dayes.

I haue spoken thorowe the prophetes, and shewed diuerse visions, and declared my selfe by the ministracyon of the prophetes. But at Gilead is the abhominacion, they are fallen to vanite. At Gilgall they haue slayne oxen: and * as many heapes of stones as they had in their lande forowes, so manye alters

By a prophete the Lorde broughte them out of Egypte, and by a prophete he preserued them. But Ephraim hath prouoked hym to displeasure thowowe hys abhominacions, therfore shall hys bloude be powred vpon him selfe, and p Lorde hys God shal rewarde hym hys blasphemies.

The. xiii. Chapter.

Of the abhominacions of Israell.

A The abhominacio of Ephraim is come also into Israell. He is gone backe to Baall, therfore muste he dye. And nowe they synne more and more: * Of theyr syluer, they make them molten Images, lyke the ydols of the heathen, and yet all is nothings but the worke of the craftelman. Not withstandynge they preache of the same: Who so wyl kysse y calves, offereth to men. Therfore they shal be as the moynynge, and as the dewe that earlye passeth awaye, and lyke as dulle that the wynde taketh away from the flore, and as smoke that goeth out of the chymney.

* I am the Lorde thy God, whiche brought the out of y lande of Egypte: p thou shouldest knowe no God but me onely, and p thou shouldest haue no lasuitoure but onelye me. I toke diligente hede of the in y wilderness, y drie lande. But when they were well fedde, I had ynoughe, they waxed proude, and forgat me. * Therfore wil I be vnto the as a Lyon, and as a Leopard in the waye to the Assirians. I wyl come vpon them as a she Beere, p is robbed of her whelpes, and I wyl breake that stubburne hearte of theirs. There wyl I deuoure them as a Lyon: yea, the wyld beasts shal teare them.

* O Israell, thou doest but destroye thy selfe, in me only is thy helpe. Where are thy kinges now, that shoulde helpe the in all thy cities: Yea, and thy iudges, of whome thou saydest: * geue me a kynge and prynces: Well, I gaue the a kynge in my wrathe, and in my displeasure I wyl take hym from the agayne. The wickednesse of Ephraim is bounde together, and his sinne lyeth hid: Therfore shall the sorowes come vpon him, as vpon a woman p trauayleth. An vndiscrete son is he: for he considreth not, that he shoulde not haue bene able to haue endured in the tyme of hys byrth, had not I defended him fro y graue, and deliuered hym from deathe.

* O death, I wil be thy death: O hel, I wyl be thy styng. Yet can I see no comforte, for when he is nowe the goodliest among y brethren, the East wynde (euen the wynde of the Lorde) shal come downe from the wyldernes, and drye vp hys condites, and dryncke vp hys welles: He shal spoyle the treasure of al pleasaunt vessels.

* As for Samaria, they shalbe made waste, and why? They are disobedient vnto their God. They shal perish with the sword, their chyldren shalbe slayne, and their women great with childe shal be crypte vp.

The. xiiii. Chapter.

The destruction of Samaria.

I Israell, * turne the nowe vnto the Lord thy God, * for p hast take a great cal thowow thy wickednes. Take these words in you, whē ye tourne to the Lorde, and say vnto him. O forgeue vs al our synnes, receaue vs graciously, and the wil we offer p a bullockes of our lippes vnto the. Assur shalbe no more our helper, nether wyl we ryde vpon horses any more. As for y workes of our hādes, we wyl no more call vpon the: for it is thou that arte oure God, thou shewest euer mercy vnto the fatherlesse.

O (yf they woulde doe this) I shulde heale their sores: Yea, with al my hearte woulde I loue them: so that my wrath shoulde cleane be tourned awaye frome them. Yea, I woulde be vnto Israell as the dewe, and he shoulde grow as the lylle, and his rote shoulde breake oute as Lybanus. Hys braunches shoulde sprede oute abrode, and be as fayre as y olyue tree, and smel as Libanus. They that dwell vnder his shadowe, shoulde come agayne, and growe as the corne, and floreye as the vyne: He shoulde haue as good a name as the wyne of Libanus.

The booke of the prophete Joell.

The fyrst Chapter.

A prophcey agaynst the Jewes. He exhorteth the pceestes to praye and fastinge for the mysery that was commyng at hande.

This is the worde of the Lorde, that came vnto Joell the sonne of Phasuel: Heare O ye elders: pondre this well, all ye that dwell in the lande: yf euer there happened suche a thing in youre dayes, or in the dayes of your fathers. Tell youre chyldren of it, and let them shewe it vnto theyr chyldren, and so they to certifie theyr posterite therof. Loke what y caterpyller hath lefte, that hath the gresshopper eaten vp: what the gresshopper lefte, that hath the locuste eaten vp: and what the locuste hath left, that hath the blastyng consumed. Wake vp ye dronckardes, and wepe: mourne all ye winesuppers, because of youre swete wyne, for it shall be taken awaye frome your mouth. Yea, a myghty and an innumerable people shall come vp in to my lande: * these haue teeth lyke the teeth of Lyons, and chafte bones like the lyonesses. They shall make my vyneyard waste, they shall pill of the barckes of my fygetrees, strype them bare, caste them awaye, and make the braunches whyte.

Make thy mone as a byrgyn doth y gyrdeth herselfe with sacke, because of her byrde grome. For the meate and drinckoffringe shalbe taken away from the house of the Lorde: and the pceestes the Lordes ministers shal mourne. The felde shalbe wasted, y land shalbe in a myserable case: for y corne shal be destroyed, y swete wine shal come to confusio, & the oile vtterly desolate. The housband men and the wine gardeners shall loke pyteously and make lamentacion, for the wheate, wyne and batelpe, & because y haruest vpon the feld is so clene destroyed. The grape gatherers shall make great mone, when y vineyard and fig trees be so vtterly wasted. Yea, at the pomgarnettes, palmetrees, apletrees, & the other trees of the felde shal wither away. Thus the mery cheate of the chyldren of men, shal come to confusyon.

Gyrde you, and make youre mone, O ye pceestes: mourne ye ministres of the altier: goo youre waye in, and scope in sacke clothe, O ye officers of my God: for the meat and drynckeo offering shal be taken awaye frome the house of your God.* Proclame a fasting, cal the congregacion, gather the elders and all the inhabytters of the lande together in to the house of the Lord your God, and crye vnto the Lorde: alas, alas for thys daye. And why: the daye of the Lord is at hande, and cometh as a destroyer from the Almighty. Shal not y meates be taken awaye before oure eyes, the myrthe also and ioye from the house of oure God: The sede shal perishe in the grounde, the garners shal lye waste, y flores shalbe broke downe, for the corne shalbe destroyed.* O what a syghynge make y catell: the bullockes are verye uel liking, because they haue no pastur: and the shepe are famyshed awaye.

O Lorde, to the wyll I crye: for the fyre hath consumed the goodly pastures of the wilderness; and the flame hath brent vp al the trees of the felde. Yea, the wyld beastes cry also vnto the: for the water ryuers are dryed vp, and the fyre hath consumed the pastures of the wilderness.

Deut. 32. b.

Blow out the trumpet in Sion, and cry vpon my holy hyl, that all suche as dwell in the lande, maye tremble at it: * for the daye of the Lorde cometh, & is hard at hand: a darcke day, a gloomyng daye, a cloudy daye, yea & a stormyng daye like as the moornyng spreadeth out vpon the hylles: Namely, a greate and myghty people: suche as haue not bene sens the beginnyng, nether shal be after them for euermore. Before him shalbe a consumyng fyre, and behynde him a burnyng flame. The lande shal be as a garden of pleasure before hym, but behynde hym shal it be a very wast wyldernesse, and there is no man, that shal escape hym. They are to loke vpon lyke barded horses, and runne lyke horse menne. They skyppe vp vpon the hylles, as it were the sounde of charrettes: as the flame of fyre that consumeth the straw, and as a myghty people redy to the batell.

The folke shalbe afrayed of hym, all faces shal be as blacke as a pot. These shal runne lyke giauntes, and leape ouer the walles like men of warre. Euery man in his going shal kepe his arape, and not goo oute of his pathe. There shal not one dyue another, but eche shal kepe his owne waye. They shal breake in at the wyndowes, and not be hurte: They shal come into the city, and runne vpon the walles: They shal clyme vp vpon the houses, and syppe in at the wyndowes lyke a thefe. The earthe shal quake before hym, yea, the heauens shal be moued: The * Sunne and Moone shalbe darckened, and the starres shal withdraue theyr shyne. The Lorde shal shewe hys voyce before hys hooste, for hys hoste is greate, stronge and myghty to fulfyll hys commaundemente. This is that greate and maruelous fearfull daye of the Lorde: * And who is able to abyde it.

Nowe therefore sayeth the Lorde * Turne you vnto me with all your herites, with fastyng, weppynge and moornyng, rente your hertes, and not youre clothes. Turne you vnto the Lord your God, * for he is gracious and merciful, longe sufferinge and of greate compassion: and redye to pardone wickednes.

Then (no doute) he also shal come, and forgene: and after his chastenyng, he shal let your increase remaine, for meat and drinck offerings vnto the Lorde your God: * Blowe out with the trumpet in Sion, proclame a fastyng, call the congregacion, and gather the people together: warne the congregacion, gather the elders, bryng the chyldren and sucklings together. Let the bridgrome go forth of his chambze, and the bryde out of her closet. Let the preestes serue the Lorde betwixte the porche and the aulter, weping and saying: be sauourable, O Lorde, be sauourable vnto thy people: let not thine heritage be brought to suche confusyon, lest the Heathen be lordes therof. Wherefore shoulde they saye amonge the Heathen: * where is nowe theyr God?

Then shal the Lorde be gelous ouer his lande, and spare hys people: yea, the Lorde shal answeere, and saye vnto hys people: Behold, I will sende you corne, wine, and oyle, so that ye shal haue plenty of them: and I wyll no more geue you ouer to be a reprove among the Heathen. Agayne, as for hym of the North, I shal dyue him farre from you: & hute him oute into a drye and waste land, his face towarde the East sea, and his hinder partes towarde the vtmost sea. The syncke of him shal goo vp, and hys synful thyng corruption shal fall vpon himself, because he hath dealte so proudly. Feare not (O lande) but bee glad and reioyse, for the Lorde wyll do greate thynges. Be not ye afrayed nether (O ye bestes of the felde) for p pastures shalbe grene, and the trees shal beare their fruite: the sygtrees and vyneyardes shal geue theyr increase.

Be glad then (O ye chyldren of Sion) and reioyce in the Lord your God, for he hath geuen you a teacher of righteousness: * and he it is that shal sende you downe shewers of rayne, early and late in the fyrst moneth: so that the garners shalbe full of corne, and the presses plenteous in wyne and oyle. And as for the yeates that the gresshopper, locuste, blasting and caterpillar (my great host, whiche I sente amongst you) haue eaten vp, I shal restore them to you agayne: so that ye shal haue pnowghe to rate

The fyrst Chapter.

The tyme of the prophecy of Amos. The word of the Lord against Azah, against Tyre, agaynst Edom, and against the sonnes of Ammon.

These are the Sermons that were shewed vnto Amos (whiche was one of y<sup>e</sup> shepherdes at Thecua) vpon Israell, in the tyme of * Osiash kyng of Juda, and in the tyme of * Ieroboam the sonne of Ioah kyng of Israel, two yere before the earthe quake. And he sayde: * The Lorde shall roare oute of Sion, and shewe his voyce from Ierusalem: so that the pastures of the shepherdes shalbe in a myserable case, & the tope of Charimel dryed vp. Thus sayth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickednesses of * Damascus, I wyl not spare her: because they haue throsched Gilead with yron stales: But I wyl sende a fire into the house of Hazael, the same shall consume the palaces of Benadab. Thus wil I breake the barres of Damascus, and rote out the inhabiter from the feld of Auen, and him that holdeth the scepter, out of the pleasaunte house: so that the people shalbe dryuen oute of sayre Syria, sayth the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickednesses of * Gaza, I wil not spare her: because they make the prisoners yet more captiue, & haue dryuen them in to the land of Edom. Therefore wyl I sende a fyre in to the walles of Gaza, whiche shall deuoure her houses. I wyl rote oute them that dwel at Aldod, and hym that holdeth the sceptre of Ascalon, and stretch oute myne hande ouer Accaron, that the remnaunte of the Philistines shal perishe sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickednesses of the city of * Tyre, I wyl not spare her: because they haue increased the captiuitie of the Edomites, and haue not remembred the * brotherly couenaunt. Therefore wil I sende a fyre into the walles of Tyre: that shal consume her palaces. Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickednesses of * Edom, I wil not spare him, because * he persecuted his brother in the sword, destroyed his mothers wombe, bare hatred very longe, and so kept indignacy: on alway by hym. Therefore wyl I sende a fyre in to Theman, which shal deuoure the palaces of Bosra.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickednesses of the chyldren of * Ammon I wil not spare them: because they tpyte by the women greates with child in Gilead, to make the borders of theyr landes the wider. Therefore I wil kindle a fyre in the walles of Rabbath, that shal consume her palaces: with a great crye, in the day of batel, in tempest and in the daye of storme: so that theyr king shall go into captiuitie he and his princes together, sayth the Lorde.

The.ii. Chapter.

Agaynst Moab, Juda, and Israell

Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickednesses of Moab, I wil * not spare him: because he brent the bones of the king of Edom to ashes. Therefore wil I sende a fyre into Moab, which shall consume the palaces of Carioth: so that Moab shall perishe with a noyse and the sounde of a shawme. I wyl rote out the iudge from amonge them, and slaye al his princes with him, sayth the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickednesses of * Juda, I wil not spare him: because he hath cast a spyde y<sup>e</sup> lawe of the Lorde, and not kept his commandementes: for why, * they woulde nedes bee disceaued with the lyes, that their forefathers folowed. Therefore wyl I sende a fyre into Juda, whiche shall consume the palaces of Ierusalem.

Thus sayth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickednesses of Israel, I wil not spare him: because he hath solde the Ye made a thanckofferynge of leuen, ye promised frewillofferynges, and proclaimed them. Suche luste had ye, O ye chyldren of Israel, sayeth the Lord God. Therefore haue I geuen you ydle teeth in al youre cyties, and scarfenesse of breade in all youre places: yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lord. When there were but thre monethes vnto the haruest, I wythelde the rayne frome you: yea, I rayned vpon one cytie, and not vpon another, one pece of grounde was moistured wyth rayns, and the ground that I rayned not vpon, was drye. Wherefore two, yea, thre cyties came vnto one, to dryncke water: but they were not satisfied, yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lord.

I haue smytten you with drotte and blastynge: and loke how manye orchardes, vineyardes, figetrees & olyue trees ye had: the caterpyller hath eaten the hye. But yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayth the Lord. A complaynte of the captiuite of Israel.

Care thys word, O ye house of Israel, and why? I muste make this mone for you: The byrgin Israel shall fal, and neuer ryse vp agayne: she shalbee caste downe vpon her owne grounde, and no man shall helpe her vp. For thus sayeth the Lord God: Where as there dwelte a M. in one cytie there shalbe left scarce an hundreth therein: and where there dwelte an. C. there shal scarce tenne be left for the house of Israel. Neuerthelesse, thus sayeth the Lord vnto the house of Israel: Seke after me, and ye shall lyue, but seke not after Bethell. Come not at Gilgal, and go not to Bersaba: for Gilgal shalbe carped away captiue, & Bethel shal come to nought. Seke the Lord, that ye maye lyue: lest the house of Ioseph be bzent wyth fyre and consumed, and lest there be none to quench Bethell.

Ye turne the lawe to wormwode, and caste downe ryghtuousnes vnto the ground: * The Lord maketh the. vii. starres and the Dryons, he turneth the nyght into daye, and of the daye he maketh darcknesse. * He calleth the waters of the sea, and poureth them oute vpon the playne grounde: the Lord is hys name. He rayseth destruction vpon the myghty people, and bringeth downe the stronge holde, but they owe him euell wyll, that reproueth them openly: and who so telleth them the playne trueth, they abhorre him. For so much then as ye oppresse the poore, and robbe him of his beste sustenance: * therefore, where as ye haue buylded houses of square stone, ye shall not dwell in them. Watelous pleasaunte vyneyardes shall ye plante, but the wyne of them shall ye not dryncke: and why? as for the multitude of your wyckednesses & your stout sinnes, I knowe them right well. Enemyes are ye of the ryghtuous, * ye take rewardes, ye oppresse the poore in iudgement. Therefore the wyse muste now be fayne to holde his tunge, so wycked a tyme is it.

Seke after the thyng that is good, & not euell, so shall ye lyue: yea, y<sup>e</sup> Lord

Againe, the Lorde shewed me this byspon: behold, the Lorde God called the fyre to punyssh wythall, and it deuoured the greete depe: yea, it consumed a parte all readye. Then sayde I: O Lorde God, holde thyne hande: for who should els helpe vp Jacob that is brought so lowe? So the Lorde was merciful therein, and the Lorde God sayd: well, it shal not be.

Moreover, he shewed me this byspon: behold, the Lorde stode vpon a plastered wal, and a masons trowel in his hande. And the Lorde sayd vnto me: Amos, what seist thou? I answered: a masons trowel. Then sayde the Lorde: behold, I will laye the trowel among my people of Israel, and wyll nomore ouer- tie them: but the hye hylchapels of Isaac muste be laied waste, and the chur- ches of Israel made desolate: and as for the house of Jeroboam, I wyll stand vpon agaynst it with the swerde. sage sent amonge the heathen: up, let vs arysle, and fyght agaynst them. Be-holdes, * I wyll make the small among the heathen, so that thou shalt be vtterly despyled. The pryde of thyne herte hath lyfte the vp, thou that dwellest in the stronge holdes of stone, and haste made thee an hye seate: Thou sayest in thyne hert: who shall cast me downe to the ground? * But though thou wentest vp as hye as the Aegle, and madest thy * nest aboue among the starnes: yet woulde I plucke the downe fro thence.

¶ If the theues and robbers came to the by nyght, thou takynge thy rest: should they not steale, tyll they had ynough?
¶ If the grape gatherers came vpo the,
would they not leaue the some grapes?
But how shall they rype Elau, and seke out his treasures?

¶ Yea, the men that were sworne vnto the, shall dzyue the out of the borders of thyne owne lande. They that be now at one with the, shall disceane thee, and o-uercome thee: Euen they that ate thy bread, shall betraye thee, or euer thou perceauie it. * Shall not I at the same tyme destroye the wyse men of Edom, & those that haue vnderstandyng, fro the mount of Elau? Thy gyautes, O The-man shall be afrayed, for thorowe the slaughter they shall be all ouerthrowen vpon the mount of Elau. Shame shall come vpon the, for the malysce * y<sup>e</sup> thou shewedest to thy * brother Jacob: yea, for euermore shalt thou pershe, & that because of the tyme, when thou dydest set thy selfe against him, euen when the enemyes caried awaye his hooste, and when the aleautes came in at his portes, and cast lottes vpon Ierusalem, & thou thy selfe wast as one of them.

Thou shalt no more se the day of thy brother, thou shalt no more beholde the tyme of hys captiuite: thou shalt no-more reioyce ouer y<sup>e</sup> chyloden of Iuda, in the daye of their destruction, y<sup>e</sup> shalt trumphe no more in the tyme of their trouble. Thou shalt no more come in at the gates of my people, in the tyme of their decaye: thou shalt not se their mysery in the day of their fall.

Thou shalt sende out no man against their host, in the daye of their aduersy-te: nether shalt thou stande waytynge any more at the corners of the stretes, to murther suche as are fled, or to take them prisoners, that remayne in y<sup>e</sup> day of their trouble. For the daye of y<sup>e</sup> Lorde is hard by vpon al the heathen. * Like as thou hast done, so shalt thou be dealt withall, yea, thou shalt be rewarded euen vpon thyne head. For lyke wyse as ye haue droncken vpon myne holy hil, so shall all heathen dzyinke contynually: yea, dzyinke shall they, and swalow vp, so that ye shall be, as though ye had neuer bene.

But vpon the mount Syon, there shall a remnaunt escape: these shall be ho lye, * and the house of Jacob shall pos-sesse euen those, that had the in selues afore in possession. Moreover, * y<sup>e</sup> house of Jacob shall be a fyre, y<sup>e</sup> house of Joseph a flame, and the house of Elau shall be the strawe: which they shall kyndle & consume, so that nothyng shall be left of the house of Elau, for the Lorde himselfe hath sayde it. They of the Southe shall haue the mount of Elau in possession: and loke what lieth vpon y<sup>e</sup> ground, that shall the Philistines haue: y<sup>e</sup> plaine feldes shall Ephraim & Samaria pos-sesse: & the mountaynes of Gilead shall Ben Iamin haue. And this hoost shall be the chylde of Israels prisoners: now what so lyeth from a Canaan vnto zerephah, and in c<sup>e</sup> Sepharad, that shall be vnder the subieccyō of Ierusalem: and the cyties of the South shall enherite it.
Thus they that escape vpon the hyl of Syon, shall go vp to punish y<sup>e</sup> mount of Elau, & the kyngdō shall be y<sup>e</sup> Lorde's.

The Prologe of the prophete Jonas.

W. C. vnto the Christian reader.

As the enuyous Philistenes stopped the welles of Abrahā and filled them vp with earth, to put the memorypall oute of mynd, to the entent that they might challenge the ground: euen so the fleschly mynded poccitres stoppe vnto the baines of lyfe whych are in the scripture, with the earth of their tradicions, false similitudes and lying allegories, and that of lykezele, to make the scripture theyr owne possession and marchaundys: & so shutte vp the kyngdome of heauen, whiche is Gods worde, neyther enterpunge in theyn selues nor sufferpunge theyn that woulde.

The scripture hath a bode withoute, and with in a soule, spirite and lyfe. It hath withoute a barche, a shel, and as it were an hard bone for the fleschly mynded to knawe vpon. And with in it hath a pith, cornell, mapp, and all sweetenes for Goddes electe whiche he hath chosen to geue them his spirite, and to wype theys lawe and the fapth of his sonne in their hertes.

The scripture contempneth thre thynges in it, fyrst the lawe to condempne all fleshe: secondarily the gospell, that is to say, promyses of mercy for all that repente and knowledg of their synnes at the preaching of the law, and consent in their hertes that the lawe is good and submit theyn selues to be scollers, to learne to kepe the lawe and to learne to beleeue the mercede that is promysed them: and thirdly the stories and lyues of those scollars bothe what chaunces fortuned them, and also by what meanes their scolemasters taught them, and made them perfect, and howe he tried the true from the false.

When the poccitres come to the lawe, they putte gloses to, and make no more of it then of a worldly lawe whiche is satisfied with the outward worke, and which a Turke may also fulfill. When yet Gods law ceaseth not to condemn a man vntill it be wyrtten in his herte, and vntill he kepe it naturally without compulsion, and all other respecte, saue onely of pure loue to God, and his neyghbour, as he naturallly causeth when he is an hongred, without compulsion, and all other respecte saue to take hys honoure onely.

And when they come to the gospell, there they myngle their leuen and sape: God now receaueth vs no more to mercede, but of mercede recepueth vs to penance, that is to wyrtte, holye dedes that make them fatte helpes, and vs their captiues, both in soule and bode. And yet they sayne their Idole the Pope so mercypfull that yf thou make a lytle mouye glyster in his Salams eyes, there is neyther penance nor purgatorie, nor anye faptyng at all but to fpe to heauen as fwyfte as a thoughte, and at the twynckelyng of an eye.

And the lyues, stories and gyftes of menne, which are contayned in the Wyble, they reade as thynges no more pertyning vnto the, then a tale of Robyn hode, and as thynges they worre not to here to they serue, saue to fapne false discaunt, & iugling allegories, to stablysh their kyngdom with all. And one the chiefe and fleschly stydy they haue, is to magnifie fapnetes aboue measure and aboue tructh, and with their poetic to make them greater then euer god made them. And yf they fynde any infirmitie or synne ascribed vnto the fapnetes, that they excuse with all delygence, by minishyng the gloze of the mercede of God, and robbynge wretched synners of all their comforte, and thynke thereby to flatter the fapnetes, and to obayne theyr fauoure, and to make speciall aduocates of theyn, euen as a man woulde obayne the fauour of worldly treauntres as they also sayne the fapnetes more cruell then euer was any Bethen man, and more wrekefull and vengeable then the poetes sayne theyr goddes, or their furies that torment the soules in hell, if they euens be not fasted, and their ymages bysyt and saluted with a Water nositer (whiche prayer onely oure lyppes be accounted to with oure hertes vnderstandynge none at all and worshypped with a candell, and the offering of oure deuotion, in the place whiche they haue chosen to heare the supplications, and make petitions of their clientes theyn.)

But thou reader, thinke of the law of God, howe that it is all together spirituall, and so spirituall that it is neuer fulfilled with dedes or workes, vntill they flowe oute of thyne herte with as great loue toward thy neyghbour, for no deseruyng of his, yf though he be thyne enemy, as Christ loued the, and dyed for the, for no deseruyng of thyne, but euen when thou wast his. And in y meane tyme, thorowout all our infancie and childe hode in Christ, till we be grown vp into perfecte men in the full knowledg of Christe and full loue of Christe agayne, and of our neyghbours for hys sake, after the ensample of his loue to vs, remember that the fulfilling of y law is, a fast fapth in Christes blood, coupled with our profection, and submyttinge our selues to learne to do better.

And of the Gospell or promyses whiche thou meetest in the scripture, beleeue fast that God wil fulfill theyn vnto the, and that vnto the brether most iot, at the repentaunce of thyne hert, when thou turnest to hym, and forsaketh euell, euen of hys goodnesse and fatherly mercede vnto the, and not for thy flatterynge him with poccitryly workes of thyne owne fapnyng. So that a fast fapth onely without respecte of all workes, is the foregenesse bothe of the synne, whiche we dyd in tyme of ignorance with lust & consent to synne, and also of all the synne whiche we do by chance & of scaple, after y we are come to knowledg and haue professed the lawe oute of oure hertes. And al dedes serue onely for to helpe our neyghbours, and to tame our fleshe that we fall not to synne agayne, and to exercise oure soules in vertue, & not to make satisfaction to Godwarde for the synne that is once past.

And all other stories of the Wyble, withoute exception, are the practisyng of the lawe and of the Gospell, and are true and fapthful ensamples and sure earnest that God wyl euen so deale with vs, as he dyd with them, in all infirmities, in all temptacions, and in lyke cases and chaunces. Wher in yf we on the one syde, howe fatherly and tenderly and with all compassion God entreateth his elect whiche submytte theyn sel-

ues as scolers, to learne to walke in the wayes of hys lawes, and to kepe them of loue. If they forgatte theyn selues at a tyme, and wente agayne with all mercey. If they fell and hurte theyn selues, he healed theyn agayne with all compassion and tendernesse of hert. He hath oft brought great trybulacyon and aduersite vpon his electe: but all of fatherly loue onely, to teach theyn and to make them se their owne hertes, and þ synne that there laye hyd, that they might afterwarde scale hys mercey. For hys mercey wayped vpon them, to rydde them oute agayne, as sone as they were learned, & come to þ knowledge of their owne hertes, so that he neuer cast man awaye, howe depe so euer he hadde synned saue them onely whiche had fyrst cast the yocke of hys lawes from their neckes, with vtrer dyspauite and malpce of herte. Whiche ensamples howe comfortable are they for vs, when we be fallen into synne, and God is come vpon vs with a scourge, that we dyspceare not, but repent with full hope of mercey, after the ensamples of mercey that are gone before? And therefore they were wyrtten for oure lernynge, as testyfeth Daule. Romanorum. xv. to comforte vs, that we myght the better put our hope and trust in God, when we se, howe mercefull he hath bene in tyme past vnto our weake brethren that are gone before, in all their aduersities, neade, temptacions, pea, and horepble synnes, into whiche they nothe and then fell.

And on the other syde, pe se howe they that hardened their heartes, and synned of malpce, and refused mercey that was offered theyn, and had no power to repent, perished at the latter ende with all confusyon and shame mercedlesly. Whiche ensamples are verie good and necessary, to kepe vs in awe and drede in tyme of prosperite, as thou mayest se by Daule. i. Cor. x. that we abyde in the feare of God, and ware not wyld, and fall to vauptyes, and so synne, and prouoke God, and bynge his wrathe vpon vs.

And thyrdely pe se, in the practyse, howe as God is mercefull and longe sufferynge, euen so were al hys true prophetes & preachers, bearyng þ infirmities of their weake brethren, and their own wronges & iniuries with al pacyēce & long sufferynge, neuer castynge any of theyn of their backes, vntyll they synned agaynst the holpe Ghoste, malpceously persecutynge the open and manifest trouthe: contrarie vnto the ensample of the Dove, whiche in synnyng agaynst the GOD, and to quench the trueth of hys holpe spirit, is euer chiefe captyue and trouper blowe, to set other a worke, and sekerh onely hys owne freedom, lyberte, pryuelledge, wealth, prosperite, profyte, pleasure, pastyme, honour and gloire, with the bondage, thraldome, captyuetye, miserie, wretchednesse and vyle subiection of hys brethren: and in his owne cause is so feruent, so styffe and cruell, that he wyll not suffere one worde spoken agaynst hys false magesty wply inuencions and iuglyng ppoctysye to be vnauenged, though all christidome shoulde besette together by the eares, and shoulde cost he cared not howe manye hundred thousande they lyues.

Nowe that thou mayest reade Jonas frutesfullpe, and not as a poetesfable, but as an obligacyon betwene God and thy soule, as an earnest pnyge geuen the of God, that he wyll helpe the tynne of nede, yf thou tourne to hym, & as the worde of God the onely fode and lyfe of thy soule, this marke and note. First counte Jonas the frende of God, and a man chosen of God to testyfy his name vnto the world: but yet a yong scholer, weake and rude after the fashion of the apostles, whyle Christe was yet myth theat boydylpe, whiche thoughte Christ taught them euer to be meke, and to vnblye theyn selues, per offe stoune amonge them selues who shoulde be grea test. The sonnes of zebede woulde spt, the one on the ryght hande of Christe, and the other on the left. They woulde praye, that fye myghre descend from heauen, and consume the Samaritans.

When CHRIS T axed who saye men that I am, Peter answered: thou arte the sonne of the lyving GOD, as though Peter hadde bene as perfect as an Angel: But immediatly after, whē CHRIS T preached vnto theyn of hys deathe and passyon. Peter was angere and rebuked CHRIS T, and thought earnestly that he had rauid, and not mythe what he sayde, as at another tyme, when CHRIS T was so feruently busyed in healyng the people, that he hadde no lypser to eate, they went oute to holde him, supposynge that he had bene besyde him selfe. And one that caste oute Deuels in CHRIS T ES name, they forbadde, because he waiped not on them, so glorious were they yet.

And though CHRIS T taughte all waype to forgeue, yet Peter after longe gopng to scolle, axed whether men shoulde forgeue. vii. tymes, thynckynge that eight tymes had bene to much. And at the laste supper, Peter woulde haue dyed with CHRIS T, but yet withyn fewe howres after, he denyed him, both cowardly and shamefully. And after the same maner, though he had so longe hearde that no man myght auenge him selfe, but rather tourne the other cheke ro, then to smyte agayne, yet when CHRIS T was in takynge, Peter axed whether it were lawefull to smyte with the swearde, and caried none answer, but layed on rashly. So that though when we come fyrst vnto the knowledge of the trueth, and the peace is made betwene GOD and vs, and we loue hys lawes, and beleue and trust in him, as in our father, and haue good hertes vnto him, and be borne a newe in the spiritte, yet we are but children and yong scolers, weake and feble, and must haue lypser to growe in the spiritte, in knowledge, loue and in the dedes thereof, as yonge chyldren must haue tyme to growe in their bodyes.

And GOD our father and scolle master feedeth vs, and teacheth vs, accordyng vnto the capacite of our stomaches, and maketh vs to growe and ware perfecte, and syneth vs, and tryeth vs, as golde in the fyre of temptacions and trybulacions. As Moses wyrttesth Deuteronomii. viii. saying: Remember all the waie by whiche the LORD thy GOD caried the thys fourtie yeates in the wyldernes, to vnblye thee, and to tempte or prouoke the, that it myght be knowne what were in thyne harte. He brought the into aduersite, and made the an hongred, and then fedde the with Manna, whiche neyther thou, nor yet thy fathers euer knewe of, to teache that a man lyueth not by bread onely, but by al that proceedeth out of the mouth of GOD. For the promyses of GOD are lyfe vnto all that cleaue vnto them, muche more then is breade and bodye lye sustinawnt, as the iourney of the chyldren of Israel out of the lande of Egypte into the land promysed them, minisreth the notable ensamples, and that aboundauntlye, as doeth all the rest of the Bible also. Howe be it, it is impossible for us to beleue and to truste in the trueth of GODS promyses, vntyll he haue learned it in muche tribulacion, after that GOD hath deliuered him out therof agayne.

GOD therfore to teach Jonas, and to shew hym his owne herte, and to make him perfecte, and to instructe vs also by his ensample, sente hym out of the lande of Israel, where he was a prophete, to go amonge the Heathen people, and to the greatest and myghtyest cytye of the worlde then, called Ninue: to preach that with in fourtye dayes they shoulde all perishe for their synnes, and that the cytye shoulde be ouerthrowen. Whiche message the freewyll of Jonas had as moche power to do, as the weakest heried woman in the worlde hath power, yf she were commaunded, to leape into a tobbie of lyuinge snakes, and adders: as happelye yf GOD had commaunded Sarc to haue sacrificed her sonne Isaac, as he dyd Abraham, he woulde haue disputed with him, yf she had done it, or thoghe she were stronge ynough, yet many an holye saynt coulde not haue founde in their hertes, but wold haue disobeyed, and haue runne away from the presence of the commaundement of GOD with Jonas, yf they had bene so strongly tempted.

For Jonas thoughte of thys maner: loe, I am here a prophete vnto GODS people the Israelites. Whych though they haue GODS worde testified vnto theyn daylye, yet dyspyle it, and worshyppe GOD vnder the lykenesse of calues, and after all maner fashyons, saue after his owne worde, and therfore are of al nacyns the worste and most worthy of punishment. And yet GOD for loue of seue that are among them, and for his names sake spareth theym, and defendeth theym. Howe then shoulde GOD take so cruell vengeance on so great a multitude of the, to whome his name was neuer preached to, and therfore are not the tenth parte so euell as these? If I shall therefore go preache, so shall I lye, and shame my selfe and GOD thereto, and make them the more to dyspise GOD, and sette the lye by hym, and to be the more cruell vnto his people.

And vpon that ymaginacyon he fledde from the face of the presence of GOD: that is, out of the countrey where GOD was worshipped in, and fro the prosecutyng of GODS commaundement, and thought, I wyll gette me another waye amonge the Heathen people, and be no more a prophete, but lye at rest, and oute of all combrance. Neuerthelesse that GOD of al mercye which careth for his electe children, and turneth all vnto good to them, and smyteth the, to heale them agayne, and killeth them, to make them aloue agayne, and playeth with them (as a father doeth sometyme with his pouge ignorant children) and tempteth them, and proueth theym, to make them see theyr owne hartes, proued for Jonas, howe all thynges shoulde be.

When Jonas was cutted in to the wypppe, he layed him downe to slepe and to take his rest: that is, bys conscience was tossed betwene the commaundement of GOD whyche sente hym to Ninue, and bys selfe helycwysedone that dyswaded, and counsayled hym the contrarye, and at the last preuailed against the commaundement, and carped hym another waye, as a wypppe caughte betwene two trees, and as poetes sayne the mother of Achilles to be betwene dyuerse affections, while to aduenge her brothers death, she fought to sle her owne sonne. Where vpon for verie payne and tedynousnesse, he laye downe to slepe, for to putte the commaundement which so grieved & freate his conscience, out of mynde, as the nature of al weakened is, when they haue spynned a good, to seke all meanes with riot, reuell and pastyme, to dyspue the remembraunce of synne out of their thoughtes: or as Adam dyd, to couer their nakednes with apounis of pope holy workes. But God awoke him out of his dreame, and set his sinnes before his face.

For when that lot had caughte Jonas, the he sure that his synnes came to remembraunce agayne, and that bys conscience ragged no lesse then the waues of the sea. And then he thoughte that he onely, was a synner, and the Heathen that were in the wypppe none in respect of hym, and thoughte also, as verelye as he was fledde from GOD, that as verelye GOD had cast him awaye: for the syghte of the rodde maketh the naturall chyld not onelye to fe and to knowe ledge his faulte, but also to forget al his fathers olde mercy and kyndnesse. And then he confessed his synne openly, and had yet leure perswade alone, then that the other shoulde haue perswaded with him for his sake: and so of very desperacion to haue lyued any longer, bad cast hym into the sea betwixt, excepte they wold be lost also.

To speake of lottes, howe ferforth they are lawefull is a lyght question. Firste to vse them for the breaking of strepe, as when partenars, theyr goodes as equallye deuided as they can, take euery man his part by lotte, to auoyde all suspicion of discrepfullnesse: and as the Apostels in the first of the Actes, when they soughte another to succede Judas the traitour and two persons were presented, then to breake strepe, and to cast lottes all parties, dyd caste lottes whether shoulde be admitted, despyng GOD to temper them, and to take whome he knewe mooste meete, sepyng: they wyl not whether to preferre, or haplye coulde not all agre, ou eyther is lawefull and in all lyke cases. But to abuse them, vnto the remptyng of GOD, and to compell hym thereto with to vntre thynges whereof we stonde in doubte, when we haue no commaundement of him so to do, as these Heathen here dyd, though GOD turned it vnto his glory, can not be but euell.

The Heathen wyppmen astonied at the sight of the miracle, feared GOD, prayed to him, offered sacrifice and bowed bowes. And I doubt not, but that some of theym or haplye all came there by vnto the true knowlege, and true worshippinge of GOD, and were wounne to GOD in their soules. And thus GOD whiche is infinite mercifull in all his wayes wrought their soules healt he oute of the infirmite of Jonas, euen of his good wyl and purpose & loue, where with he loued them before the world was made, and not of chaunce, as it appeareth vnto the eyes of the ygnorant.

And that Jonas was three dayes and thre nyghtes in the belye of his fysh: we can not thereby proue vnto the Jewes and infidels or vnto

unto any man, that CHRIST muste therefore dye, and be buried, and rise agayne. But we vse the ensample and lykenes to strength the faythe of the weak. For he that beleueth the one canne not doubt in the other: in as muche as the hand of GOD was no lesse myghty in preseruinge Jonas alpye agaynste all naturall possyblyrie, and in deliuering hym safe oute of hys fyfthe, then in respyng up CHRIST agayne oute of hys sepulchre. And we maye describe the power and vertue of the resurrection therby, as Christe him selfe boordeth the similitude thereto. Mattheu. xii. sayinge vnto the Iewes that came aboute him: and desyred a sygne or a wonder from heuen, to certifie them that he was CHRIST: this euell and wedlocke breakyng nation (which breaketh the wedlocke of fayth, wherewith they be maryed vnto GOD, and beleue in their false workes) seke a sygne, but there shall no sygne be geuen them, saue the sygne of the prophete Jonas. For as Jonas was thre dayes and thre nyghtes in the belye of the whale, euen so shall the sonne of man be thre dayes and thre nyghtes in the hearte of the earth. Whiche was a watch worde, as we saye, and a sharpe threatenynge vnto the Iewes, and as muche to saye, as thus: ye harde herted Iewes seke a sygne: lo, thys shall be your sygne, as Jonas was rayled oute of the sepulchre of hys fyfthe, and then sente vnto the Mittinites to preache that they should peryshe, euen so shall Icriste agayne out of my sepulchre, and come and preache repentance vnto you. Se therefore when ye se the signe, that ye repent or elles ye shall surely peryshe and not escape. For though he the infirmities, whiche y now see in my fleshe, be a lette vnto youre fathers, ye shall yet then be without excuse, when ye se so greate a miracle and so great power of GOD shewed out vpon you. And so CHRIST came agayne after the resurrection in his spirite, and preacht repentance vnto them, by the mouth of his Apostles and disciples, and with miracles of the holy ghost. And al that repented not, perished shortly after, and the rest caried awaye captiue into all quarters of the worlde for an ensample, as ye se vnto this day.

And in lyke maner sence the worlde began, wheresoeuer repentance was offered and not receyued, there GOD toke cruell vengeance immediatly, as ye se in the floude of Noe, in the ouerthrowing of Sodom and Gomor, and all the countrey aboute, and as ye see of Egypte, of the Amorites, Canaanites, and afterwarde of the very Israelites, and then at the laste of the Iewes to, and of the Affirians and Bablonians, and so thorow out al the emperies of the worlde.

Bildas preached repentance vnto the olde Bytayne that inhabited Englond: they repented not, and therefore GOD sent in their enemies vpon them on euery syde, and destroyed them vp, and gaue the lande vnto other nacions. And great vengeance hath bene taken in that lande for synne sence that tyme.

Myclesse preached repentance vnto our fathers not long sence: they repented not, for their heartes were indurate, and theyr eyes blinded with their owne hope holpe ryghtwysenesse, wherby they had made theyr soules gaye agaynst the receyving agayne of the wycked spirit that byngeth souch worse then himselfe, whiche maketh þ latter ende worse then the begynnyng: for in open synnes there is hope of repentance, but in holpe pporryse none at all. But what folowed (they shewe their true and ryght kyngdome and set vp thre wronge kynges arowe, vnder which all the noble bloude was slayne vp, and haile the commens thereto, what in Fraunce, and what with their owne swerde, in fyghtyng among them selues for the crowne, and the cytyes and townes decayed, and the lande brought halfe into a wyldernesse, in respecte of that it was before.

And now CHRIST to preache repentance, is risen yet once agayne out of his sepulchre, in whiche the Pope hadde buried him and kepte him downe with hys pylars and poles, and all dysgyfnges of pporryse, with oyle, wiles and falsed, and with the swerde of al princes, whiche he had blinded with his false marchandise. And as I doubt not of the ensamples that are past, so am I sure that great wrath wyll folowe, excepte repentance turne it backe agayne and cease it.

When Jonas had bene in the fyfthe belye a space and the rage of his conscience was somewhat quieted and swaged, and he come to hym selfe agayne, and had receyued a lyric hope, the qualmes and pangues of desperation which went oute his herte, halfe ouer come, he prayed, as he maketh mencyon in the repte, sayinge: Jonas prayed vnto the LORDE hys GOD out of the belye of the fyfthe. But the wordes of that prayer are not here set. The prayer that here standeth in the repte, is the prayer of praise and thankesguyng, which he prayed and wrote when he was escaped and past all icopardye.

In the ende of whiche prayer he sayeth, I wyll sacrifice with the voyce of thanckesguyng, and paye that I haue vowed, that sayng cometh of the LORDE. For verely to confesse out of the hert, that all benefytes come of GOD, euen out of the goodnesse of hys mercy, and not deservynge of oure dedes, is the onely sacrifice that pleaseth GOD. And to beleue that all the Iewes vowed in theyr circumcision, as we in oure baptysme. Whiche vowe Jonas now taughte with experience, promyseth to paye. For those outward sacrifices of beastes, vnto whiche Jonas had haplye ascribed to muche before, were but feble and chyldishe thynges, and not ordeyned, that the workes of them selues shoulde be a seruice vnto the people, to put them in remembrance of this inward sacrifice of thanckes, and offayth to trust and beleue in GOD the onely sauer. Whiche signification when it was awaye, they were abominable and dyuellishe ydolatre and image seruice: as our ceremonies and sacramentes are become nowe to all that trust and beleue in the worke of them, and are not taughte the signyfyfycacions, to cōspye their soules with knowledg and the doctryne of GOD.

When Jonas was cast vpon land agayne, then his wyl was free, and had power to go whither GOD sente him, and to do what GOD bad, his owne imaginacions layd a part. For he had bene at a newescole, yea, and in a fornaue where he was purged of muche refuse and dross of fleshy wylsome, whiche respyed the wylsome of GOD, and led Jonas wyl contrary vnto the wyl of GOD. For as farre as we be blinded in Adam, we can not but seke and wyl oure owne profyte, pleasure and gloxy. And as farre as we be taught in the spirite, we can not but seke and wyl wyl the pleasure and glory of GOD onely.

And as the threedayes iourney of Ninue, whether it were in length or to go rounde about it, or thorow all the streets, I comitte vnto the discrecyon of other men. But I thynke that it was then the greatest cite of the worlde.

And that Jonas went a dayes iourney in the cite, I suppose he did it not in one day: but wēt fayre and easlye preachinge here a sermon, and there another, rebuked the synne of the people for whiche they must perishe.

And when thou arte come vnto the repentaunce of the Ninuites, there hast thou sure eneneste, that howe so euer angrey GOD be, yet he remembreth mercye vnto all that truly repent and beleue in mercye. Whiche ensample our sayoure CHRISTE also taketh in the teeth of the indurate Jewes, saying: the Ninuites shall ryse in iudgemente wth this nacyon and condemn them, for they repented at the preaching of Jonas, and beholde a greater then Jonas, here meanynge of him selfe. At whose preaching yet, though it were neuer so myghty to perse the herte, and for all hys myracles therto, the hardeneth Jewes coulde not repent: when the Heathen Ninuites repented at the bare preaching of Jonas, rebuking their synnes with oute anye myracle at all.

Why? For the Jewes had leuened the spirituall law of GOD, and wth their gloses had made it altogether earthy and fleshy, and so had set a baile or couerynge on Moses face, to shadowe and darcken the gloriouse bryghtnesse of hys countenaunce. It was synne to steale: but to robbe wedowes houses vnder a coloure of longe prayeng, and to polle in the name of offeringes, and to snare the people with intolerable constitucyons agaynst all loue, to ketch their money out of their purses, was no synne at all.

To smyte father and mother was synne. But to withdraw helpe from them at their neede, for blynd zeale of offering, vnto the profyte of the holy pharises was then as meritorious as it is now to lette all thy hymne chose whether they wyl synke or thyme, whyle thou buydest and makest godly foundacyons for holy people, which thou hast chose to be thy Christ, for to somple thy soule wth oyle of theyr cures were blessinges, & to be thy JESUS, for to saue thy soule from the purgatory of the bloude that onely purgeth synne, with their watchinge, fastynge, wolwarde goynge, and ryngynge at mydnyght. &c. wherewth yet they purge not theym selues from their couetousnes, pryde, lechery, or any vyce that thou seist amonge the laye people.

It was great synne for Christe to heale the people on the Sabbath daye vnto the glorye of GOD his father, but none at all for the to helpe their catell vnto their owne profyte. It was synne to cate with vnwashed handes, or on an vnwashed table, or out of an vnwashed dyshe, but to cate out of that purified dyshe, that whiche came of byrberye, thefre and extorcyon, was no synne at all.

It was exceddyng meritorious to make many disciples. But to teache them to feare God in his ordinaunces, had they no care at al.

The hye prelates so defended the ryghte of holy church, and so feared the people wth the curse of GOD and terribble paynes of hell, that no man durste leaue the vylest herbe in hys garden vnpryde. And the offeringe and thynges dedicate vnto GOD for the profyte of hys holy byears wherein was such estimation & reuerence, that it was much greater syn to sweare truly by them, then to forswere thy selfe by GOD, what vengeance then of GOD, and howe terrible and cruell damnyon thynke ye preached they to fall on them that had stolen so the holy thynges? And yet sayeth CHRISTE, that ryght wysnes and fapth, in hepyng promysse, mercye and indifferente iudgement were vterly troden vnderfoote, and cleane dyspyed of those blessed fathers, which so myghtely maynteyned Arons patrymonye, and had made it so prosperous and enuironed it, and waisted it aboute on euery syde wth þ feare of God, that no man durst touch it.

It was great holynes to garnyshe the sepulchres of the prophetes, and to condemne their owne fathers for slepyng of them, and yet were they them selues, for blinde zeale of their owne constitucion, as readye as their fathers to slea whosoever testified vnto them, the same truely which the prophetes testified vnto their fathers. So that Christ compareth all the ryght wysnes of those holy patriarkes, vnto the outward beuetye of a paynted sepulchre full of stenche and all vnclennes within. And specially to begyle a mans neyghbours in fute bargenyng and to wrappe and compasse him in wth cauteles of the lawe, was then as it is now in the kyngdome of the Pope. By þ reason wherof they excluded þ lawe of loue out of their hertes, and consequently all true repentaunce: for howe coulde they repent of that they coulde not se to be synne.

And on the other syde they had set vp a right wysnes of holpe worckes, to cleuse their soules withall, as the Pope sanctifyeth vs with holpe oyle, holy breade, holy salte, holy candels, holy dome ceremonies, holy dome blessinges, & wth whatsoeuer holynes thou wylt saue wth the holynes of Gods worde, whiche onely speaketh vnto the hert, and wth the soule his sylthynesse, and vnclennes of synne, and leadeth her by the way repentaunce vnto þ fountayne of Christs bloud to washe it awaye thorow fapth. By the reason of whiche false ryght wysnesse they were disobedient vnto the ryght wysnes of God, which is þ forgyuenes of syn in CHRISTES bloud, and coulde not beleue it. And so thorow fleshely interpretynge the lawe and false imagined right wysnes, their heartes were hardened, and made as stonye as claye in an hote founnace of fyre, that they coulde receaue neither repetaunce nor fapth or any maner of grace at all.

But the Heathen Ninuites, though they were blinded wth luses a good, yet were in those. iii. poyntes vncorrupte and vnhardened, and therefore wth the onely preaching of Jonas came vnto the knowledge of their synnes, and confessed them, and repented truly, and tourned euery man frō his euell dedes, and declared their sorow of herte, and true repentaunce, with their dedes, whiche they dyd out of fapth and hope of forgyuenes, chastysing their bodies with prayer and fastynge, and wth takynge all pleasures from the fleshe trustynge, as GOD was angry for theyr wyckednesse, euen so should he forgyue them of his mercye yf they repented and forsoke their mysle lyving.

And in the laste ende of all, thou hast yet a godly ensample of leenyng, to se how earthly Jonas is slayn for al his tryenge in the tobales belye. He was so sore dyspleased, because the Ninuites

res perished not, that he was werc of his lyfe, & myshed after death for very sorowe, that he hath lost the glorie of hys propheteinge, in that hys prophete came not to passe. But GOD rebuked him with a lykenes, saying: it greueth thine hearte for the losse of a vyle whodde or spraye wheron thou bestowdest no labour or coste, neyther was it thine hande worke. How much more then shouldest thou greue myne heart the losse of so great a myltitudo of innocentes as are in Miniuites, whiche are all myne handes worke. Nay Jonas. I am GOD ouer all, and father as wel vnto the Heathen as vnto the Jewes, and merciful to all, and warne yet I smyte, neyther thert I so cruelly by any prophet, but that I wyl for geue yf they repente and are merce: neyther on the other syde, what so euer, I promyse, wyl I fulfyll it, saue for theyr sake onely which trust in me, and submit them selues to kepe my lawes of very loue, as natur all childzen.

On this maner to reder the scripture is the eyght vse therof, and why the holy ghost caused it to be wyrtten. That is, that thou first seke out the lawe, that GOD wyl haue the to do, interpretinge it spirituallie wythout glofe or coueryng the byghnes of Moses face, so that thou seke in thine heart, how that it is damnable synne before GOD, not to loue thine neyghbour that is thine enemy, as surely as CHRIST loved thee, and that not to loue thine neyghbour in thine herte, is to haue committed alreadye all synne agaynst hym. And therfore vntill that loue be come, thou must knowledg vnsaynedly that there is synne in the best dede thou doest. And it muste earnestlye greue thine hearte, and thou must walke al thy good dedes in CHRISTES bloude yet they can be pure and an acceptable sacrifice vnto GOD, and must desyre GOD the father for his sake, to take thy dedes a worthe, and to pardone the imperfectenes of them, and to geue the power to do them better, and with more frequent loue.

And on the other side thou must searche diligently for the promyses of merce, whiche GOD hath promysed the agayne. Whiche two poyntes, that is to wete, the lawe spirituallie interpreted, howe that all is dampnable synne, that is not vnsayned loue out of the grounde and botome of the herte, after the ensample of CHRISTES loue to vs, because we be all equallye created and formed of one GOD our father, and indifferently boughte and redeemed wyth one blood of our Saviour JESUS CHRIST: and that the promyses be geuen vnto a repentynge soule, that they resteth and longeth after theym of the pure and fatherlye merce of GOD, thow oure faythe onelye wythoute all deservynge of oure dedes or merces of oure workes, but for CHRISTES sake alone, and for the merces and deservynge of hys workes, deathe and paffions that he suffered altogether for vs, and not for him selfe: whiche two poyntes I say, if they be wyrtten in thine herte are the eyes whiche so open all the scripture vnto the, that no creature can loke the oute, and with whiche thou shalt go in and out, and fynde pasture and fode euery where. And yf these lessons be not wyrtten in thine hearte, then is all the scripture shutt up, as a corne in the shele, so that thou mayest read it and commen of it, and reherse all the storyes of it, and dyspute so clytpe and be a proufoude Sophister, and yet vnderstande not one

Not therof.

And thirdly that thou take the storyes and lyues which are conteyned in the Bible, for sure and vndoubted ensamples that GOD so wyl deale with vs vnto the worldes ende.

Herewith Reader farewell, and be commended vnto GOD, and vnto the grace of hys spirite. And firste se thou stoppe not thine eares vnto the callinge of GOD, and thou harden not thine herte begiled with fleshely interpretinge of the lawe, and false imagined and pporrithe rightwysenes, and so the Miniuites tye wyth thee at the daye of Judgemente and condempne thee.

And secondarilye, yf thou fynde oughte as myse, when thou seest thy selfe in the glasse of GODS worde, thynke it compendious wylde-dome, to amende the same betymes, monyfyed and warned by the ensample of othere menne, rather then to tary vntill thou be beaten also.

And thirdly if it shall so chaunce, that the world lustes of thy fleshe shall blind the, and carry the cleue awaye with them for a tyme: yet at the latter ende, when the GOD of all merce shall haue compassed the in on euery syde wyth temptacions, tribulacion, aduersities and combastice, to bring the home agayne vnto thine own herte, and to set thy spynnes whiche thou wouldest so sayne couer and put out of mynde with delectacion of voluptuous pastymes, before the eyes of thy conscience, then call the faythfull ensample of Jonas, and all lyke storyes vnto thy remembrance, and wyth Jonas turne vnto thy father that smote the not to cast the awaye, but to lape a corospe, and a freatpuge plaister vnto the pock that lay hyd and fret inwarde, to drawe the dyscase out, and to make it appeare, that thou mightest seale thy lykenes and the daunger thereof, and to come and receyue the healyng playster of merce.

And forgette not that whatsoeuer ensample of merce GOD hath shewed sence the begynnyng of the worlde, the same is promysed the yf thou wylt in lyke maner tounce agayne, and receyue it as they dyd. And with Jonas be knowne of thy synne and confesse it and knowledg it vnto thy father.

And as the lawe whiche freeth thy conscience, is in thine hearte, and is none outward thinge, euen to seke within thine herte, the plaister of merce, the promyses of forgouenesse in our Sauoure JESUS CHRIST, accordyng vnto all the ensamples of merce, that are gone before.

And wyth Jonas let them that wayte on vanities, and seke GOD here and there and in euery temple saue in their hertes, goe, and seke thou the testament of GOD in thine herte. For in thine herte, is the worde of the lawe, and in thine herte is the worde of fayth in the promyses of merce in JESUS CHRIST. So that yf thou confesse wyth a repentynge hearte and knowledg, and surely beleue that JESUS is LORD ouer all synne, thou art safe.

And synallie when the rage of thy conscience is ceased and quyeted with false faythe in the promyses of merce, then offer wyth Jonas the offeringe of prayse and thankes geuyng, & paye the bove of thy baptisme, that GOD onelye saueh of his onely merce and goodnes: that is, beleue redfastlye and preache constantlye, that it is GOD ouely that smyteth, and GOD

onely that healeth: ascribunge the cause of thy tribulacion vnto thyne owne synne, and þ cause of thy deliuerance vnto the mercede of God.

And beware of the leuen that saythe we haue power in oure fre wyll before the preachynge of the gospel, to deserue grace, to kepe the lawe of congregate, or God to be vnyghtheous. And saye with John in the fyrste, that as the lawe was geuen by Moses, euen so grace to fulfill it, is geuen by Christe. And when they saye oure dedes with grace deserue heauē: saye thou with Paul. Rom. vi. that euerylastinge lyfe is the gifte of God thowme Iesus Christe our Lorde, & that we be made sonnes by fayth. John. i. and therefore heires of God with Christ. Rom. viii. And say that we receyue all of God throughe saythe that foloweth repentaunce, and that we do not our workes vnto God, but ether vnto oure selues, to slep the sin that remaineth in the flesch and to waite perfecte, ether vnto oure neygghbours whiche do as muche for vs agayne in other thynges. And when a man excheadeth in gyftes of grace, let him vnderstande that they be geue him, as well for his owne brethern, as for him selfe: as though he all the breade be compted vnto the panter, yet for his felowes with him, whiche geue the thankes vnto the Lord and recompence the panter agayne wether hynde seruyce in thei offices. And when they saye that Christe hath made no satisfaccion for the synne we do after oure baptyme: saye þ with the doctryne of Paul, that in oure baptyme we receyue the mercyes of Christes deathe thowme repentaunce and fayth of whiche two, baptyme is the sygne. And though when we synne offraile after oure baptyme we receyue that sygne no more, yet we be reuiewed agayne thowme repentaunce and saythe in Christes bloude, whiche etwaine, the sygne of baptyme euer continued among vs in baptysme oure yonge chyldren doer euer kepe in mynde and call vs backe agayne vnto oure profession yf we be goune astraye, and promyseth vs forgiveness. Nether can actuall synne be washed awaye with our workes, but with Christes bloude: nether can there be any other sacrifice or satisfaccion to Godwarde for them saue Christes bloude. For as muche as we can do no workes vnto God, but receyue onely of his mercede with oure repentaunce sayth, thowme Iesus Christe oure Lord and oure helpe sauer, vnto whome and vnto God oure father thowme hym and vnto his holy spirite, that onely purgeth, sanctifieth and washeth vs in the innocēt bloude of our redēpcion, be prayse for euer Amen.

The booke of the prophete Jonas.

The fyrste Chapter.

Of the synge of Jonas when he was sente to preache. A tempest aryseth, and casteth hym in the sea for his dysobedience.

he word of the

Lorde came vnto * Jonas the sonne of Amithai, sayig: * Arise, & get the to Ninue þ great cite: and preache vnto them, howe that their wyckednesse is come vp before me. And Jonas made hym readye to ste vnto * Charlis from the presence of the Lorde, and gat hym downe to Joppa: where he founde a shyppe readye for to go vnto Charlis. So he payde his fare, and wente abrode, þ he myghte go with them vnto Charlis, from the presence of the LORDE. But the Lorde hurled a greate wynde in to the sea, and there was a mightye tempest in the sea: so that the shyppe was in jeopardy of goynge in peces. Then the maryners were afrayde, and cryed euery man vnto his god: and the goodes that were in the shyppe, they caste in to the sea, to lyghten it of them. But Jonas gat him vnder the hatches, where he layed him downe and slombred.

So the master of the shyp came to hym and sayde vnto hym: why slombe, rest thou? Up, call vpon thy God: yf God (happely) wyll thyncke vpon vs, that we perishe not. And they sayde one to another: come, let vs cast lottes: that we maye knowe, for whose cause we are thus troubled. * And so they caste lottes, and the lot fel vpon Jonas.

Then sayde they vnto him: tel vs, for whose cause are we thus troubled? what is thine occupacion? whence comest thou? what countre man art thou, and of what nacyon? He answered them: I am an Ebzue, and I feare the Lorde God of heauen, whyche made bothe the sea & drye lande. Then were the men exceddyngly afrayed, and said vnto him: why dydest thou so? (for they knewe, that he was fled from the presence of the Lorde, because he had tolde them) and sayde mozeouer vnto hym: What shall we do vnto the, that the sea maye ceasse fro troublunge vs: (for the sea wroughte and was troublous) he answered the: Take me, and caste me in to the sea, so shall it let you be in rest: for I wote, it is for my sake, that this greate tempest is come vpon you.

Neuerthelesse, the men assayed with rowynge, to brynge the shyppe to lade: but it woulde not be, because the sea wroughte so, and was so troublous agaynst them. Wherfore they cried vnto the Lorde, and sayde: * O Lorde, let vs not perishe for this mans death, neither laye thou innocent bloude vnto our charge: for þ, O Lorde, hast done, euen as thy pleasure was.

So they toke Jonas, and caste him in to the sea, and the sea lefte ragynge. And the men feared þ Lorde exceddyngly, doyng sacrifice and makynge vowes vnto the Lorde.

The.ii. Chapter.

Jonas is swallowed of a whale. The prayer of Jonas.

At the Lorde prepared a great fythe, to swallow vpon Jonas. So was Jonas in the bely of þ fish, thre dayes & thre nyghtes. And Jonas prayed vnto the Lorde his God, out of the fishes bely, and sayde: In my trouble I called vnto the Lorde, and he herde me: out of the bely of þ hel I cried, and thou herdest my voyce. Thou haddest caste me downe depe in the myddest of þ sea, and the floude compassed me aboute: yea, all thy waues & roules of water wente ouer me, I thoughte that I had bene caste awaye out of thy sight: but I wyl yet againe loke towarde thy holy temple.

The waters compassed me, euen to the very soule: the depe lay about me, and the wedes were wrapte aboute myne heade. I wente downe to the bottom of the hylles, and was barred in with earthe for euer. But þ, O Lorde my God, haste broughte vpon my lyfe agayne out of corrupcion. When my soule fainted within me, I thoughte vpon the Lorde: and my prayer came in vnto the, euen in to thy holy temple. They that holde of vayne vanyties, wyl forsake hys mercye. But I wyl do the sacrifice with the voyce of thankesgeyng, and wyl paye that I haue bowed: for why? saluacion commeth of the Lorde. And the Lorde spake vnto the fyth, and it caste out Jonas agayne vpon the drye lande.

The.iii. Chapter.

Jonas is sende againe to Riniue. The repentance of the kynge of Riniue.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jonas agayne, sayinge: * bp, and get the to Riniue that great cite, and preache vnto the the preachynge which I bade the. So Jonas arose, and went to Riniue at the Lordes commaundement. Riniue was a great cite vnto God, namely, of thre dayes iourney.

And Jonas wente to, and entred in to the cite: eue a dayes iourney, and cryed, sayinge: There are yet .xl. dayes and then shall Riniue be ouerthrowen. * And the people of Riniue beleued God, and proclaimed fastynge, & atayed them selues in sacke clothe, as well the greates as the small of them. And the tydings came vnto the kynge of Riniue, whiche arose out of hys seate, and dyd his apparell of, and put on sacke clothe, and sate hym downe in ashes.

And it was cryed and commaunded in Riniue, by the auctorite of the kyng and his lordes, sayinge: * se that nether man oz beest, ore oz shepe taste ought at al: & that they nether fede nor dryncke water: but put on sacke clothe both man and beest, and crie mightely vnto God: * yea, se that euery man turne from hys euil waye, and from the wyckednesse, that he hath in hande.

Who can tell? God maye turne, and repente, and cease fro his seate wrath, that we perishe not. And when God sawe their woorkes, howe they turned from their wicked wayes: he repented on the euil, whiche he sayde he woulde do vnto them, and dyd it not.

Samaria. Of Michias. Jo. clxxviii.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Jonas is reproc'd of God.

And therefore Jonas was sore discontent and angrie. And he prayed vnto the Lorde, and sayde: O Lorde, was not this my sayinge (I praye the) when I was yet in my countrey? Therefore I hastened rather to flee vnto Tharsis, * for I knowe well ynough that thou arte a mercifull God, full of compassion, longe sufferinge, and of great kindnesse, and repentest when thou shouldest take punishment. And now * O Lorde, take my lyfe from me (I beseeche the) for I had rather dye then lyue. Then sayde the Lorde: art thou so angrie? And Jonas gat him oute of the cite, and sat downe on the east side therof: and there made him a boothe, and sat vnder it in þe shadowe, tyll he myghte se, what shoulde chaunce vnto the cite.

And the Lorde God prepared a wyldc vyne, whiche sprange vp ouer Jonas, that he myght haue shadowe aboute his heade, to deliuer him oute of his payne. And Jonas was excedinge glade of the wyldc vyne. But vpon the nexte morow against the sprynge of the daye. The Lorde ordered a worme, whiche smote the wyldc vyne, so that it withered awaye. And when the Sunne was vp, God prepared a feruente easte winde: & the Sunne bet ouer þe heade of Jonas, þe he fainted agayne, & wysshed vnto hys soule, þe he might dye, & sayd: It is better for me to dye, the to lyue.

And God sayde vnto Jonas: Arte þe so angrie for the wilde vine? And he said: Yea, verie angrie am I, euen vnto the death. And the Lorde sayde: thou haste compassion vpon a wyldc vyne, wher on thou bestowdest no labour, nor madest it growe: whiche sprange vp in one nyghte and perished in another: And shoulde not I then haue compassion vpon Ninue that greate cite, wherin there are aboue an. C. and xx. thousande personnes, that knowe not their ryght hande from the left, besydes muche catell?

The ende of the Prophecie of Jonas.

The booke of the Prophet Michias.

The fyrste Chapter.

Of the destruction of Samaria because of their Idolatrye.

This is the word of the Lorde, þe came vnto Michias the Morastite, in the dayes of * Iothan, * Ahas and * Iehozekiah kynges of Iuda: whiche was shewed him vpon Samaria and Ierusalem. * Hears all the peoplo, marcke this wel O earth, and al that therein is: Yea, the Lorde God him selfe be wytnesse amonge you, euen the Lorde from his holy temple. For why? * beholde, the Lord shal go oute of hys place, and come downe, and treade vpon the hye thynges of the earth. The mountaynes shal consume vnder him, and the valleyes shal cleue a lunder: lyke as ware consumeth at the fyre, and as the waters runne downewarde. And all this shal be for þe wickednesse of Iacob, and the synnes of the house of Irael.

But what is the wickednesse of Iacob? Is not * Samaria? Whiche are the hye places of Iuda? Is not * Ierusalem? Therefore I shal make Samaria an heape of stones in þe felde, to laye aboute the vineyarde: her stones shal I cast in to the valley, & dyscouer her foundations. All her Images shal be broken downe & al her wympnynges shal be burnt in þe fyre: yea, al her Idols wyl I destroy: for why, * they are gathered oute of the hyre of an whoze, and in to an whores hyre shal they be turned agayne. Wherefore I wil mourne & make lamentacion, bare & naked wil I go: I must mourne like the dragos, and take sorow as þe Estriches: for their wounde is past remedy: And why? it is come in to Iuda, and hath touched the porte of my peoplo at Ierusalem already. * Wepe not, lest they at Geth perceauie it.

Thou at Betaphra, welter thy selfe in the dust and ashes. Thou that dwelst at Sephir, get the hence with shame. The proude shal boost no more for very sorowe: and why? her neygh-boure shal take fro her what she hath.

The rebellious cytie hopeth, y it shal not be so euell: but for all that, y plage shal come from the Lorde, euen in to the porte of Ierusalem. The greates noyle of the charrettes shal feare them, that dwell at * Lachis, whiche is an occasion of the synne of the doughter of Sion, for in the came vp the wyckednesses of Israel. Yea, she sent her courtiers into the lande of Geth.

D The houses of lyes wil dysceane the kynges of Israel. And as for the (thou that dwellest at Moza) I shal bringe a possessor vpon the, and the plage of Israel shal reache vnto Mo-

The. ii. Chapter.

Threatnynges agaynst the synful people.

Do vnto them, that I imagin to do harme, and deuyle vngaciousnesse vpon their beddes, to perfourme it in y cleare daye: for they power is agaynst God. When they couet to haue lande, * they take it by violence, they robbe men of their houses.

Thus they oppresse a man for hys house, and euery man for his heritage.
Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: Be-holde * agaynst this householde haue I deuyled a plage, wherout ye shal not plucke youre neckes: Ye shal nomore go so proude, for it wyl be a perous tyme. In that daye shal this terme be bled, and a mournynge shalbe made ou-er you on this maner: We be vttely desolate, the porcion of my people is trasslated. Whan wyl he parte vnto vs the lande, that he hath taken from vs?

Neuerthelesse * there shalbe no man to deuylde the thy porcion in the congregacion of the Lorde. Tush, holde youre tunge (saye they.) It shal not fal vpon this people, we shal not come so to confusion, sayeth the house of Jacob.

Is the spirite of the Lorde so cleane awaye: or is he so mynded? Trueth it is, my wordes are frendly vnto them that lyue ryghte: but my people doeth y constrarie, therfore muste I take parte a-gaynst them: for they take awaye bothe cote and cloke from the synple.

Ye haue turned youre selues to fyghte, the women of my people haue ye shot out from their good houses, and taken awaye my excellent gyses from theyr children. Up, get you hence, for here shal ye haue no rest.

Because of their Idolatre they are corrupte, and shal miserably perishe.
If I were a fleshy felowe, & a preacher of lyes, and tolde them that they might lyt bebyng and bollyng, & be dzoned ken: O that were a prophete for thys people. But I wyl gather the in dede, O Jacob, and dzyue the remnaunte of Israel al together. I shal carpe the one with another, as a flocke in the folde, and as the catell in their stalles, that they may be dysquyeted of other men.
Who so breaketh the gappe, he shal go before. They shal breake vp the porte, and go in and out at it. Their kyng shal go before them, and the Lord shal be vpon the heade of them.

The. iii. Chapter.

Agaynst the tiranny of Princes, and false prophets.

Hear, O ye heades of y house of Jacob, and ye leders of the house of Israel: * Shoulde not ye know what were lawful and right? * But ye hate the good, and loue the euell: ye plucke of mennes skynnes, and the flesh from their bones:
ye eate the flesh of my people, and slaye of their skynne: ye breake their bones, ye choppe them in peces as it were into a cauldre, and as flesh into a pot. Now the tyme shal come, * that when they cal vnto the Lord, he shal not heare the, * but hyde his face from them, because that thorow their owne Imaginacions they haue dealte so wyckedly.

And as concernynge the prophetes that dysceane my people, thus y Lorde sayeth agaynst them: * When they haue any thyng to byte vpon, the they preache that all shalbe well: but yf a man put not some thyng in to theyr

The. vii. Chapter.

A complaynte of the lytell nombre of the righteous, againſt the trueth ought we not to holde with oure greateſt frendes.

M is me: I am become as one, that goeth a gleanynge in the harueſt. There are no grapes to eate, yet wouid I ſayne (with al my hearte) haue of the beſt frute. * There is not a godlye man vpon earth, there is not one ryghteous amonge me. They labour all to thed bloude, and euery man huteth his brother to death: yet they ſaye they do wel when they do euil. As the prynce wyll, ſo ſayeth the iudge: that he maye do hym a pleaſure agayne. The greate mā ſpeaketh what his hearte deſpyeth: and the hearers alowe hym. The beſt of them is but as a thistle, and the moſt ryghteous of them is but as a byer in the hedge. But when the daye of thy preachers commeth, that thou ſhalte be viſyted: the ſhal they be waſted awaye. * Let no man belue his frende, nor put hys conſydence in a prynce. Kepe the porte of thy mouth, from her that lyeth in thy boſome: * for the ſonne ſhal put hys father to dyſhonoure, & doughter ſhal ryle agaynſte her mother, the doughter in lawe agaynſte her mother in lawe: and a mans foes ſhalbe euen they of his owne houſholde.

Nevertheless I wil loke vp vnto the Lorde, I wyll patiently abyde God my ſauoure: my god ſhal heare me. * Thou enemye of myne, reioyce not at my fall, for I ſhal get vp agayne: & though I ſyt in darckneſſe, yet the Lorde is my lyght. I wil beare the punyſhmente of the Lorde (for why, I haue offended hym) tyll he ſyt in iudgement vpon my cauſe, and ſe that I haue ryghte. He wyll bynge me forth to the lyghte, and I ſhal ſe his ryghteouſneſſe.

She that is myne enemy ſhall loke vpon it, and be confounded, which now ſayeth. * Where is thy Lorde God? Myne eyes ſhall beholde her, when ſhe ſhalbe troden downe, as the claye in the ſtretes. * The tyme wyll come, that thy gappes ſhal be made vp, and the lawe ſhall go abrode: and at that tyme ſhall they come vnto the, fro Aſſur vnto the ſtronge cities, and from the ſtronge ci- tytes vnto the ryuer: from the one ſea to p other, fro p one mountayne to p other.

Not withſtandynge the lande muſt be waſted, becauſe of them that dwell therein, and for the frutes of their owne Imaginations. Therefore fede thy peo- ple with thy rodde, the ſlocke of thyne herprage whyche dwell deſolate in the wodde: that they maye be fedde vpon the mounte of Charmell, Baſan & Gi- lead as afore tyme. Maſcelous thyn- ges wyll I ſhewe them, * lyke as when they came oute of Egypt. This ſhal the heathen ſe, and be aſhamed for al their power, ſo that they ſhall laye theyr hande vpon their mouth, and ſtoppe theyr eares. They ſhal lycke the duſt lyke a ſerpente, and as the wormes of the earthe, that tremble in their holes. They ſhalbe afrayed of the Lorde oure God, and they ſhal feare the.

Where is there ſuch a God as thou? that pardoneth wyckednes, and forge- ueth the offences of the remnaunte of thyne herprage: He kepeth not hys wrath for euer. And why? hys deſy- te is to haue compaſſion: * he ſhall turne agayne, and be mercyfull to vs: he ſhall put downe oure wyckedneſſes, and caſte all oure ſynnes in to the bo- tome of the ſea. Thou ſhalte kepe thy trueth with Jacob, and thy mercy for A- braham, lyke as thou haſt Iwozne vnto oute fathers lōnge agoe.

The booke of the prophet Nahum.

The fyrste Chapter.

Of the destruction of Ninue and of the destruction of Israel.

his is the heuy burthen of Ninue, whiche Nahum of Elchos did write as he saw it. * The Lord is a gelous God, and a taker of vengeance:

yea, a taker of vengeance is the Lord, and wrothful. * The Lorde taketh vengeance of his enemyes, and reserueth displeasure for his aduersaries. * The Lorde suffreth longe, he is of great power, and so innocente that he * leaueth no man faultlesse before hym. The Lord goeth forth in tempest and stormy weather, the cloudes are the duste of hye fete. When he reynoueth the sea, he drieth it vp, and turneth all the foudes to drye lande. Basan is desolate, Charnel and the pleasure of Libanus wasteth away. The mountaynes tremble for him, the hylles consume. At the syghte of him, the earth quaketh: yea, y whole worlde, and all that dwel therein. * Who may endure, before his wrath? Or who is able to abide his grime displeasure? His anger taketh on lyke fyre, and the harde rockes burst in lūder before him.

Full gracious is the Lorde, and a stronge holde in the time of trouble, he knoweth the that put their trust in him:

when the foudes renneth ouer, and destroyeth the place, & when the darcknesse foloweth stil vpon his enemyes. What do ye imagine then against the Lord on this maner? (Tush, when he hath once made an ende, there shall come no more trouble.) For lyke as the thornes that sticke together, and as the drye strawe, so shall the dronckardes be consumed together, euē whē they be ful. There come out of the such as imagine mischief, & geue vngacious counsel against y Lord.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lord: Let them be as wel prepared, yea, and as many as they can, yet shall they be hewen downe, and passe awaye. And as for the, I wil bere the, but not vtterly destroye the. And now wyl I breake hye rodde from thy backe, and burst thy bowdes in sonder. But the Lord hath geuen a commaundement concerninge thee, that there shal come no more seide of thy name. * The carued and caste images wil I rote oute of the house of thy God. Thy graue shall I prepare for the, and thou shalt be confounded.

The. ii. Chapter.

Describeth the victorie of the Caldees against the Ninuities.

Bholde, * vpon the mountaynes come the fete of him, that bringeth good tidings, and preacheth peace. O Iuda, kepe thy holy daies, perfourme thy promysse: for Belial shal come no more in the, he is vtterly roted oute.

The scatterer shal come vp against the, and lay sege to the castel. Loke thou wel to y stetes, make thy loynes strong, arme thy selfe with all thy myghte: for the Lorde shal restore againe the glorie of Jacob, lyke as the glorie of Israel.

The destroyers haue broke the downe, and matted the wyne braunches. The mylde of his gyauntes glystereth, hye men of warre are clothed in purple.

His charettes are as fyre, when he maketh him forward, his archers are wel deckte and trymmed. The charettes rolle vpon the stetes, and welter in the hye wayes. They are to loke vpon lyke cressettes of fyre, and go swyftlie, as the lyghtenynge. When he doth but warne his gyauntes, they fall in their araye, and hastely they clyme vp y walles: yea, Beholde, I wil vpon the, sayeth the Lorde of hostes, and wil set fyre vpon thy charettes, that they shall smoke with all, and the swearde shall deuoure the yonge Lyons. I wil make an ende of thy spoylunge frome oute of the earth, and the voyce of thy melaungers shall no more be hearde.

The.iii. Chapter.

The fall of Niniue.

* To that bloudthrusty ctyte, whiche is all full of lyes and robberye, & wil not leaue of fro rauishynge. There a man maye heare scourginge, rushynge, the noyse of þ wheelles, the cryng of the hoxles, and the rollyng of the Charettes. There the horsmen gette vp wyth naked sweardes, and glysterynge speares: There lyeth a myltitude slayne, and a greate heape of dead bodyes: there is no ende of deed carcases, yea, men fall vpon their bodies: And that for the greate and manyfolde whordome, of the fayze and beutyfull harlot: Whiche is a maistrisse of witchcrafte, yea, and selleth the people thowwe her whordome, and the nacyons thowwe her witchcrafte.

* Beholde, I wyll vpon thee (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) and wyll pull thy clothes ouer thy heade: That I maye shewe thy nakednesse amonge the heathen, and thy shame amonge the kynges domes. I wyll caste dyrt vpon thee, to make the be abhorred, and a galyng stocke: Yea, all they that loke vpon the, shall starte backe, and saye: Niniue is destroyed.

Who wyll haue ppyte vpon thee: Where shall I seke one to comforte thee: Arte thou better then the great ctyte of * Alexandria: That laye in the waters, and had the waters rounde aboute it: whiche was strongely fenced and walled with the sea. Ethiopia and Egypte were her strength, & þ exceeding great aboue measure. Aphyrica and Lybya, were her helpers, yet was she dryuen awaye, and broughte into captiuite: her younge chyldren were smytten downe at the heade of euery strete, the lottes were caste for the most auntyent men in her, and all her myghty men were bounde in chaynes. Euen so shalt thou also be droncken, & hyde thy selfe, and seke some helpe agaynste thyne enemye. All thy stronge cities shall be lyke fygge trees wyth ripe fygges: whiche when a man shaketh, they shall fall into the mouthe of the eater.

Beholde, thy people with in the are but women: The portes of thy lande shalbe opened vnto thyne enemyes, and the fyre shal deuoure thy barres. Draw water nowe agaynste thou be beseged, make vp thy strouge holdes, goe into the claye, temper the morter, make stronge byrcke: * Yet the fyre shall consume the, the sweerde shall destroye the, yea, as the locuste doeth, so shall it eate the vp. It shall fall heuelp vpon thee as the locustes, yea, ryght heuelp shall it fall vpon the, euen as the greshoppers. ## The booke of the prophete Abacucke.

The .i. Chapter.

A complaynte agaynst Israel.

Thys is the heuie burthen, whyche þe prophete Abacuc dyd see. O Lorde, * howe shall I crye, and thou wylte not heare: * howe longe
shall I complayne
vnto the, sufferynge wronge, and thou wylte not helpe? Why lettest thou me see werynesse and labour: * Tyrannye and violence are before me, power ouergoeth ryght: for the lawe is toarne in peces, and there can no ryght iudgmet goe forth. And why? The vngodlye is more set by then the ryghteous: this is the cause, that wronge iudgement pro-cedeth. * Beholde, amonge the heathen, and loke well: wonder at it, and be abashed: for I wyl doe a thinge in your time, whiche though it be tolde to you, ye shall not beleue.

* For so, I wyl rayse vp the Chalde-es, that bitter and swifte people: which shall goe as wyde as the lande is, to take possession of the dwellinge places; that be not their owne. A grymme and boysterous people is it, these shall syt in iudgement and punyshe. Their horses are swifter then the Cattes of the mountayne, and byte faster then the * wolues in the euenynge. Their horses men come by greates heapes from farre, they flee hastelye to deuoure as the Jegle. They come al to spoyle: oute of the commeth an East wynde, whiche bloweth and gathereth their captiues, like as the sande. They shall mocke the kinges, and laughe the prynces to scozne.

They shall not set by any stronge holde, for they shall laye ordinaunce agaynst it, and take it. * Then shall they take a freshe corage vnto them, to goe forth and to doe more euell, and so ascribe þe power vnto their God.

But thou O Lorde my God, my * holpe one thou arte frome the begyn-nyng, therefore shall we not dye. O Lorde, thou haste ordered them for a punysment, and sette them to reprove the myghty. Thine eyes are clene, thou mayest not see euell, thou canste not be-holde the thyng þe is wycked. * Wherefore then dost thou looke vpon the vngodlye, and holdest thy tongue, when the wicked deuoureth the man that is better then hym selfe? Thou makest me as the fysh in the sea, and lyke as the creppynge beastes, that haue no gyde.
They take vp al with their angle, they catche it in their net, and gather it in their parne: Whereof they reioyce and are glad. Therefore offer they vnto the net, and doe sacrifice vnto their parne:
because that thorowe it their porcion is become so fat, & theyr meate so plenteous. Wherefore they cast out their net agayne, and neuer cease to slaye the people.

The .ii. Chapter.

Of the vision of the prophete. Agaynst pollynge, couetousnes, and Idolatrye.

I stode vpon my watche, & set me vpon my bulwarke, to looke and see what he woulde saye vnto me, and what answer I shoulde geue hym that reproveth me. But the Lorde answered me, and sayde: Wryte the vision playnlye vpon thy tables;
that who so cometh by, maye rede it:
for the vision is yet farre off for a tyme, but at the laste it shall come to passe, and not fayne. * And thoughe he

Beholde, who so wyl not beleue, hys

Citie with vnyghteousnesse. Shall not the LORD of hostes bynge thys to passe, that the labourers of the people shall be bynte with a great fyre, and that the thyng where vpon the people haue werped them selues, shall be loste: * For the earth shall be full of knowledge of the Lordes honoure, lyke as the waters that couer the sea.

Dwo vnto hym that geueth hys neighbour dryncke, to get hym wrath:
full displeasure for hys dronckenesse:
* That he maye see hys pryuyties.
Therefore wyth shame shalt thou be fylled, in steade of honoure. Dryncke thou also, tyll thou slomber wyth all:

For the cuppe of the Lordes ryghte hande shall compasse thee aboute, and shameful spewing in steade of thy wure shyppe. * for the wrong that thou hast done in Libanus, shall ouerwhelme the, and the wylde beastes shall make thee afrayed: because of mens bloude, and for the wronge done in the lande, in the citie, and vnto al suche as dwell therein.

What helpe then wyl the Image doe, whome the worckman hath fashioned: O the vayne caste Image, where in because the craftesman putteth hys trust, therfore maketh he domme Idols:
Wo vnto hym, that sayeth to a pe-

Stande vp. for what instruccion may suche one geue? Beholde, it is layed ou-also whome I haue scatered abroad, shall brynge me presentes beyonde the waters of Ethiopia.

C In that tyme shalte thou no moore be confounded, because of all thy yma-ginacions, wherthorowe thou haddest offended me: For* I wyll take awaye the proude boosters of thysie honoure trumphe because of my holye hyll. In the also wyll I leaue a smale poze simple people, whiche shal truste in y<sup>e</sup> name of the Lorde. The remnaunte of Israell shall doe no wyckednesse, nor speake lyes: Neither shal there any disceatful tongue be founde in their mouthes.

For they shal be fedde, and take theyr rest, and no man shal make them afrayed. Geue thanckes O doughter Syon, be ioyfull O Israel: Reioyce and be glad from thy whole hearte, O dought-er Jerusalem, for the Lorde hath taken awaye thy punishment, and turned backe thyne enemies. The kyng of Israell, euen the Lorde hym selfe is with the: so that thou nedest nomore to feare warde the: Yea, he reioyleth ouer thee with gladnesse: Suche as haue bene in heynesse, wyll I gather together, and take oute of thy congregacion: As for the shame and reproche that hath bene layed vpon thee, it shall be farre frome the. And lo, in that tyme wyll I destroye all those that were the: * I wyll helpe the lame, and gather by the caste awaye: yea, I wyll gette them prayse and honoure in all landes, where they haue bene put to shame. At the same tyme wyll I brynge you in, and at the same tyme wyll I gather you. I wyll get you a name & a good report among all people of the earthe, when I turne backe your captiuite before your eyes

Thus the glozy of the last house shalbe greater then the fyrst, sayeth the Lorde of hostes: and in this place wyll I geue peace, sayeth þe Lorde of hostes.

The. xxi. daye of the. ix. moneth in the secōde yeare of kinge Darius, came the

the

the woorde of the Lorde vnto the prophete Aggeus, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of hostes: Aske the priestes concerninge the lawe, & saye: *yf one beate holpe fleshe in his cote lappe, and wth his lappe do touche y<sup>e</sup> bread, potage, wine, oyle, or any other meate: shal he be holy also? The priestes answered and sayde: No. Then sayde Aggeus: now yf one beinge defyled with a deed carcase, touche anye of these: shal it also be vncleane? The priestes gaue answer and sayd: *yea, it shalbe vncleane. Then Aggeus answered and sayd: euē so is this people and this nacion before me, sayeth the Lorde: and so are all the worckes of their handes, yea, and all y<sup>e</sup> they offer, is vncleane.

And nowe (I praye you) consider fro this daye forth, and howe it hath gone with you afoze: or euer there was layd one stone vpon another in the temple of the Lorde: That when ye came to a corne heape of .xx. bushelles, there were scarce ten: *and that when ye came to y<sup>e</sup> wine presse for to powze oute .L. pottes of wine, there were scarce twēty. For I smote you with heate, blasting & hayle stones in al the laboures of youre handes: yet was there none of you, that woulde tourne vnto me, sayeth Lorde. Consider then from this day forth and afoze, namelye, frome the .xxiii. daye of the .ix. monethe, vnto the daye that the foundation of the Lordes temple was layed: Marke it well, *is not the sede yet in the barne: haue not the vines, the figtrees, the pomegranetes & oliue trees bene yet vnfruitful? But from thys day forth, I shal make the to prospere.

Moreover the .xxiii. day of the moneth came the woorde of the Lorde vnto Aggeus agayne, sayinge: Speake vnto zozobabell the prynce of Iuda, & saye: I wyll shake both heauen & earth, and ouerthrowe the seate of the kyngdomes, yea, and destroye the mightye kyngdome of the heathen. I wyll ouerthrowe the charettes, and those that sit vpon them, so that both horse and man shall fall downe, euery man thorow his neighboures swearde. And as for thee, Ozobabell (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) thou sonne of Salathiel my seruaunte: I wyll take thee (sayeth the

The booke of the prophete zachary.

The .i. Chapter.

The moueth the people to returne to y<sup>e</sup> Lorde, & to eschue the wickednes of their fathers. He presfigureth Christ and the Apostles.

In the eyght moneth of the seconde yeaere of king Darius, came the word of the Lorde vnto zachary the sonne of Barachias, the sōne of Addo, the prophete, sayinge: The Lorde hathe bene sore displeased at your fore fathers. And say thou vnto them: thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes. *Tourne you vnto me (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) & I wyl turne me vnto you, sayeth the Lord of hostes. *Be not ye like your fore fathers, vnto whome the prophetes cried afoze tyme, sayinge: thus sayeth y<sup>e</sup> Lorde God of hostes: *Turne you from your euell wayes, and from youre wicked ymaginaciōs. *But they wolde not heare, nor regarde me, sayeth the Lorde. What is nowe become of youre fore fathers and the prophetes? Are they yet styll alyue? But dyd not my wordes and statutes) whiche I comaūded by my seruauntes the prophetes) touche youre fathers? Upon this they gaue answer and sayde: lyke as the Lorde of hostes deutyfied to do vnto vs, accordinge to oure owne wayes and ymaginacions, euen so hathe he dealte with vs.

Upon the .xxiii. daye of the .xi. moneth whiche is the monethe Sebat, in the seconde yeaere of Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto zacharye the sonne of Barachias, the sonne of Addo the prophete, sayinge: I sawe by night, and lo, there satte one vpon a * reade horse, & stode styll amonge the myrre trees, y<sup>e</sup> were beneth vpon the grounde: and behynde hym were there reade, speckled, and whyte horses. sayd I: O my Lorde, what are these?

C And the aungell that talcked with me, said vnto me: I wyl shew y what these be. And the man that stode amonge the Myrre trees, answered and said: These are they, whom the Lorde hath sente to go thorow the worlde. And they answered the aungell of the Lorde, that stode among the Myrre trees, & sayde: We haue gone thorow the worlde: and beholde, al the world dwel at ease, and are carelesse.

Then the Lordes angel gaue answer, and sayde: O Lorde of hostes, howe longe wylt thou be vnniercyfull to Ierusalem, and to the cyties of Iuda, * with whom thou hast bene displeased nowe these. lxx. yeares. So y Lord gaue a louynge and a comfortable answer vnto the aungell that talcked with me. And the aungell that commoned with me, sayd vnto me: Crye thou, and speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: I am excedyng gelous ouer Ierusalem and Sion, and sore displeased at the carelesse heathen: for where as I was but a lytle angrey, they dyd theyr best that I myght destroye them. D Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: * I wyl turne me agayne in mercy toward Ierusalem, so that my house shall be builded in it, sayeth the Lorde of hostes: yea, and the plommet shall be layed abrode in Ierusalem, sayeth the Lord of hostes.

Crye also, and speake: thus sayeth the Lord of hostes: My cities shall be in good prosperite agayne, y Lord shall yet cofort Sion, and chose Ierusalem. Then lyfte I vp myne eyes and sawe, and beholde, foure * hoznes. And I said vnto the angell, that talketh with me: what be these? he answered me: * These are the hoznes, which haue scatted Iuda, Israel, and Ierusalem abroade. And the Lorde shewed me. iiii. carpen- ters. Then sayd I: what will these do? He answered, and sayde: Those are the hoznes, which haue so strowed Iuda abroade, that no man durst lyfte vp hys head: But these are come to fraye them awaye, and to cast out the hoznes of the Gentyles, whiche lyfte vp theyr hozne ouer the lande of Iuda, to scatte it abroade.

The. ii. Chapter.

The renewyng of Ierusalem and Iuda.

I Lyft vp myne eyes agayne, and looked: & behold, a * man w a measure line in his hande.

Then sayd I: whether goest thou? And he sayde vnto me: To measure Ierusalem, that I maye se howe long & how broade it is. And behold, the angell that talked with me, wente hys waye forth. Then went there oute another angell to mete him, and sayd vnto him: Runne, speake to this yong man, and saye: Ierusalem shall be inhabited wythout any wall, for the very multitude of people & catell, y shall be therein. * Yea, I my selfe (sayeth the Lord) wyl be vnto her a wal of fyre round about, and wyl be honoured in her.

O get you forth, O fle from the land of the north, sayeth the Lorde, y * who I haue scatted into the * foure wyndes vnder heauen, sayeth the Lorde. Saue thy selfe, O Syon: thou that dwellest with the doughter of Babilo, for thus sayth y Lord of hosts: With a glorious power hath he sent me out to the hethē, whiche spoiled you: for * who so touched you, shall touch y aple of his owne eye. Beholde, I wil lift vp my had ouer the, * so y they shall be spoiled of those, which afore serued the: and ye shall knowe, that the LORDE of hostes hath sente me.

Be glad, & reioyce, O doughter of Sion, for loe, I * am come to dwell in the myddest of the, sayeth the Lord. At the same tyme there shall manye hea- then cleue to the Lorde, and shall be my people. Thus wyl I dwell in the myddest of the, & thou shalt knowe, that the Lord of hostes hath sent me vnto the. The Lorde shall haue Iuda in possessio for his parte in the holy grounde, and shall chose Ierusalem yet agayne. * Let all fleshe be styll before the Lord, for he is rylen out of his holy place.

4. Reg. 25. in the * fyfte moneth, and abstepne, as I haue done nowe certayne yeares.
Then came the worde of the Lorde of hostes vnto me, sayinge: Speake vnto all the people of the lande, and to the p̄iestes, and saye: when ye fasted and mourned in the. v. * and. vii. moneth (now thys. lxx. yeares) dyd ye fast vnto me? When ye ate also and dronke, dyd ye not eate and dryncke for your owne selues? Are not these the wordes, which the Lord spake by his prophetes afore tyme, when Ierusalem was yet inhabited and welthye, she and the cyties rounde aboute her: when there dwelte men, both toward the south and in the playne countreys?

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto zachary, sayinge: Thus saith the Lorde of hostes: * Execute true iudge-ment: shewe mercy and louynge kyndnesse, euery man to his brother. Do the wyddowe, the fatherlesse, the straū-ger, and poore no wronge: and let no man ymagen euell agaynst his brother in his hert. * Neuertheles they woulde not take hede, but turned their backes, and stopped their eares, that they shoulde not heare: yea, they made theyr hertes as an Adamant stone lest they shoulde heare the lawe and wor-des, * whiche the Lorde of hostes sent in his holye spzite by the Prophetes afore tyme.

Wherefore the Lorde of hostes was very wroth at theym. And thus is it come to passe, * that lyke as he spake and they would not heare: euen so they cryed, and I would not heare (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) but scattered theim amonge all the Gentyles, whom they knewe not. Thus the lande was made so desolate, that there trauelyed no mā in it, neyther to nor fro, for that pleasaunt lande was vitterly layed wast.

The. liii. Chapter.

Of the returne of the people vnto Ierusalem, & of the mercy of god toward the. Of good workes. The calling of the Gentyles.

So the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: I was in a great gelously ouer Syon, yea, I haue bene very gelous ouer her in a great displeasure, thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: I wyl turne me agayne vnto Sion, & wyl dwell in the myddest of Ierusalem: * so that Ierusalem shalbe called a faithful & true citie, the hil of the Lord of hostes, yea, an holy hyll.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes:
There shal yet olde men & women dwell agayne in the stretes of Ierusalem: yea, and such as go with stauies in their hādes for very age. The stretes of the citye also shalbe full of yonge boyes and damselles, playnge vpon the stretes.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: B yf the resydue of this people thyncke it to be * vnpossyble in these dayes, shoulde it therfore be vnpossyble in my syght, sayeth the Lorde of hostes: Thus sayeth the LORD of hostes: Behold, I wyl delyuer my people from y land of the east and weste, and wyl brynge theym agayne: that they may dwell at Ierusalem. * They shal be my people, and I wyl be their God, in trueth and ryghtuousnes. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: let your handes be stronge, ye that now heare these wordes by the mouth of the Prophetes whiche be in these dayes, that the foundacion is laieed vpon the Lorde of hostes house, that the temple may be buylded. For why?
* before these daies, nether men nor castell coulde wyne any thyng, neyther myght any man come in & oute in rest for trouble: but I let euery manne go agaynst his neyghboure.

Neuerthelesse I wyl nowe intreate the residue of this people nomore as a fore tyme, sayeth the Lorde of hostes, * but they shalbe a sede of peace. The bynarde shal geue her frute, y ground shal geue her increase, and the heuens shal geue theyr dewe: and I shal cause the remnaunte of this people, to haue all these in possession. And it shal come to passe, that lyke as ye were a curse among the heathen (O ye house of Juda & ye house of Israel) Euen so wyl I delyuer you, that ye shal be a bles-syng: feare not, but let your handes be stronge.

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes:
lyke as I dewyld to punyssh you, what tyme as your fathers prouoked me vnto wrath, sayeth the LORD of

of hostes, and spared not. Euen so am I determed nowe in these dayes, for to do wel vnto the house of Iuda & Ieru salem, therfore feare ye not. Nowe the thynges that ye shall do, are these:

* Speake euerie man the trueth vnto hys neyghboure, execute iudgemente truely, and peaceably within your por tes, none of you imagine euell in hys heart agaynste his neyghboure, & loue no false othes: for al these are the thin ges that I hate, sayeth the Lorde. And the worde of the LORDE of hostes, came vnto me, sayinge: thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: The faste of the. iiii. moneth, the fast of the fyfth, the fast of the seuenth, and the faste of the tenth, shall be ioye and gladnesse, and pro peace.

D Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: There shall yet come people, and the in habiters of many cyties: and they that dwell in one cytie, shall go to another, sayinge: * Up, let vs go, and praye be fore the Lorde, let vs seke the Lord of hostes, I wyll go with you: yea, much people and mightie heathen shall come and seke the Lorde of hostes at Ieru salem, and to praye before the Lorde.
Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: In that tyme shall ten men (out of al maner of languages of the Gentiles) take one

saye: we will go wyth you, for we haue

The sothsayers se lyes, & tel but vaine dreames: the comfort that they geue, is nothing worth. Therefore go they astraye like a flocke of shepe, & are troubled, because they haue no shepherd.

En. xiii. c.

By wrothful displeasure is moued at the shepherdes, and I wyll vset the goates. For the Lorde of hostes wyll graciously vset his flocke, the house of Iuda, and holde them as a goodlye fayre hore in the batell. * Oute of Iuda shall come the helmet, * the nayle, the batelbowe, and al yf princes together. They shall be as the giauntes, whiche in the batel treade downe the myre vpon the stretes. They shall fyght, for the Lorde shall be with them, so that the hore men shall be confounded.

I wyll comforte the house of Iuda, and preserue the house of Ioseph. I wyll turne them also, for I pitie them: and they shall be lyke as they were, whē I had not caste them of. For I the Lorde am they: GOD, and wyll heare them. Ephraim shall be as a gyaunte, and their hert shall be cherefull as thowtome wyne: yea, theyr chyldren shall se it, and be glad, and their herte shall reioyce in the Lorde. I wyll blowe for them and gather them together, for I wyll redeme them. They shall encrease, as they increased afore. I wyll sowe them among the people, that they may thyncke vpon me in farre countreys: they shall lyue with their chyldren, and turne agayne. I wyll brynge them agayne also from the lande of Egypte, & gather them out of Assyria. I wyll cary them into the land of Silead and to Libanus, and they shall want nothyng. He shall go vpon the sea of trouble, and smyte the sea waues: so shall all the depe floudes shall be dreyed vp. The proude hostynge of Assur shall be caste downe, and the scepter of * Egypt shall be taken awaye. I wyll comforte them in the Lorde, & they may walcke in his name, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ The .xi. Chapter.

The destruction of the temple. The care of the fapthful is committed to Christ, by the father. A greuous vylion agaynst Jerusalem and Iuda.

Den thy dozes, O Libanus, & the fyre maye consume thy Cedre trees. Howle ye fyre trees, for the Cedre is fallen, yea, all the proude are wasted awaye. Howle (O ye oke trees of Baalan) for the myghty strong wode is cut downe. Men may heare the shepherdes mourne, for their gloze is destroyed. Men maye heare the Lyons whelpes roare for the pyrd of Iordane is wasted awaye.

Thus sayeth the Lorde my God: fede the shepe of the slaughter, which shall be slayne of those that possesse the: yet they take it for no synne, but they that sell them, saye: The Lorde be thanked, I am riche: yea, their owne shepherdes spare them not. Therefore wyll I no more spare those that dwell in the lande (sayeth the Lorde) but lo, I wyll delpyer the people, euery man into his neyghbours hande, and into the hāde of his kynge: that they maye smyte the lande, and out of their handes wyll not I delpyer them.

I my selfe fedde the slaughter shepe (a poore flocke verely) & toke vnto me two stauces: the one I called lounge mekenes, the other I called wo, and so I kept the shepe. Thre shepherdes destroyed I in one moneth, for I mighte not away with them, neyther had they anye delpte in me. Then sayd I: I wyll fede you no more, * the thinge that dyeth, let it dye: & that wyll perishe, let it perishe, and let the remnaūt eate, euery one the fleshe of his neyghbour. I toke also my lounge meke stafe, and brake it,

C Then the poore simple shepe that had a respecte vnto me, knew therby, that it was the worde of the Lord. And I said vnto them: yf ye thincke it good, bynge hyther my pryce: yf no, then leaue. * So they wayed downe. xxx. syluer pengs, the value that I was pryed at. And the Lord sayde vnto me: caste it vnto the pottet (a goodly pryce for me to be valued at of them) and I toke the. xxx. syluer pengs, and caste them to the pottet in the house of the Lord. Then brake I my othet stat also (namely wo) that I might losse the brotherheade betwixte Juda and Israell. And the Lord sayde vnto me: Take to the also the stafe of a foolish shepherde: for lo, I wyll rayse vp a shepherde in the lande, whiche shall not seke after the thynges that be losse, nor care for suche as go a straye: he shall not heale the wounded, he shall not noyse the the thyng that is whole: but he shall eate the fleshe of suche as be fat, & teare theyr clawes in peces.

¶ The .xii. Chapter.

Of the destruction and buyldinge agayne of Jerusalem.

A In the heuy burthen whiche the Lord hath deuyled for Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord, * which spred the heauens abzode, laid the foundacyon of the earthe, * and geueth man the breathe of lyfe: Beholde, I wyll make Jerusalem a cuppe of surfet, vnto all the people y are rounde about her: * Yea, Juda him selfe also shall be in the sege agaynst Jerusalem. At the same tyme wyl I make Jerusalem an heuy stonne for al people, so that al such as lyft it vp, shall be tozne and rente, and al the people of the earth shall be gathered together agaynst it.

B * In that day, sayth the Lord, I wil make al horses abashed, and those that ryde vpon them, to be out of their wytes. I wyll open myne eyes vpon the house of Juda; and smyte all the horses of the people with blyndnesse. And the prynces of Juda shall saye in theyr heretes: The inhabytters of Jerusalem shall geue me consolacion in the Worde of horses their God. * In that tyme wyl I make the prynces of Juda lyke an hote burninge ouen with wood, and lyke a cresset of fyre among the strawe: so that they shall consume all the people round aboute them, both vpon the ryght hand and the lefte. Jerusalem also shall be inhabytet agayne: namely, in p same place where Jerusalem standeth.

C The Lord shall preferue the tentes of Juda lyke as afore tyme: so that the glory of the house of Dauid and the glory of the cytelins of Jerusalem, shall be but lytle regarded, in comparison of the glory of Juda. In that daye shall the Lord defende the cytelins of Jerusalem: so that the weakest then amonge them shall be as * Dauid: and the house of Dauid shall be like as Goddes house, and as the Kingell of the Lord before them.

At the same tyme wyl I go aboute to destroye all suche people as come agaynst Jerusalem. Moreover, vpon the house of Dauid and vpon the cytelins of Jerusalem, * wyl I poure out the spirite of grace and prayer, so that they shall loke vpon me, whome they haue peatfled: and they shall bewepe hym, as menne mourne for theyr onely begotten sonne: yea, and be soze for him, as men are soze for their fyrst chyld.

* Then shall there be a greate mourninge at Jerusalem, * lyke as the lamentacyon at Adzeimnon in the felde of Maggadon. And the land shall bewaile euery kynted by them selues: the kynted of the house of Dauid them selues alone, and their wyues by them selues: The kynted of the house of * Dauid than them selues alone, and theyr wyues by them selues: The kynted of the house of Leui them selues alone, & their wyues by them selues: The kynted of the house of Semei them selues alone, and theyr wyues by them selues: In lyke maner, al the other generacions, euerichone by them selues alone, & their wyues by them selues.

that the cyte shalbe wonne, the houses spoyled, and the women despyled. The halfe of the cyte shal go away into cap-not be carryed out of the cyte. After that shall the Lorde goo forth to fyghte a-

In that daye shall the Lorde make a great sedycion among them, so that one man shall take another by the hand, and laye his handes vpon the handes of his neyghboure. * Juda shall fyght also agaynst Jerusalem, and the goodes of al the heathen shall be gathered together rounde about: golde and syluer and a very great multitude of clothes. And so shall this plage go ouer horses, mules, camels, asses, and all the beastes that shall be in the host, lyke as yonder plage was. Euery one that remaineth then of al the people, which cam against Jerusalem, shall go vpp yearly, to worshyppe the kyng(euen the Lorde of hostes) * to kepe the feaste of tabernacles. And loke what generacyon vpon earthe goeth not vp to Jerusalem, for to worshyp the kyng(euen the Lord of hostes) vpon the same shall come no rayne. If the kyntred of Egypte go not vp, and come not, it shall not rayne vpon them neither.

D This shall be the plage wherewith the Lord wyl smyte all heathen, that come not vp to kepe the feast of tabernacles, yea, this shall be the synne plage of Egypte and the synne plage of al people, that goo not vp to kepe the feaste of tabernacles.

At that tyme shall the rydyng(euen geer of the horses be holpe vnto the Lorde, & the kettels in the Lordes house shall be lyke the basens befoze the aulter: yea, al the kettelles in Jerusalem and Juda, shall be holpe vnto the Lorde of hostes: and all they that haue offerynges, shall come take of them, and dyghte them therein. And at that tyme there shall be no mo Cananites in the house of the Lorde.

A complaynt agaynst Israel and her preestes.

In heuyn burchen, whiche the Lorde sheweth agaynst Israel by Malachy. I haue loued you, saith the Lorde: and yet ye say: wherein hast thou loued vs

* Was not Elau Jacobs brother, sayth the Lorde: * yet haue I loued Jacob, and hated Elau: yea, I haue made hys hylles waste, and his heritage wildernesse for dragons. And thoughe Edom sayde: well, we are destroyed, we wyl go buylde vp agayne the places that bee wasted: yet (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) * what they buylde, I brake I downe, so that it was called a cursed land, and a people, whome the Lorde hathe euer bene angrie withall.

B Your eyes haue sene it, and ye your selues muste confesse, that the Lorde hathe broughte the lande of Israel to great honour. * Should not a sonne honour his father, & a seruaunt his master: * If I bee nowe a father, wher is mine honour: If I be the Lord, wher am I feared: sayth the Lorde of hostes.

Now to you preestes, that despyse my name. And yf ye saye: wherin haue we despyed thy name: In this, that ye offer vncleane breade vpon myne aulter. And yf ye wyl say: wherin haue we offered anye vncleane thinge vnto the: In this that ye saye: the aulter of the Lord is not to bee regarded. If ye offre the blynde, is not that euell: And yf ye offre the lame & sicke, is not that euell: * Yea, offre it vnto thy prince, shall he be content with thee, or accepte thy personne, sayth the Lorde of hostes.

And nowe make youre prayer befoze God, that he maye haue mercey vpon vs: for suche thynges haue ye done. Shall he regard your personnes, thinke ye, sayth the Lord of hostes: Yea, what is he amonge you, that wyl do so much as to shut the doores, or to kyndle the fyze vpon myne aulter for nought: * I haue no pleasure in you, sayth the Lord of hostes: * and as for the meatoffringe, I wyl not accepte it at youre hande. * for from the ryfynge vp of the sunne vnto the goynge downe of the same, my name name is greate amonge the Gentylls: yea, in euerye place shall there sacrifice be done, and a cleane meatofferinge offered by vnto my name: for my name is greate amonge the heathen, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. But ye haue bishalowed it; in that ye saye, the aulter of the Lorde is not to bee regarded, and the thinge that is set ther vpon, not worthy to be eaten.

Now saye ye: It is but labour and trauayle, and thus haue ye thoughte scoorne at it (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) offeringe robbery, yea, the lame and the spycke. Ye haue brought me in a meatofferinge, shoulde I accepte it of youre hande, sayeth the Lorde. Cursed be the dissembler, which hath in his flocke one that is male, and whē he maketh a bow offereth a spotted one vnto the Lorde. For I am a great kyng (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) and my name is fearefull amonge the heathen.

The .ii. Chapter.

Threatenynge against the whoredoms and seducers of the people.

And now (O ye preestes) this commaundement toucheth you: yf ye wyll not heare it, nor regarde it, to geue the glory vnto my name, sayeth the Lorde of hostes, * I wyll sende a curse vpon you, and wil curse your blessings: yea, curse them wel. If ye do not take hede, Beholde, I shall corrupte youre seede, & cast downe in your faces: euen the dong of youre solempne feastes, and it shall cleue fast vpon you. And ye shall know, that I haue sent this commaundement vnto you: that my couenaunt which I made with Leuy, might stand sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

B I made a couenaunte of lyfe & peace with him: this I gaue him, that he myght stande in awe of me: and so he did feare me, and had my name in reuerence. The lawe of truthe was in his mouth, and there was no wickednesse founde in his lippes. He walked with me in peace and quite, and dyd turne manye one awaye frome theyr synnes. * For in the priestes lippes shoulde be sure knowledge that me may seke the law at his mouth, for he is a messaunger of the Lorde of hostes. But as for you, ye are gone cleane oute of the waye, and haue caused the multitude to be offended at the law: * ye haue broken the couenaunte of Leui, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. Therefore wyll I also make you to bee despyled, & to bee of no reputacion amonge all the people: because ye haue not kepte my wayes, but bene parcial in the law.

* Haue we not all one father? Hathe not one God made vs? * why doth euery one of vs the despyse his owne brother, and so breake the couenaunt of our fathers? Nowe hath Iuda offended: yea, the abhominacyon is done in Istraell and in Ierusalem, * for Iuda hath defiled the Sanctuary of the Lorde, which he loued, and hathe kepte the doughter of a straunge God. But the Lorde shall destroye the manne that doth this (yea, bothe the master and the scolar) oute of the tabernacle of Iacob, with hym that offereth by meatofferinge vnto the Lorde of hostes. Nowe haue ye brought it to this poynte agayne, that the aulter of the Lorde is couered with teares wepyng and mouenyng: so that I wyll nomore regarde the meatofferinge, ne thet wyll I receaue or accepte any thing at youre handes. And yet ye saye: wherfore? Euen because that where as the Lorde made a couenaunt betwixte thee and the wife of thy yowthe, thou hast despyled her: * Yet is she thyne one companyon and married wyfe.

So dyd not the one, and yet had he an excellent spirite. What dyd then the one? He soughte the sede promysed of God. Therefore loke well to youre spirite, and let no man despyse the wyfe of his yowthe. If thou hatest her * put her awaye, sayeth the Lorde God of Istraell and geue her a clothynge for the scoorne sayeth the Lorde of hostes. Loke well then to youre spirite, and despyse her not. Ye geue the Lorde with your wordes, and yet ye saye: wherewith all haue we greued hym? In this, that ye saye: All that do euell are good in the syghte of God, & such please hym. Or els wher
